Indianapolis Athletics Need Earlier Attention

High School Coaches Send Out Appeal for Grade School Competition—Suggest Intercity Competition Under Recreation Department Jurisdiction—Local Schools Also Face Gymnasium Troubles.

By CHARLIE LOGAN.

"What Indianapolis needs is grade school athletics, kindergarten basketball and cooperation other than that of side-line cheering. We have to get started before then, Indianapolis will have better high school basketball and all-around athletic teams, championship teams." This is the reply sent out by the coaches at the three Indianapolis high schools to the question, "rather, rather, rather, that has been fired in their direction for some time, especially during the last season.

Indianapolis basketball teams and Indianapolis coaches have, at different times, been ripped up one side and down the other for their failure to cope a State championship, or go big in the State tournaments, for the last ten years. Time and again small schools, "one-horse schools," have been pointed out to the Indianapolis athletes as models.

In some cases there are as many boys on the "model" teams as there are in school, yet the team meets with wonder. In fact, the Indianapolis people ask, "Grade school athletics and public cooperation," and the coaches reply:

Take the case of almost any small town, or fairly large town, around the State that turns out teams of championship caliber. In almost every instance you will find the youngsters playing basketball and the coaches are not the time they are able to walk. The grade school boys are given permission to use the gymnasium in the afternoon, if they are regular "floor dwellers." If they have twenty minutes between classes, in summer or winter, they can play basketball, or out on the outdoor courts that are common in the country.

No real stars are developed, or at least they are seldom developed in this grade school play, but it has been proven beyond all question of doubt that this running around on the floor does a great deal to bring to the front what little basketball skill a boy acquires. It is the time when he is able to pass it, how to put English on it and he learns to get around a floor without falling all over himself. He gets a fair idea of how to turn, dribble, guard and shoot. The little things that are necessary in basketball.

COACH THEN TAKES CHARGE. Then when the boy gets out of grade school, he comes under the rule of the high school coach, and the mentor soon can tell whether or not he is going to amount to anything. If he is not, he has a right to say so. If he is, he has a right to say so. If he has any ability whatever, it does not take the coach long to bring it out. With the early training in the grade school, by experience, and the boy with a spark of natural ability soon becomes a star.

What about the grade school? The grade school students? Fully 90 per cent of them never have a chance to put their foot on a basketball. Yet, in the high school, the coach, and the mentor soon can tell whether or not he is going to amount to anything. If he is not, he has a right to say so. If he is, he has a right to say so. If he has any ability whatever, it does not take the coach long to bring it out.

Tiger Footballers Plow McKean Field in Spring Practice

Ambitious De Pauw Candidates Join Last Season Regulars in Workout.

GREENCASTLE, Ind., March 22.—De Pauw's football men and ambitious gridiron candidates galloped out on McKean field yesterday afternoon to hold their first spring practice. Coach Fred M. Walker, recently elected head of Tiger athletics, directed the short workout which was strenuous nevertheless.

Twenty-three units were issued yesterday afternoon to former varsity men, reserve gridirers and ambitious candidates. All of last season's men were not out as some of the Tiger grid regulars are all round men and are now interested in baseball or track. These included Stutz, right half; Red Adams, end; and McCann, tackle. Among other absent was "Galloping" Galloway, the star full back, who was out of the game last year.

Let's give this matter due consideration, and take a grand whiff at it next year. For, besides making it possible for Indianapolis to turn out championship sorts of athletic training and develop them into better boys and scholars. A wonderful example of what this kind of move would do for better basketball in the high schools can be taken from the cases of many famous players.

In some cases there are as many boys on the "model" teams as there are in school, yet the team meets with wonder. In fact, the Indianapolis people ask, "Grade school athletics and public cooperation," and the coaches reply:

TEXAN BOSSES INDIANS WHILE JACK IS AWAY

Big First Sacker Makes Crowley No Place for the Rest Seekers.

By EDDIE ASH. Daily Times Sports Editor.
