

COAL MEN MAY DEMAND MONEY

Return of Fees Paid Would Hit State's General Fund.

The State general fund may be forced to stand the shock of a heavy drawing should the Federal Court in the hearing for a permanent injunction to prevent the coal commission from carrying out its orders, return a finding for the plaintiffs, thus divesting the coal body of any power in regulating the coal industry in Indiana. Should the commission be stripped of its power, coal operators, retail and wholesale dealers may insist that the State return to them the money paid the commission as license fees, and the tonnage fees on production, paid by mine operators, administration officials admit.

Members of the State Board of Accounts who served on the commission were forced, under the provisions of the coal commission act, to serve without additional compensation. But about one-third of the men and women working and doing their work have been hired and are daily putting in time at the Statehouse as a part of the coal commission machinery. And these salaries must be paid, and paid out of the money received from license fees.

Jesse E. Eschbach, chairman of the commission, and chief executive of the State Board of Accounts, and who probably has done more work on the coal commission than all the others, will receive 1 cent additional salary for his services on the coal commission. The salaries and other expenses paid out of the commission's fees will nearly complete the body's finances.

The question arises then should these operators and coal dealers demand refund of their license fees, on granting of a permanent injunction and the accompanying nullification of power of the coal commission, where will the money come from to re-instate the commission?

Could Not Deport Man of No CountryBOUNDARY PROHIBITION OFFICERS CONFER*Decide Rum Chasers Can Cross Border in Pursuit.

DETROIT, Dec. 2.—A joint war party of rum runners along the Detroit river was planned at a conference here between officials of the United States and Canada. Representing the United States were Police Commissioner James W. Dugan of Detroit, and James W. Jordan, chief Federal prohibition officer in Detroit. W. L. Lannin, license inspector of Ontario represented the Canadian side of the river.

It was agreed between the two forces that an officer from either side can hereafter pursue a prohibition violator into the other country, providing he turns the case over to an officer of the other country as soon as he enters. Extra police will patrol both sides of the river.

Those who have been discussing the possibility of a refund of license fees have declared that out of the general fund will come the money for this purpose. In fact, unofficial opinions from those who are in a position to interpret the act have been to the effect that this is the only place from where the money can come.

It is even hinted that when the law was passed the legislators had fears that the law would not stand the test of the Federal courts, and knew that the money collected would have to be refunded when the act was declared illegal, and so made provision for the emergency, should it arise.

In other words, they experimented somewhat with their lawmaking powers, and passed the expense of their costly experiment on to the people to be paid out of the general fund of the State.

Biggest Man in Lake Trade Just Can Peep Over Top of His Desk

CHICAGO, Dec. 2.—H. W. Thorpe, new president of the Goodrich Transit Company, whose purchase of the Goodrich Traction Company's interests comprises the largest passenger line deal ever made on the Great Lakes, places him at the head of a $1,250,000 concern, with control of the oldest and biggest package freight business on Lake Michigan. He established financial connections with the Manitowoc Shipbuilding Company.

Physically, Thorpe is a very big enough to peer over the top of his office desk, but by weight he probably would be placed with the bantams.

Thorpe's face has not yet shown the wear and tear usually accompanying the rise from obscure clerk to president of a concern. His eyes still glint with battle light and his hair retains its color.

Thirty-eight years ago Thorpe entered the employ of the business he now controls. He was then a clerk at Manistee, Mich. Later he was made secretary to A. W. Goodrich, then general manager of the business and finally elected vice president. Goodrich retired from active business. He was made president of the concern thirty-two years ago when he became 36 years old. He had a particular fondness for Chicago's most ardent fan. A fire alarm was part of the paraphernalia of his bedroom and he took in all promising fires, day or night.
