

2 POLITICAL BATTLES NOW ON AT MARION

Election of School Superintendent and Nomination of Mayor Claim Attention.

CONTESTS HARD FOUGHT

By a Staff Correspondent.
MARION, Ind., June 6.—Having just emerged from one of the hottest campaigns ever waged here, notwithstanding the one-sided victory won in the contest over the institution of the commission form of municipal government in place of the present councilmanic-majority system, this city today is boiling over with two more hot contests.

And the Republican county and city organizations are enmeshed in the nets of the struggle to a point which threatens to strain severely the good nature of the various factions, if not create a definite rupture in party harmony.

The two struggles are those of the election today of a county superintendent of schools, and the nomination on Aug. 2 of a Republican candidate for mayor of Marion. The mayoralty nomination fight has been brewing for some time, since the first declarations of candidacy by several men, prior to the campaign for the commission form of government, while the contest over the school superintendency has evolved into a bitter factional struggle only in the past three or four days.

FOUR CANDIDATES FOR SCHOOL JOB

Three, and possibly four candidates were outstanding in the race for the county school head's job. They were Ernest J. Holsinger, Republican, a teacher in the Center township schools; Charles H. Terrell, Democrat, present county superintendent; Chalmers C. Thomas, former instructor in the old Marion Normal College, and long identified with educational work, and whose politics are said to be at present an enigma to those who are interested in the battle, and Walter Baker, instructor in the junior high school of Marion.

The majority of the county organizations, including John A. Jones, Republican chairman of Grant County and the Eleventh Congressional district; Austin D. Hunt, county auditor; Sam Connelly, county clerk; the three county commissioners, and numerous other minor county officials, as well as the regular chauffeurs of the G. O. P. machine in the county, were behind Holsinger's candidacy and have been working tooth and toenail for his election ever since they have seen there was to be a fight for the place. More time on the county's business has not given them an excuse to desert the cause of their Republican friend.

Harvey M. McCauley, one of the leading politicians of the county, a man not to be overlooked in matters political because of his position as county highway superintendent, and many of his lieutenants, were backing Thomas.

PRESENT INCUMBENT ENTERS RACE EVENT

In the theory that possession is nine points of the law, Terrell injected himself into the race and sought the office for the third time, because, shrewd politician and thinker that he is, he figured with five Democratic trustees and a couple of the Republicans favorable to him, through long association, he had more than fair chance to run home with the bacon.

No one in particular, seemed to be behind Baker, and he was considered more as a "dark horse," or compromise candidate, than anything else. One or two of the trustees, also, would not shy at the place, although they did not make any active canvass for the election.

Holsinger announced his candidacy months ago, and even prior to that, was working quietly in an effort to corral all the seven votes, out of the thirteen, necessary for election. He has been a tireless worker in the Republican ranks of Grant County, and has served year after year as a precinct committeeman. He also has been connected with the Marion and Grant County schools for years, and now is Center Township's principal. He probably is in as close touch with the educational system here as any man in the county.

Terrell, through means of holding the place for two terms, has made friends with the trustees, and has aided them at a few times in surmounting difficulties that have arisen in their paths in the course of duty. These little acts of assistance were expected to aid toward re-election today.

Thomas, who entered the race just a few days ago, has presented a problem to the politicians, in a manner similar to that of Thomas C. Howe, who sought the Republican nomination for Mayor of Indianapolis in the recent primary. In that he practically is a "man without a party." He is accused of having voted the Democratic ticket once or twice, is known to have been an active prohibitionist at one time, and now is seeking election on grounds of being a Republican. His eligibility was not questioned. The only thing that stood in his way was his partisanship.

Since the fight warmed up, the politicians dropped everything, and lined up loyally behind their respective favorites, and even Sunday schools suffered in attendance, because of the interest of the supporters in the contest.

Predictions were made Sunday that either Holsinger or Terrell would be named on the fifth ballot. It was certain that Terrell would hold his five Democratic votes clear through the balloting, and the speculation was on his chances of capturing two of the Republican votes. Holsinger was expected to start out with two votes on the first ballot and gradually, by process of elimination, assimilate the necessary seven votes by the fifth ballot.

A long drawn out battle is expected in the Republican majority contest. Seven candidates have, or will soon have, filed their declarations of candidacy for the nomination. The organization now is working in an effort to bring out a new candidate, who will be a "compromise" man, and who, it is expected, through his present popular position in the eyes of the voters, be the successful contestant. The city council has set the date for the primary, set back by the election on the commission form of government, for Aug. 2. The city organization is hopeful that all forces can be united by that time and that all factional differences will be erased, so the party may present a solid front against the lone Democratic candidate for the mayoralty job.

