

STATE HONEY PRODUCERS TO GATHER HERE

Annual Meeting of Indiana Beekeepers to Be Held Dec. 16-17.

SPEAKERS ANNOUNCED

The annual convention of the Indiana Beekeepers' Association will be held in the Senate chamber, Statehouse, on that day next. The speakers will be: Mr. C. O. Yost, president; "Beekeeping as a Vocation," president; "Beekeeping as a Vocation,"

Mr. J. Niblack of Vincennes, president of the association, will act as chairman. Several speakers prominent in bee cultural work are scheduled to appear on the program.

George S. Demuth of Medina, Ohio, editor of "Gleaning Bee Culture," will speak on the convention both days. Mr. Demuth formerly was connected with the United States Department of Agriculture at Washington. Other speakers are E. W. Atkins, extension specialist, Waterloo, Iowa; E. S. Miller, Valparaiso; Ross B. Scott, La Grange; William A. Hunter, Terre Haute; Richard Lieber, director of conservation in Indiana, and Frank N. Wallace, extension entomologist. Mr. Louis Bruckhardt of Indianapolis will present "Observations of a Beekeeper in Switzerland," her native country, and Q. O. Rainbolt of Terre Haute, agricultural agent of Vigo County, will give a talk, using illustrated cinema pictures, of a bee tour conducted recently in Vigo County.

ORGANIZATION SHOWS BIG GROWTH IN YEAR

In a letter sent to several thousand beekeepers, Indiana Mr. Yost calls attention to the fact that it was only a year ago that the Indiana Beekeepers' Association held its annual convention in Indianapolis and reorganized along more progressive lines. The membership is now about ten times as large as last year and there is a very substantial sum in the treasury, he says.

The letter urges persons interested in more advanced beekeeping and augmented honey production, to lend their support toward procuring improved legislation under the new constitution. It points out that while inspectors of the State Department of Conservation inspected more spalries last year than ever before, they did not visit all localities because there were too few of them to respond to all calls for their aid.

Unless the department is allowed more money for this work there will only be three inspectors in the field next year where there should be six or seven, Mr. Yost says.

Beekeepers of Indiana produced approximately 6,000,000 pounds of honey last season. Hoosiers accepted honey as a substitute for high-priced sugar and, according to local production, may far exceed the amount of honey they now consume.

According to Mr. Yost, no other State in the Union has a more liberal distribution of honey-bearing plants than Indiana. One hundred species gives the State two classes of early summer flows and two classes of fall flows. An entire failure of all of these groups at once has never been known.

SESSIONS GIVEN.

The program follows:

Thursday, 10 a. m.—Opening address, Mason J. Niblack, president, Vincennes.

Secretary-treasurer report, C. O. Yost, Indianapolis.

Report of the State Beekeepers' Association.

Report of the Indiana Beekeepers' Association by C. O. Yost, State apriary Inspector for the department of conservation, and secretary of the beekeepers' organization.

Mr. J. Niblack of Vincennes, president of the association, will act as chairman. Several speakers prominent in bee cultural work are scheduled to appear on the program.

George S. Demuth of Medina, Ohio, editor of "Gleaning Bee Culture," will speak on the convention both days. Mr. Demuth formerly was connected with the United States Department of Agriculture at Washington. Other speakers are E. W. Atkins, extension specialist, Waterloo, Iowa; E. S. Miller, Valparaiso; Ross B. Scott, La Grange; William A. Hunter, Terre Haute; Richard Lieber, director of conservation in Indiana, and Frank N. Wallace, extension entomologist. Mr. Louis Bruckhardt of Indianapolis will present "Observations of a Beekeeper in Switzerland," her native country, and Q. O. Rainbolt of Terre Haute, agricultural agent of Vigo County, will give a talk, using illustrated cinema pictures, of a bee tour conducted recently in Vigo County.

In a letter sent to several thousand beekeepers, Indiana Mr. Yost calls attention to the fact that it was only a year ago that the Indiana Beekeepers' Association held its annual convention in Indianapolis and reorganized along more progressive lines. The membership is now about ten times as large as last year and there is a very substantial sum in the treasury, he says.

The letter urges persons interested in more advanced beekeeping and augmented honey production, to lend their support toward procuring improved legislation under the new constitution. It points out that while inspectors of the State Department of Conservation inspected more spalries last year than ever before, they did not visit all localities because there were too few of them to respond to all calls for their aid.

Unless the department is allowed more money for this work there will only be three inspectors in the field next year where there should be six or seven, Mr. Yost says.

Beekeepers of Indiana produced ap-

HAS BIGGEST HAT SHOP FRONT IN U. S.

Levinson's New Store in Loew Theater Tops 'Em All.

Soft draperies in front of the wall cases, a pleasing indirect lighting system, woodwork and fixtures of oak finished in silver gray—those are some of the attractive features of the new hat store of Harry Levinson, 37 North Pennsylvania street, which was opened formally today.

