WISCONSIN TO GET ALONG TWO YEARS WITHOUT TAXING

Legislature Sees No Need for State Levy—Postpones Measures.

MADISON, Wis., June 8.—That no State tax will be necessary to meet the expenses of State government during the coming two years is the opinion of a majority of the members of the finance committee which recommended all income tax bills today for indefinite postponement.

The bills recommended by the committee for death are: The Dohi bill for revising income tax rates, repealing the secrecy clause and the personal property offset and taxing dividends on bank stock; the Stinson bill for a surtax on incomes and the Arnold bill for a revision of income tax rates.

The reporting of the big financial bills in the Legislature has broken the backbone of the session. If things move now as are to be expected this session will come to a close early in July. The real work of the session will be completed before that time.

Members of the finance committee estimate that the revenues of government will be sufficient to meet expenses without any additional taxes. This is doubted by some of the members. The finance committee recommendations for the coming two years is approximately $45,000,000. For the first year the recommendation is $23,990,345.11 and for the second year $24,376,968.

It will cost $10,115,577 for the charitable and penal institutions of the State during the coming two years, according to the bills reported by the joint finance committee today. When the revolving funds are included the expense of these institutions for the year beginning July 1, 1921, will be $4,047,312 and for the second year $4,006,953.

The joint finance committee recommended passage of the normal school bill, which carries an aggregate appropriation of $3,550,741.11 for the biennial period. The sum of $103,406.14 will be spent for maintenance at the different normal schools and the sum of $2,840,028.54 will be used for operation. Aggregate appropriations to the University of Wisconsin for $10,203,223 were approved by the finance committee for the next biennial period.

Galbraith Refers to Immigrant Problem

That the United States should see to it that the foreigners who enter this country are the kind wanted in the land which they left, and not the kind of which that country wishes to be rid of, was the statement of F.
