FINDS HEAD OF MAN BURIED IN SAFE ASH PILE

Chicago Workman Uncovers What Police Call Mystery of Year.

BODY STILL IS MISSING

CHICAGO, Nov. 13.—The head of a man found buried beneath a ton of cinders in the rear of the once notorious De Luxe cafe, Harrison street and Wash-ash avenue, late Friday, today presented to the police what they say will develop into one of the greatest crime mysteries of the year.

The discovery was made by John Darbin, fireman for the Hotel Alpin, 27 East Harrison street, who was removing the ashes. The head was found directly in front of the door from which the ashes of the cafe were discharged last spring.

The head had been decapitated just below the chin. It was well preserved, though the police believe it had been buried in the cinders since last spring.

BULLET HAD PIERCED HEAD.

A bullet had pierced the right forehead and two teeth from the upper row were missing. A mass of long brown hair, dark covered the top and rear of the head.

According to the police, the head was that of an American about 42 years of age.

A pair of old shoes wrapped in a hat sack and smeared with blood was found within two feet of the door to the cafe. The shoes were found by the police when they were digging at the pile of cinders from the South Clark street station, under the command of Lieutenant Thomas C. Wolfe and the homicide squad went to the scene. Several policemen were put to work digging away the pile of cinders.

After an hour's work the entire pile was removed. Nothing but the skull and the shoes had been discovered. There was no clue.

SEARCH PASSAGES UNDERGROUND.

Then the police commenced a systematic and thorough search of the countless subterranean passages in the basement of the hotel and the cafe. A mass of passageways leading into countless cubby holes, coal chutes, and hidden closets were searched without discovery of clues.

The place where the head was found was described by the police as an ideal place. In the alley entrance of the hotel and the cafe are the heating plants. A stairway about ten feet in height leads

DOG HILL PARAGRAPHS

A stray mule has been left standing nearly all day in front of the postoffice. Slim Pickens took down several of the older ones at the Rye Straw store this morning by asking them if they knew how a person looked when he was asleep. Of course nobody could answer the riddle, and then Slim up and told them that a person could not look at all when he was asleep. Next thing anybody knows Slim will be trying to teach the Wild Onion school.

Raz Barlow has asked his friends and acquaintances who eat quail to please save the shot for him.

up from both doors. The cinders from the hotel furnace are thrown through a hole in the wall. The hole measures about two feet in diameter.

The cinders were completely filled with cinders, making the top almost level with the ground. The cinders, the last of them deposited there last spring, have not been touched for more than six months.

WORKMAN'S SHOVEL STRIKES HEAD.

Darbin said he started to clear out the stairway and make room for this morning's refuse. He shoveled away about two feet in diameter.

At quitting time last night he shoveled struck the head. It was three feet in front of the door of the cafe, and had been covered with five feet of cinders. The man was a labor leader.

1. That he was killed by a wealthy doctor in a row over a woman. The doctor contended that the neck of the man had been cut by a surgeon. It was a sharp, straight cut, and could not have been done with an ordinary knife.

2. That the man was a labor leader.

3. That he was killed in an attempted holdup.

It is the general belief of the police that whoever disposed of the head and the remainder of the body was familiar with surgery.

CHUCK HOLES CHUCKED OUT

Ohio, Between Delaware and Alabama Being Repaired.

Ohio street between Alabama and Delaware street, ordinarily known as Charlie's champion chuck-hole territory, will be the terror of Indianapolis motorists no longer, for a while. The worst of Ohio street's deep sea holes and mountainous rolls are being eliminated by a large force of workmen under A. O. Meloy, street commissioner.

For months citizens have protested to the city administrator about the condition of the block without avail. Once in a while the street commissioner would have a few shovelfuls of broken asphalt or gravel thrown in the deepest holes, but the heavy traffic soon gouged the sinks deeper.

The street commissioner is having the holes patched with asphalt as a makeshift until the street can be resurfaced. It is down on the improvement program for resurfacing early next spring, it was announced.

Efforts to have the stretch paved this summer, led primarily by members of the city council, failed because of the opposition of Mayor Jewett.

BOLSHEVISTS NEAR TRIUMPH

Wrangel's Army Reported Ousted From Sebastopol.

LONDON, Nov. 13.—The forces of General Baron von Wrangel, anti-Bolshevik leader in Crimea, have evacuated Sebastopol, says a delayed dispatch from Constantinople, dated Thursday.

The above dispatch, if authentic, confirms cable advices that have come from various sources during the last few days to the effect that General von Wrangel's army is in a serious plight. All indications are that the Bolshevik forces are within reach of the greatest military triumph since they drove the Polish legions back behind the gates of Warsaw. Unless they are stopped in the eleventh hour, as they were in front of the Polish capital, their reconquest of the Crimea and the consequent surrender or extermination of their most formidable foe seem inevitable.

Even in the most precarious days of the Polish campaign, General Wrangel's army was the most powerful and most dangerous thorn in the side of the soviet republic. Wrangel had throughout enjoyed the full moral backing and confidence of the allied governments. Moreover, the reactionary and anti-Bolshevik elements throughout the Muscovite territories had come to look upon Wrangel as the potential wrecker of the soviet republic and restorer of the old order.

Immediately after the armistice with Poland, Trotsky proclaimed to the world that now Wrangel's turn was coming and the soviet war chief lost no time taking measures to carry out this threat. Ever fresh masses of Bolshevik troops were transferred from the western to the southern front, and presently on Wrangel's army has been growing stronger daily, until this week when Trotsky's legions began to cross the ice-covered Putrid River and to pour into the Crimean peninsula, smashing straight ahead for Wrangel's last line of defense. Since then dispatches from the allied capitals regarding Wrangel's fate have grown more and more pessimistic.

In London the terrible battle for the Crimea is being watched with comparative equanimity, but Paris dispatches have reflected grave alarm, for Wrangel is the particular protégé of the French. Upon him the French have placed their hopes for recovery of the millions borrowed from France by the Czarist regime.
