Romeo Jilts Girl; Weds Her Mother

CHICAGO, March 9.—Winston Phillips, 19, Louisville, Ky., is at a downtown hotel with his bride of five days, Mrs. Lela Gaines Phillips, 43. And down in Kentucky's metropolis there is a slip of a girl, her daughter, nursing a sore heart. For Winston wooed the daughter, but wed the mother.

Mrs. Phillips is the widow of a wealthy civil engineer.

Miss Mary O. Siebenthal is president of the organization.

Mrs. John H. Willford, who has been the guest of her parents, Mr. and Mrs. Allen T. Fleming, 1509 West Twenty-Sixth street, returned today to her home in Cincinnati. Owen H. Fleming entertained yesterday afternoon with a theater party for Mrs. Fleming.

Mrs. R. E. Stevens, 5208 East Washington street, was hostess for the meeting of the Zetetha Club this afternoon. The program included three papers: "France as a Republic," Mrs. B. C. Keith; "Paris the Magnificent," Mrs. G. R. McDavitt; and "Victor Hugo," Mrs. J. W. Walker. The rooms were attractively decorated in green and white with lace and confections carrying out the St. Patrick's day idea.

Movie to Be Given at Garfield School

Make Your Own Gray Hair Remedy

Mrs. A. Dixon, a well-known Brooklyn trained nurse, made the following statement regarding gray hair: "Streaked, faded or gray hair can be quickly turned black, brown or light brown, by the use of the following remedy that you can make at home:

"Merely get a box of Ortel powder at any drug store. It costs very little and no extra to buy. Dissolve it in 2 oz. of distilled or rain water and comb it through the hair. Full directions for mixing and use and a gold bond guarantee come in each box. One box will last you for months.

"It is safe, it does not rub off, is not sticky or gummy, and leaves the hair fluffy. It will make a gray-haired person look twenty years younger."—Advertisement.

KEEPING HOUSE WITH THE HOOPERS

(The Hoopers, an average American family of five, living in a suburban town, on a limited income, will tell the readers of the Daily Times how the many present-day problems of the budget that Mrs. Hooper has evolved and found practical. Follow them daily in an interesting review of their home life and learn to meet the conditions of the high cost of living with them.)

Mrs. Hooper really didn't like to iron. And the family knew it. At the breakfast table Roger said to her teasingly:

"Mother, I've been counting up the things of mine that you needn't iron. Of course, not my pajamas or underclothes or anything like that, but I would like a smooth handkerchief and I'd feel dreadful if my shirts were not—"

"You needn't worry, Roger," laughed Mrs. Hooper. "I'll do all the ironing that is necessary to make you presentable, but I do know that in planning new things for Helen and the next summer I shall make them of material that you don't need to iron. It is a great waste of time to iron as many garments as we do."

As a matter of fact the ironing was easily accomplished with the use of the electric iron and as Mrs. Hooper had her board set at the proper height and her clothes hanger arranged within arm's length, she sat very comfortably on her twenty-four-inch stool and turned out work much more presentable than Ellen's had been for many months. To have her sell the time and trouble later of having to look all over a garment to find the place to be mended that she had noticed when ironing she brought her faithful notebook again into service. In it she jotted down that two buttons were missing from Henry's pajama coat; that the blouse on Helen's white petticoat was ripped; that Roger had a hole in the leg of his drawers; that her night dress had a rent under the arm, and that Baby Betty's bloomers were a matter of patches.

Henry always laughed at this sample of her economy of time, but she claimed that it preserved her patience as well as saved her time when she could turn at once to the spot that needed her attention without having to look the garment over frantically half a dozen times before she found the special thing that had sent it to her mending basket. A glance at the record in her notebook showed her instantly whether it was a button or a rip that she was after on Helen's muslin slip.

In the middle of the afternoon she took Betty with her and went to the market. At the butcher's stall she bought two pounds of stewing veal at 38 cents a pound, a pound of bacon at 40 cents and a pound of salt pork at 30 cents. At the dairy supply counter she bought two pounds of table butter at 70 cents, one pound of oleo for 40 cents, one dozen cold storage eggs at 40 cents and one dozen fresh eggs at 72 cents. Before returning home she found a bargain in apples which gave her enough for the remainder of the week for 50 cents. Six grapefruit, one dozen oranges and six bananas completed her purchases.

At dinner Roger looked at his well-filled dinner plate with the savory bread dressing of the shoulder of lamb claiming his special attention.

"The teacher said today that we all eat too much in this country; that fifteen millions of people are starving in China and that each one of us ought to do something about it."

"If your teacher would explain that what he means is that our standard of living should not be lowered, but that we ought to practice simplicity in food that even the very wealthy considered sufficient thirty years ago, I would agree with him absolutely," said Mr. Hooper. "Cheapening the American diet without reducing its quality is what we need to do in this country, and that is what your mother is doing for us every day, as I very well know."

"But we must help those starving children," insisted Roger, "the teacher said so."

"He is quite right," agreed Mrs. Hooper. "I'll talk to you and Helen about that at tea time tomorrow. I think Helen's club of girls ought to do something. They could spare some time from their sewing for the Home for Crippled Children to help save the lives of a few Chinese children who are starving because of famine."

Before going to bed Mrs. Hooper jotted down the following menu for Thursday:

MENU.
—Breakfast—
Sliced oranges and bananas. Cereal.
Poached eggs on toast.
Coffee.
—Luncheon—
Salmon croquettes.
Corn bread.
Baked apples. Milk.

'Booze Cane' Adds to Difficulties of Search and Seizure

Members of the police morale squad have a new problem to solve, according to Sgt. Ed Helm. It is the "booze cane." Most persons who drink "white mule," "rain jack" whiskey and certain brands of hair tonic "raise Cain," but that is not the kind of cane the sergeant refers to.

He declares some person has invented a cane that is hollow and contains a long glass tube. This tube is filled with liquor. The head of the cane can be unscrewed.

The "booze cane," the policeman says, is being adopted by some leading bootleggers, as it is safer in case of "search and seizure" than the bottle in the hip pocket.

Club Joins Protest Against O'Callaghan

A resolution protesting against the appearance of Donald O'Callaghan, lord mayor of Cork, in Indianapolis for the purpose of conducting a meeting, was passed by the home and education section of the Women's Department Club at a meeting yesterday afternoon. A copy of the protest has been sent to Mayor Jewett.

Letters are to be sent to the water, heating and light companies of the city asking that their representatives wear some mark of identification when calling at private homes.

The mock senate held a lively session during the afternoon. A bill providing for repeal of the act which causes an American woman to lose her citizenship on marriage to a foreigner was introduced, and bills providing for the care of old persons by their children and the teaching of "Americanism" as a separate subject in the public schools were unanimously passed by the senate. Experienced Mothers know the wisdom of assisting nature before Baby's coming

It is natural to think of the expectant mother's influence upon the unborn babe. Her food, her habits, her hygiene, and even the condition of her mind, all have a part in determining the well-being or ill-being of her infant before birth.

No woman awaiting the joys of coming motherhood should allow the days to pass without giving nature a helping hand—because the conditions of pending motherhood, existing as they do, over a protracted period of months, create almost a new state of being for a woman.

WARNING: Avoid using plain oils, greases and substitutes—they act only on the skin and may cause harm without doing good.
