

SAYS INDIA ART RIVALS GREEK

Speaker Gives Illustrated Lecture at Caleb Mills Hall.

"While we put in years in study of the art of Greece and Italy we do not realize that India has just as great natural and architectural beauty," declared Walter F. Perry of Brooklyn, in an address on "India and Its Art" at Caleb Mills hall. Mr. Perry was to make an address on "Art in the Home" this afternoon. He is speaking under the joint auspices of the Indianapolis public schools and the drama league. Both lectures are illustrated.

Mr. Perry showed a number of views of the temples in India which he declares equal to those of ancient Greece. He pointed out that the people of India are more religious than the Christian people. "Where we say 'thou shalt not kill,' meaning human life, they say 'thou shalt not kill anything,' either human or animal life. Hence, when they enter the temples they cover their faces in order that they may not breathe an insect thus taking its life. They also inflict on themselves all manner of punishment," Mr. Perry explained the curious belief of the natives that after life has passed from the body it is unclear and will contaminate any person who touches it.

Mr. Perry discussed the people of India according to their religion, dividing them into three classes; namely, Buddhists, Mohammedans, Hindus.

"We do not give them credit for striving toward the truth which they should by all rights have," he declared, "for they are trying as best they can and trying as no other nation has ever tried to see the light. And so it is that each of these teachers of religion felt called on to interpret what he felt to be the one divine power."

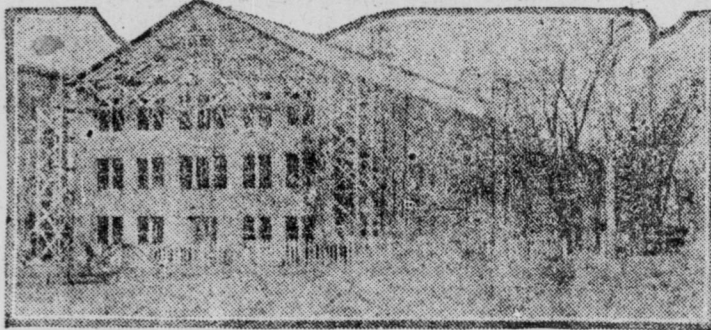

Mr. Perry illustrated native customs. He showed the way in which earthen jars were made; how public barber shops were conducted and how the stores were operated.

"The curse of India is and has been for centuries the class distinction," he declared, "and the English are encouraging the natives to travel as much as possible in order to mitigate this."

He said literacy in the country is very extensive.

"The man who can read and write or who has a wife who can justly proud of his accomplishment," he declared.

Tech Addition Makes Showing

NEW ACADEMIC BUILDING.

Built with a view to conforming with the general building plan that is proposed for the Technical High School, and which is as complete in its details as a comprehensive city planning scheme, the academic building, on the Technical High School grounds, is nearing completion as far as its bare exterior is concerned, and is to be entirely completed and ready for school use at the beginning of the September term, 1921.

It is 440 feet by 63 feet and three stories in height, with an attic in addition. On the first floor there will be a department devoted to household management, and hospital demonstration, including rest rooms and first-aid rooms; a department devoted to applied design, applied arts, commercial arts and costumes; a department devoted to decorative arts, which will include a bedroom and bathroom illustrative of what can be done in the decorative arts, and the departmental office and girls' locker room.

On the second floor will be four recitation rooms, a big study hall, a physiography laboratory, two biology laboratories with a lecture room between them, and administrative offices, opposite the commercial department, which will be furnished with complete commercial equipment.

Two big study halls, fourteen recitation rooms and teachers' rooms will be on the third floor.

There will be six sets of stairs in the building, and two fire escapes, and on each floor there will be locker rooms.

The building has brick exterior walls and the interior skeleton construction is of steel and concrete.

Vonnegut, Bohn & Mueller are the architects.

Toyland Opens!

And a wonderfully glorious place it is! It gleams and glitters and sparkles with thousands of things that make Christmas for the children. And with the formal opening of Toyland we have combined a Toy Sale. Choose your toys now, make a small payment down and the final payment just before Christmas, when they will be delivered. The following list is necessarily incomplete, but it gives you an idea of the offerings represented.

Toys at Very Special Reductions

"Art Craft" Dolls

Little dimpled dollies that look so alive you'd think they'd squeal if you tickled them. And their eyes open and close—great big eyes. Some have wonderful curls and others have their hair clipped.

Stuffed Animals

The pudgy plush dog in the picture has floppy brown ears, and he looks up with wistful brown eyes and says, "Pet me, please." And some one who must have thought lots of him has tied a red ribbon under his chin. And there are other animals, too—a regular menagerie—some of them big and strong enough for little ones to ride on. Priced $1.29 to $13.00, less 15 per cent.

Soldier Sets

These little metal men will be but slightly battered after they've won a bloody battle. Can't you imagine how thrilling it will be for the boy to line up the marines pictured to the left, set the cannons in firing position and station an officer at the knoll? This set, regularly $2.50, sale price, $2.22.