It is in the new Loew theater building and is in the same location as that where Mr. Levinson had a hat store before the old building there was wrecked to make way for the present one.

With this addition to his stores in Indianapolis, Mr. Levinson will have four hat stores in the city, the largest being that of hat shop owned by any one man in any one city west of New York. It might be mentioned also that the new store has the largest front of any exclusive hat store in the United States.

Carl Schey, who has been in the employ of Mr. Levinson for about fifteen years, and Clarence Mills, who has been in the same employ about six years, will be at the new store, of which Mr. Schey will be manager. Mr. Levinson will make his headquarters there.

County Assessors to Meet McCray

County assessors of Indiana will meet in annual conference next Wednesday and Thursday with Governor-elect Warren T. McCray, Governor James P. Goodrich and members of the State Board of Tax Commissioners. The conference will be held in the Statehouse.

"Governor Goodrich, Mr. McCray, Fred A. Sims, chairman, and W. C. Harrison, secretary, of the tax board, and William N. Cox of Parke County, will address the assessors Wednesday. On the second day of the conference, Mr. Zephaniah and John G. Bryant, members of the tax board, and George C. Bryant, agricultural statistician for Indiana for the United States Department of Agriculture, Elmer Ferguson of Delaware County, and George F. Fraser of Tippecanoe County, will talk.

Judge Mahlon E. Bash of the Marion Probate Court has appointed W. Todd Young administrator of the estate of the late Frederick A. Myers, who was recently shot to death in Terre Haute.

Myers in their photographic studio at 1806 North Alabama street Saturday night. The value of the estate is estimated at $5,000.

Lodge Holds Last Reception for Year

Commander Issues Appeal Through Tuberculosis Association.

Motion pictures and dancing were the features of the last social affair of the year of Mystic Tie Lodge No. 388, F. & A. M., held last night at the Masonic Temple. Clarence Crippin, master of the lodge, headed the reception committee.

Under the direction of Cyrus Titus, chairman of the entertainment committee, the final social event of the year of Raper Commandery No. 1, Knights Templar, will be given tonight for members and their families and guests.

Judge Mahlon E. Bash of the Marion Probate Court has appointed W. Todd Young administrator of the estate of the late Frederick A. Myers, who was recently shot to death in Terre Haute.

Myers in their photographic studio at 1806 North Alabama street Saturday night. The value of the estate is estimated at $5,000.

LEGION ASKED TO SELL SEALS

Legion men and women should support it this year.

The largest single contribution arranged by a single organization for the seal sale this year was announced by Secretary Auerbach today. It is the sum of $3,000, pledged by the Rotary Club of Warsaw, which binds its membership to sell that amount for the benefit of the Kosciusko County tuberculosis prevention work.

Driver, Who Tried to Whip Pastor, Licked

NEW YORK, Dec. 11.—The Rev. H. M.

Hancock, pastor of the Methodist church at Huntington, L. I., was driving his car in Huntington today when it collided with the car of George Carbone, a chauffeur.

Angered, Carbone struck the clergyman in the face.

Then followed a hot sparring contest, in which Carbone was given a thorough trouncing. Dr. Hancock was asked if he intended to make a charge of assault against Carbone.

"Why should I? I confess." His talk will begin at the conclusion of a motion picture show at 7:15 o'clock.

Clips Hair of Woman Sleeping in Pullman

FORT THOMAS, Ky., Dec. 11.—Mrs. Waters Howe of Orlando, Fla., claims to have been the victim of the meanest thief in the United States—one who, she said, clipped the hair from her head while she was asleep in a Pullman en route from Jacksonville, Fla., to this city. Mrs. Howe reported that, besides her hair, she was robbed of several pieces of jewelry and $300 in cash.

Herbert Foltz Down on Architect's List

The need of competent men as architects, the way to succeed in the profession and the compensation to be expected will be the points emphasized by Herbert Foltz, designer of the Central Y. M. C. A. building, who will make an address in the lobby of the Y. M. C. A. tonight on the subject: "Architecture as a Profession." His talk will begin at the conclusion of a motion picture show at 7:15 o'clock.

MOTION PICTURES.

Paramount Super-Plays at the ISIS

Announcement

Beginning tomorrow the management of the Isis inauguates a change of policy whereby Paramount super-plays will be presented for a season. Each picture will have its first Indianapolis showing at the Isis, and each will bear the personal guarantee as to its worth that goes with the PARAMOUNT trade mark. The first of these will be:

LOIS WEBER'S SPECIAL PRODUCTION

"To Please, One Woman

A Paramount Picture

Universal Comedy "THE LION TAMERS"

ADMISSION
Afternoon, 20c Evenings, 30c

Continuous 10 A. M. to 11 P. M.

THE CIRCLE THEATRE ON MONUMENT CIRCLE

