Federal baskets of garden flowers in pastel tints and tall cathedral candles, against a banking of ferns and palms, formed an attractive setting for the marriage of Miss Ursel Clark, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. J. J. Clark to Russell Williams of Bloomington, Ill., which was solemnized this morning at St. Mary's church. The attendants included Mrs. L. S. Clark of Terre Haute, matron of honor; Miss Bessie Clark, maid of honor; Miss Esse Lee and Miss Geraldine Craig, bridesmaids; Billie Clark, best man; Jack Gorman, Paul T. Stockdale, George Lacker, L. S. Clark and Lawrence Williams, ushers. The bride wore an exquisite gown of ivory satin, with lace and beaded embroidery with pearls, tulle well caught with orange blossoms and held in place by a band of pearls, and carried a shower bouquet of bride roses and orchids. Mrs. Clark wore a dainty frock of blue organdie with hat to match and carried a shepherd's crook ornamented with a cluster of roses in Dresden shades; the bridesmaids, wearing organdie frocks in pastel tints with hats to match, Miss Clark, peach color; Miss Lee, orchid, and Miss Craig, yellow, carried arm bouquets of rainbow colored blossoms. Following the service a wedding breakfast was served at the Belmont, a miniature bride and bridegroom forming the centerpiece for the bridal table. Crystal baskets of varicolored flowers, tied with rainbow shaded tulle, together with the less and confetti, were scattered on the floor. The out-of-town guests were Mr. and Mrs. J. S. Williams, Mr. and Mrs. P. C. Williams, Mr. and Mrs. J. B. Clark, Mr. and Mrs. W. J. Purdie, Miss Elizabeth Clark, James Miller, Judge and Mrs. Jerry West, all of Crawfordville; Mrs. J. R. A beautiful out of doors wedding was that of Miss Helen Brown, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. W. H. Brown, and Addison J. Parry, which took place Saturday evening at Golden Hill, in the garden of the bride's home. The background of forest trees and shrubbery formed an effective setting for the color scheme of Dresden shades, which was carried out in the gowns of the attendants. The Rev. A. B. Philpott of the Central Christian Church performed the ceremony and the wedding march from "Lohengrin" was used for the procession.

Miss Jeanette Parry, sister of the bridegroom, who was maid of honor, wore an attractive frock of pink chiffon trimmed with pink roses, and carried a shower bouquet of Ophelia roses. Miss Blanche Shaw, Miss Ruth Beveridge and Miss Margaret Hill, bridesmaids, wore gowns of lace over Dresden shades, with dainty tulle picture hats and shower bouquets to match the frocks. Miss Shaw's gown was made over corn color, Miss Beveridge's over apple green, and Miss Cottrell wore a gown of delicate orchid shade. The little flower girls, Miss Constance Wallerick of Chicago and Miss Betty Wallerick of this city, cousins of the bride, wore dainty pink organdie frocks with tulle hair bows to match and carried baskets of blossoms in Dresden shades.

The bride wore a becoming gown of Chantilly lace, beautifully draped over a corset of Bruges lace and was held by clusters of orange blossoms. Her bouquet was a shower of orchids and valley lilies. The bride's mother, Mrs. Brown, wore cream colored embroidery combined with tulle, and Mrs. Parry, mother of the bridegroom, wore an imported gown of black jet.

Mr. and Mrs. Parry have gone on a wedding trip to Torch Lake, Mich., and the Pocono Mountains in Pennsylvania. The traveling suit of the bride was of brown tulle, with a hat to match. Cal-o-cide FOOT REMEDY

The Well Dressed Woman

By GLORIA SWANSON.

Never before have I had such a glorious chance to indulge my taste for red. Real red—scarlet or cherry, tomato or flame—call it what you like—is my idea of red.

Yesterday I found a sport suit that was absolutely irresistible—most of them are. But this one added to the lure of out-of-doors, visions of tennis courts, canoes, cool green mountains, sparkling lakes, flaring white beaches with flashing surf, and, added to all this, the lure of scarlet.

I could just see myself flaming out, individual and startling, against that background of deep blue sky and sea, and it was much too strong an appeal for my weak will. Besides, I know I look twice as ravishing in scarlet as I do in anything else. Ask any other brunette why she does not come out on the street clothed in red, and nine out of ten will admit that they would like to, but it is only the thought of being so conspicuous and unconventional that restrains them.

Of joy! This year it is entirely conventional to wear all the red you like. And, of course, you cannot be conspicuous because at least half of the other women you meet are doing the same thing.

So—I'm glad I bought it. It has a rather short, perfectly straight coat, closely belted with a narrow cloth belt that has an odd little buckle of mother of pearl, really a button and button hole. The collar, sleeves, turned back fronts and pockets are bound with white.

There is a little turnover collar of handkerchief linen as well, and the skirt is made of huge stripes, scarlet and white, and then knits pleated. With it you may wear a buccaneering hat of scarlet felt, bound and trimmed with white braid, and sporting two silver tassels to dangle over your right eye. Also one-strap pumps of scarlet and white.

Eleventh street, have gone to Savannah, Ga., for residence.

The marriage of Miss Laura Panter, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. G. G. Panter, 2118 North Alabama street, to Joan C. Vollrath, son of Mr. and Mrs. C. A. W. Vollrath of Shelbyville, took place Saturday evening at the home of the bride. Bridal music was played by Miss Eugenia Roenitz, pianist, and Mrs. Carl Lieber, cellist, the Mendelssohn wedding march being used for the procession. The attendants were Miss Zella Roenitz, maid of honor, and Arthur Vollrath, brother of the bridegroom, best man. The Rev. Lewis Brown, pastor of St. Paul's Episcopal Church, read the service in front of an altar formed of ferns, palms and flowers, lighted with cathedral candles and the rooms were attractively decorated in the same fashion.

Miss Roenitz wore a charming frock of rose-colored taffeta and carried an arm bouquet of flowers in Dresden shades. The bride wore a handsome gown of ivory satin and a tulle veil edged with duchess lace, which fell from a pearl bandeau and was trimmed with a cluster of orange blossoms. Orchids, sweetheart roses and valley lilies made up her bouquet. Mrs. Panter wore brown lace combined with beanie and Mrs. Vollrath, mother of the bridegroom, wore orchid canton crepe. A dinner was served at the Athenaeum following the ceremony, amix and French baskets of varicolored flowers being used to decorate the tables. Mr. and Mrs. Vollrath have left for a trip to Canada and will be at home at 1925 North Fourth street, Sheboygan, Wis., after Aug. 10.
