

HOME RULE BILL FOR IRELAND TO FAIL IN RESULTS

Peace Will Not Come With New Measure Is Belief of British Press.

LONDON, Nov. 12.—Many newspapers united today in the opinion that the Irish Home Rule bill, which was passed by the House of Commons last night, Premier Lloyd George made an impassioned plea in the House just before the final vote was taken on the home rule bill.

"I implore Ireland to remain within the empire which she has helped to build and adorn," said the Premier. The Premier outlined three "unfavorable conditions" of the government:

1. That Ireland should not become an independent state.
2. That Ireland should not weaken the strategy of defense of the United Kingdom by depriving the English government of complete control of the Irish harbors.
3. That south and central Ireland should not coerce Ulster (the anti-home rule district).

CHIEF FEATURES OF NEW MEASURE.

The chief features of the new home rule law, which supplants the home rule bill passed at the outbreak of the war, follow:

Two Legislatures shall be established, one for north Ireland and the other for south Ireland; the people of the six Ulster counties shall not be brought administratively under any outside Parliament in Ireland.

Will not bring peace to Ireland.

"Premier Lloyd George dissembles his love with such notorious persistency that his professions of good will carry no more weight than a Russian rouble, and now he offers a piece of legislation (the home rule bill), which is impudent in its facility," said the Daily News, a newspaper owned by Lord Northcliffe.

The newspaper added: "Nobody believes the measure will work out and nobody wants it."

"NOT WANTED" IN ANY QUARTER.

"The bill is not wanted in any quarter," said the Morning Post. "It will maintain no tenable position between union of the empire and separation by Ireland. It is an experiment."

Some of the newspapers termed the new home rule law an armistice between England and Ireland. Only three of the morning newspapers commented upon the passage of the bill.

The Times, in addition to its comment, printed a statement by Cardinal Bourne, Cardinal Bourne reveals that in 1919

Prefers Jail Term to Paying Wife $1

NEW YORK, Nov. 12.—Rocco Giacana, ordered to pay back all money, was arrested for burglary two hours later. He said he had rather be in Sing Sing than pay his ex-wife $1 a week, according to the police.

He urged the Duke of Norfolk to support the widest self-government for Ireland, Wales and Scotland. He said he was convinced that the majority of the people would accept self-government for Ireland, Wales and Scotland if there were provisos for the maintenance of the crown and safeguards for the essential defenses of the empire. The Cardinal further expressed the belief that most Englishmen view the maintenance of vast numbers of troops in Ireland as a shame and desire their withdrawal, but at the same time he pointed out that evidently a secret oath bound "the society that was using assassination for its weapon."

"I am assured the Sinn Fein disclaims all connection with this society and that Sinn Feiners are unable to control the army all its aims and deeds," wrote the Cardinal. "But at the present time the Sinn Feiners are unable to control the murder hand."

The Archbishop of Tuam was quoted as saying that the black and tan police had instituted a reign of frightfulness in the region of Tuam, adding: "If servants of the Crown were now to reciprocate the people's longing for peace it would be possible to establish peace at once. But the first move must come from the government."

The Times supported this contention. The newspaper charged the government with engaging in an effort to scourge Ireland into obedience. The Archbishop of Tuam is more likely to be better informed on Irish matters than any member of the Cabinet," the Times said.

"Former Premier Asquith urged only yesterday that a concerted effort be made toward peace," continued the Times. "We hope that his earnest words were not spoken in vain. The only other alternative is for the government to outrun the tolerance of the British people."