The candidates are Dr. George R. Daniels, city health officer and defeated candidate in the primary election of 1917; Marshall Williams, city attorney and former city judge; John W. Grant, wholesale produce dealer; Moe H. Baldwin, insurance man and prominent in club circles; Ed McClure, city controller; James E. Clifton, Center township trustee and former city sanitary commissioner and weight inspector, for whom the council several years ago took in a portion of land on Railroad avenue on which Clifton's house is situated, in order that he might be given the latter position; and V. J. Rivier, grocer and real dealer.

It is expected, and is almost a certainty, that Robert M. Van Atta, former judge of the Grant-DeWaver Superior Court, and chairman of the Representative Government League, which engineered the overwhelming defeat to the commission government, and who, it is said, will be brought out by the organization, will ride to victory on the wave of popularity he has gained by that connection.

SAY VAN ATTA LOGICAL MAN.
The city organization figures Van Atta is the logical man to unite the forces and carry the party to victory in November and leaders are engaged now in an effort to induce him to announce his candidacy. Should he consent to become a candidate, they say, it would be the cause for withdrawal of some of the candidates and the defeat of others whose chances for victory in the fall would be so slight there would be danger of electing a Socialist mayor, an occurrence that has been feared in Marion for the past few years.

Dr. Daniels, had he played the game right, before the commission government action, would have had easy sailing in the race for the nomination, politicians say. He was urged long ago by his friends to become a candidate, but steadfastly refused to toss his hat into the ring. Then when his friends put up Mr. Baldwin, and other candidates had entered the field, Daniels decided he wished to take a whirl at it, and accordingly entered the race.

Now his followers are divided between him and Baldwin, with the possible chance that one of the weaker candidates would be able to slip through the ropes, and allow the Socialists to name the next mayor of Marion.

Rivier, Clifton, McClure and Grant are not taken seriously as candidates, and it is expected one or two of them may withdraw before the primary election.

Williams' candidacy is looked on with alarm, as it is considered he cannot carry the party to victory in November, and with this fear, coupled with the struggle between Daniels and Baldwin, the organization is pinning its hopes to Judge Van Atta.

The name of Willard H. Gemmill, former deputy attorney general, under the administration of Governor Harrison, as a compromise candidate. It is considered unlikely, however, that he will permit his name to be entered in the race.

EXPLAINS ARMY SUMMER CAMP

Citizens Training at Camp Knox, Ky., Will Have Some Fun.

Here is what General Lassiter, commanding Camp Knox, Ky., has lined up in the way of a summer outing for the men and boys of Kentucky, Indiana, Ohio and West Virginia.

"Plenty of work but lots of relaxation." Amplified and explained, this statement means free moving pictures in two outdoor pavilions every evening; boxing and wrestling bouts combined with vaudeville shows presented with the pictures; week end trips to Mammoth Cave, Lincoln Farm, and other points on reduced railroad rates; an excursion on the Ohio River and chance at the Armory in Louisville; horse show at the camp which will be attended by several hundred Louisville girls, followed by a dance in the evening; competitive athletic meets between various units of the camp; baseball, volley ball, tennis and various indoor sports.

In addition to these features it is of interest to those who expect to attend the camp to know that there are two club houses which contain reception rooms for visitors, reading, writing and billiard rooms. These clubs are equipped with musical instruments and have all the current periodicals and newspapers. The new camp library which is now nearing completion will contain 22,000 volumes and is said to be one of the best libraries in Kentucky.

A project for a huge swimming pool is being considered by camp authorities, and it is expected to have this in operation in time for the citizens training camp.

Horseback riding over the reservation is another recreation. The 40,000 acres of Camp Knox afford an ideal place for cross-country riding.

Those interested in attending the camp should not imagine from reading of all these recreational features that there will be not worth while work. It is the expressed desire of General Read, who commands the 5th corps area, and General Lassiter, who will have active supervision of the training at Camp Knox, that these summer camps throughout the country go a long way toward stimulating the spirit of Americanism as well as preparing the young men of the country for active service in case of emergency. It must be understood, however, that no obligation to "join the Army" is incurred by the fact of enrollment at the camp. Application blanks may be procured by writing to commanding general, 6th corps area, Ft. Benjamin Harrison.
