

POULTRY SHOW DRAWS WIDELY

Entries From Over U. S.
Coming Here.

Entries from practically every county in the State and more than fifteen other States for the Poultry Show, which opens in Tomlinson Hall next Wednesday and continues through Sunday, assure the largest exhibition of its kind ever staged in Indianapolis. Breeders from all parts of the country consider a win here of as great value as any they can make elsewhere.

More men and women are making their living from the breeding of standard poultry in Indiana than in any other State. The Indianapolis show holds the distinction of being the oldest exhibition in America. It is twelve years older than the Madison Square Garden Show in New York, sixteen years older than the Mechanics Hall Show, Boston, and more than three times as old as the Columbian Show, Chicago.

Poultry breeding made rapid strides during the war, the work being fostered by the Agricultural Department at Washington. Experts were sent into every section of the country to teach the best methods of making poultry profitable, both for eggs and meat. No State institution has gone farther than the poultry extension bureau of Purdue University, which will have one of the strongest representations at the Tomlinson Hall show.

One of the features of the show will be a contest staged by the Quaker Oats Company, the entrants to be judged by the Purdue standard.

TO TREAT GOOSE FEATHERS.
Q. How should goose feathers be treated before placing in pillow ticks?
A. E. C. A. The Bureau of Biological Surveys suggests the following treatment for goose feathers: Soak them in gasoline and place in thin layers on a flat surface. Then throw over the feathers either plaster of paris or corn meal. When this has soaked up a quantity of the gasoline, remove it and put on fresh, repeating the process until the feathers are thoroughly dry. Then air them to get rid of the odor of gasoline before placing the feathers in a pillow case.

GIRLS LEARNING MOTOR UPKEEP

Wellesley Course Includes Careful Driving.

WELLESLEY, Mass., Feb. 4.—Careful driving, motor upkeep and engine troubles are the subjects for a course announced by the physics department for the girls of Wellesley College. The title of the course, which is taught by Prof. Lucy Wilson, is "The Automobile: Principles and Construction."
"Most of the time is spent on ignition and carburetion," said Miss Wilson in explaining the purpose of the course. "The girls must learn how to spot engine troubles and must learn how to fix them, for until they become self-reliant they cannot become careful and intelligent drivers. As soon as a new building provides an adequate laboratory we shall have the actual motor work on the test stand. Today we can only let the girls take the motors down and assemble them, learning the functions of every part and learning the theory of internal combustion engines in a practical way."
About thirty girls have enrolled in the course.

New Davenports, Davenos and 3-Piece Daveno Suites at Pre-War Prices

There are very few stores in the same fortunate position that we are in, inasmuch as we have reduced our stock and are therefore in a position to take advantage of any reduction offered by the manufacturer, and consequently can pass these reductions on to our customers, which we are doing in this case. Had we been overstocked, we never would have been able to offer this unusual opportunity.

Your Choice of Fumed Oak $49.50 Bed-Davenport or Bed-Daveno

Selling Earlier in the Season at $89.50

If you have memories of an old-fashioned davenport bed, uncomfortable to sleep in, displeasing to look at—and disclosing at once that it is not a genuine davenport—FORGET THEM. Modern davenports and davenos are as comfortable to sleep in as a bed—and are made in beautiful stylish patterns that will grace any living room or bedroom. They increase home capacity by making rooms do double duty—when wanted for a bed the seat revolves, then opens up by locking the ends so there is no danger of the bed getting out of order. When closed the mattress and bedding folds between springs. The springs are the very best tempered steel and guaranteed by the manufacturer. Remember, a special purchase makes these prices possible. We can't offer any more after these are sold, so—
