INSTITUTE GETS FAMED KIMBALL ART COLLECTION

$2,000,000 Bequest by Widow of Chicago Organ Man.

CHICAGO, June 22.—The famous Kimball art collection has become the property of the Art Institute of Chicago through the will of Mrs. Evaline M. Kimball, widow of W. W. Kimball, organ manufacturer, just died for probate. The bequest is valued by conservative connoisseurs at more than two million dollars.

The bulk of estate, worth close to three million dollars, is left to Mrs. Eva K. Salisbury, niece of Mr. Kimball.

Mrs. Kimball is said to have known the market and location of every great canvas in existence. They were the love of her life and the comfort of her later days. Through this knowledge of art she became the owner of Rembrandt's "Portrait of His Father," formerly a part of the Budapest collection.

Sir Joshua Reynolds' portrait of "Lady Saah Banbury" is another masterpiece of the collection. Others are Turner's "Dutch Fishing Boats," Gainsborough's "Skirts of a Wood," "The Shepherdess," by Millet, Van Marck's "Cattle," Rembrandt's "The Shepherdess," "Landscapes," by Monet, and Corot's "Landscape With Bathing Women."

Numbers of bequests are made under the terms of the will to close friends. These include jewels Mrs. Kimball was fond of wearing, which she gave to friends who admired the particular items. Mrs. Salisbury, her niece, who is now in Pittsfield, Mass., at her summer home in the Berkshires, and whose Chicago home is 1100 Lake Shore drive, will not only inherit most of the estate but also will receive the $100,000 bequest to her dead husband, Warren M. Salisbury. She also will get the $100,000 string of pearls Mrs. Kimball was accustomed to wear about the house.

Mrs. Harriet Carolan, daughter of the late George M. Fullman and sister of Mrs. Frank O. Lowden, wife of the former Governor of Illinois, is to receive "one of my pearl white earrings" in the wording of the will. This "pearl of great price" is worth $30,000 and is an exact match to a string Mrs. Carolan owns. Servants of the house and even the mail carrier died and will not receive his $5,000, and a maid and a butler, John Farley, 7026 Maryland avenue, and Augusta Nelson, now Farley's wife, forfeit $5,000 each by leaving the employ of Mrs. Kimball before her death. The Northern Trust Company is named as executor. Hamlin, Topf & Cooper represented Mrs. Kimball as her attorneys in drawing the instrument.

inch in diameter. The authorities here announced recently that this ordinance would be enforced this year.
