

FACTORY MEN AT FIRE TALK

Stores, Schools and Flats to Be Represented Tonight.

representatives of retail and wholesale stores, schools and apartment houses will be the guests of the fire prevention committee of the Chamber of Commerce at a fire prevention meeting tonight at the Chamber of Commerce building.

At last night's meeting which was for representatives of factories, business establishments and warehouse companies, J. J. Conroy, president of the fire prevention committee of the Cincinnati Chamber of Commerce, explained the direct connection between pay envelopes and the cost of living as brought out in a study of living expenses.

"A workman who realizes how much his carefulness in preventing fires and cutting down accidents means in making his family, especially his children, happy, gladly will cooperate with the firemen who are trying to hold this fire prevention work, for one should be able to see that even a small accident jeopardizes not only his own life, but the comfort and welfare of those dear to him," he said.

He urged, for greatest results, the appointment of a fire prevention director in every factory of the city, who will be able to teach workmen how to help cut down the fire waste.

Miss Sara Lauter, who called the meeting to order, spoke briefly of the organization work being done in the city by boards and city districts, and urged factory representatives to cooperate in the fire prevention campaign.

Jacob H. Hilkene presided as permanent chairman of the meeting.

Somebody Must Be Responsible for Booze Cars

Van Nys Considers Asking for Probation Officer for 117 Seized Autos.

Wanted—Probation officers for morally delinquent automobiles. For information, apply to Frederick Van Nys, United States district attorney.

CHICAGO, June 3.—Everett Harding must dream his dreams of mingling with the makers of history at Washington for fifteen months in the Federal Prison.

Everett, who is the son of a member of the Volestead, Harding, was found guilty by Judge Landis of impersonating a Federal officer with intent to defraud.

He was charged with representing himself as assistant secretary to the President to defraud the Pennsylvania Railroad out of $1,900, the cost of a special car in which he took a party to the inauguration.

Some such advertisement as the above may appear in the newspapers one of these days if the tangle of 117 automobiles seized iniquitously by the Volestead act is not unravelled. Under the Volestead and revenue acts automobiles used in the illegal transportation of liquor are subject to seizure. The Volestead act provides that where the car has been used without the knowledge or consent of the owner as to the illegal purpose, the car is not covered by the provision.

Recently the Supreme Court of the United States held that the Volestead act applied in these cases, and yesterday in Federal Court Floyd J. Mattice, assistant U. S. attorney, got a judgment to call up the 117 cases. Immediately the court was flooded with intervening petitions, and other claims of "innocent owners." So great was the rush that Judge Ferdinand A. Geiger ordered attorneys representing the car owners to file their claims later.

At present the cars are declared forfeited by the Federal Court they will be sold at public auction to the highest bidder. Among these 117 cars, which run all the way from battered old fivers to snobbish big sedans and high-powered, low, rakish, piratical booze-running craft, are said to be some that are in wonderful condition.

For example, one big sedan was bought expensive for a certain high-ranking trip to New Jersey. It made the round trip to Newark, N. J., a distance of about 2,000 miles, and then after making the entire trip in safety, was captured in Indianapolis when only sixty-five miles from its destination. This car has been the envy of every person who has looked at it over. Then there are two snappy looking cars that made two round trips to Chicago and were caught at the end of the second trip.
