

THE PROFESSOR IS REAL PEEVED AT 'LOVE FEAST'

Mr. Howe Indulges in All Sorts of Personalities at Club Reception.

STILL DODGES QUESTION

With the exception of Mr. Thomas C. Howe, former president of Butler College and News-Jewett candidate for nomination for mayor, the Republican aspirants for places on the party ticket forgot personalities and engaged in what appeared to be a contest to see who could make himself out to be the most "one hundred percent" Republican of the lot, at a reception for Republican candidates at the Marion Club last night.

Remster Bingham, president of the Marion Club, warned the candidates at the opening of the meeting that there were to be no personalities.

Edward J. Robison, candidate for the honor of leading the Republican ticket, was called upon first and made a brief, forceful speech in which he made no extravagant promises and in which he carefully refrained from saying anything that could in any way be construed as derogatory to his chief opponents, Samuel Lewis Shank and Professor Howe.

But not so with Professor Howe, who was all worked up. Not throughout the entire campaign has Professor Howe been so peeved. One of Robison's supporters in the audience became so angered at the attacks on his candidate in the face of Mr. Bingham's request that there be no personalities, that he hurried a question.

Professor Howe walked to the platform amidst comparative silence. Another candidate was speaking. The city employees present, and there were quite a number of them, apparently did not see him. After he had cast aside his professional reserve and let into his opponents and their principles, the beneficiaries of the News-Jewett machine awakened to the fact that something was expected of them and performed right handsomely. But Professor Howe was unaffected. He was mad plumb through and through.

He walked to the stage without the trace of a smile of gratitude for the really splendid applause given him.

WHAT HE SEEMED TO BE PEVIED ABOUT.

The things that appear finally to have aroused Professor Howe were the insistence of Caleb S. Denny, former mayor, and one of Mr. Robison's supporters, that he answer questions as to whether he has supported the Republican party in certain specific years, and the fact that a great many of the voters are saying when they get together to discuss the candidates that a vote for Howe is a vote for the continuance of the News-Jewett machine in power.

"I have been a good Republican all my life," he said, with emphasis, "made it about as near a shout as anything he has said in the campaign. I won't allow anybody to challenge my Republicanism."

"How about voting for Bookwalter?" asked a Robison supporter.

Professor Howe did not answer. Professor Howe has never answered that question, although Robison speakers have hounded it at him dozens of times.

Talking about control of the public utilities being vested in the public service commission and not in the mayor, Professor Howe let the foot slip, saying that the commission has control over utility rates in every city in the State, he mentioned a list of other cities among which were many other good towns, Kokomo.

Professor Howe passed rapidly on, but many persons in the auditorium remembered that Professor Howe, according to the reports of the newspapers, intended to move to Kokomo, so as to be close to his business interests before he became a candidate for mayor.

SAYS HE CAN BE PRACTICAL, TOO.

Further evidence that Professor Howe was out of sorts with the way things have been going against him came when he said: "You don't need to think that because I've been one of those 'gentle professors' that I don't know how to be practical."

Later he said:

"If I'm elected mayor of this town I'm going to be mayor of the town and not of some clique."

Adolph J. Meyer, a fourth candidate for the Republican mayoral nomination, made the first speech of his campaign.

Five candidates for the nomination for city judges spoke. J. Herbert Hartman declared that he believes a judge should decide cases as he sees them regardless of what any newspaper says; Delbert O. Wilmett promised to "speak softly, but carry a big stick," like Theodore Roosevelt, to open court at 9 o'clock every morning and give the Salvation Army $5 for every morning he is tardy; John F. Engelle said he wants to make the city court something more than a mere leading station for the penitentiaries; Harry E. Yockey noted that what the court needs is a "high grade probation system," and Charles Alcon assured the voters that he is not leading any section to believe that he is its particular candidate.

John W. Rhodameal and J. E. Tyler, candidates for city clerk and candidates for city councilmen as follows, spoke:

Mrs. Olive D. Edwards, First district; Joseph Ashbury, Second district; Lloyd J. Claycomb, William H. Morrison, Jr., Ray Albertson and Miss Katharine Perlin, Third district; Austin H. BONFIELD AND HENDERSON TALK.

Approximately fifty colored men and women congregated at 911 St. Paul street last night and heard Frederick K. Bonfield, an Indianapolis attorney, and W. E. Henderson, a colored lawyer, speak in behalf of the candidacy of Mr. Robison, while they awaited the arrival of the candidate himself.

Mr. Robison was scheduled to talk at the St. Paul street address at 8 o'clock, where he was to start a series of five meetings to be held during the evening.

Mr. Bonfield spoke for about half an hour, and was followed by Mr. Henderson, and then James Watson, who presided over the meeting, spoke several minutes, but the chief attraction for the evening was his speech.

Mr. Bonfield, at the outset of his address, stated he was speaking in behalf of Mr. Robison and J. Herbert Hartman, candidate for city judge, and it was apparent that during the course of his remarks he intended to take the Indianapolis News-Jewett machine severely to task.

"The Indianapolis News is trying now, just like they have tried for the last few years, and the Jewett machine is trying, like they have done for the last eight years, to control the politics of this city. They are trying to make us swallow their candidate."

When Mr. Bonfield mentioned Mayor Jewett's statement, made in his famous address, that the colored citizens of Indianapolis owe much to his administration, several of the audience remarked, vociferously, to say the least: "We don't owe him a thing."

Mr. Henderson appealed to the colored women to exercise properly their right of suffrage, and called on them to aid in the breaking down of the News-Jewett machine.

He said the colored man, for his own benefit, is compelled to ally himself with the law-abiding and the better class of people, and added that the Robison organization is trying to aid the colored voter, and not coerce him, in his efforts to pick from the list of candidates those who would give the city the best administration.

He repeated the statement of Professor Howe, that the negro from the South is a "black Bolshevik." Should Professor Howe happen to be nominated in the primary, Mr. Henderson declared, on the strength of this statement, he will be defeated at the polls next November.

Attorney Henderson did not confine his attack to the News-Jewett machine nor to the candidacy of Professor Howe, but Lew Shank came in for denunciation. He said Mr. Shank never was mayor of Indianapolis, except in name, and that Joe Keating, Indiana member of the Republican national committee, was the real "power behind the throne."

Shank Riddles 'Campaign Lie'

Denies He Ever Ridiculed Gipsy Smith.

Samuel Lewis Shank, Republican candidate for mayor, emphatically denied an accusation that he had ridiculed Gipsy Smith in speeches in a statement issued today.

"That is a typical News lie but a bit more direct than usual," he said, "I warmly praised the work of the great evangelist and urged my hearers to attend his meetings. I also said that I wished he could remain in the city and awaken the business and political interests as he had the churches. I did say that somebody had lied to Gipsy about our mayor's struggle to run a good clean town."

"I did not hold Gipsy Smith blame-worthy for that. Dick Smith, Charlie Jowett and their hypocritical brethren will put over a phoney line of talk on St. Peter if they ever get the chance."

Mr. Shank declared that he held the city to be in such need of evangelistic exhortation that he was making preparations to cancel a number of meetings next Monday meeting in order that those who might attend may go to hear Billy Sunday. He said he intended to hear Mr. Sunday, himself, if the campaign has not worn him out completely by that time.
