

GRIM PARTY MOVES LIVELY

ary Club Puts on Regular Entertainment.

There wasn't a dull moment at the grim party given by the Indianapolis City Club, last night in the Riley room at the Claypool hotel, from the moment the guests passed through the ornate entrance, decorated to resemble a setting house of the Pilgrim days, to the last moment of the last dance.

One of the first entertaining features is the appearance of Frank E. Floyd, president of the club; Ralph H. Edger, secretary, and Roy Sahm, treasurer, who wore stocky not the kind worn out the neck, but the kind worn about the neck, in the good old days, by way of punishment.

They had merely been accused of fraud the recent Rotary Club election because they had had no opposition in their race, and stocks had been piled for them. Special permission for their release was soon obtained, however, from Judge James A. Collins, who was supposed to have "sentenced" them, then the party proceeded.

A proclamation, in which many things were explained, was read by Floyd, and a brief talk—a "Pilgrim Message"—was given by Dick Miller, who praised the pilgrims, what they had accomplished, and who said the spirit of their teaching still lives.

Other entertaining features of the evening were the songs by the Rotary Glee club, the performance of Bert Servais, magician, a number of prizes that were presented, and the dance by the light of big "harvest moon."

5,000 CITY TREES RUINED BY BUGS

Indianapolis Pays Heavy Toll in Year to Insects.

Approximately 5,000 shade trees in Indianapolis were killed by scale insects during the last year, according to a statement issued by G. E. Morgan, head of the special service of the city park department today. Unless steps are taken to check the ravages of tree parasites the city will eventually lose most of its trees, he said, for far less than the number killed were planted.

Of the trees killed 75 per cent were destroyed by the San Jose and Oyster Shell scales. Action of the San Jose variety and methods for its eradication were explained by Mr. Morgan's statement, which is as follows:

Indianapolis is losing yearly several thousand shade trees; this loss is due largely to the pest of the city park owners in that the general condition of the trees is not noticed until it is either too late or that the specimen has reached a stage of deterioration that is too far gone to permit of its being brought back to normal health and worth means a systematic and constant procedure of control measures such as the average property owner is loath to follow.

If the city is to retain its present crop of trees and protect and maintain young ones set in the fall and spring, the department today will have to realize the fact that to set an individual is one thing and of less importance to care for it another. It is a well known fact that the best diseases gain entrance to the tree by means of the bark, usually as the result of the attack of some insect pest.

One of the most serious insect pests is the scale, which is the death of a number of our trees is the San Jose scale, a trunk, limbs and branches of a tree infested with this pest have a characteristic gray, ashy appearance. Inequality, the full grown female scale, flat, circular, about one-twelfth of an inch in diameter and with a slightly raised central area or nipple, which is dark or black. The male scale is smaller than the female, is about twice as long as broad and is black in color.

The young insects are minute, bright yellow, louse-like creatures, which the host part are born alive, though occasionally the mother expels them with a sticky, sac-like membrane which is soon taken open, allowing the insects to emerge. This insect winters in a partly hibernated condition, beneath the shelter of a round scale cover, which at that time is coal black. Growth continues, and the scales mature, and the females, mate and lay eggs.

By late June the crawling young insects begin to appear. They settle down, and their hairlike, needle-shaped legs, to the host and begin to imbibe the sap. The scale covering is then formed, the pure white, later turning black. There are several broods per season.

The hundred of thousands of these sucking scale insects of a badly infested plant rob it of its juices and literally drain it up, ultimately resulting in death. With most insects it is not until the tree is noted upon cutting into the bark, that immediately under the scales the lighter colored parts of the host show a red discoloration.

To control this pest, an application of kerosene emulsion diluted with water of miscible oil diluted one to ten with water should be given while the trees are dormant and as long as the weather remains above freezing. Thoroughness of application is the prime essential, as only those that are hit are the ones controlled.

The scale attacks all trees with equal fondness. The best way to keep it in check is to get it on its first appearance and before serious infestation occurs. A tree badly struck will show a general declining condition, the leaves withering and the specimen ultimately dying completely.

Those citizens desiring instructions and advice are urged to consult the Special Service, Department of Public Parks, who will make inspection for this or any other pest free of charge, also suggestions for the beautification will be given on request.

First Man to Wear His Hat in Court

SAN FRANCISCO, Nov. 24.—For the first time in history a man has broken the ancient and worn his hat during court in a local courtroom.

The man was A. Singh, Hindu witness. Singh came into the courtroom with the customary turban set jauntily on his head. The bailiff ordered the Hindu to remove the covering. Terror-stricken, the Hindu started to flee the courtroom.

"It's against his religion to remove his turban," his attorney explained to the court. Singh was called back and sat through the trial with his turban in its dainty place.

Spirits of Nitre Used for 'Hooch'

NEW YORK, Nov. 24.—Here's a new one. A local devotee at the shrine of the "old-time" history visited a drug store. He asked for a quart of spirits of nitre, explaining he had "nine children, all ill with kidney trouble."

It developed that, through a simple process, the purchaser removed the nitre giving a concoction of alcohol which, when internally, will show the timber of the man where there should be one. Spirits of nitre contain about 80 per cent alcohol.

First of all, get it firmly fixed in your mind that all the liniments in the world have no effect whatever on Rheumatism.

Medical scientists differ as to the causes of every form of rheumatism, but agree that when caused by a tiny disease germ, the only effective method of treatment is to attack the disease at its source, and cleanse the blood of its cause.
