

G INSULT LAID PRANK OF TOT

Sylvania Man, Called to Account, Denies Act.

Media, Pa., July 4.—An unthinking prank of a little daughter has put George R. Irish, an Englishman, in the bad graces of the American Legion here and has caused a call for an unofficial court-martial, at which Irish will have to answer a charge of desecrating the American flag.

At a recent celebration Irish was in his front yard when Marion Lanning, an American veteran, passed. Old Glory was on display in every yard in Media, but Lanning spluttered when he noticed its display place in the Irish home. It was on the seat of the Englishman's trousers.

Before Lanning finished talking Irish hurried into the house and then reappeared without the flag showing.

Followed complaint to the legion and a call to Irish to explain.

"My daughter pinned the flag to my seat in play and I didn't know anything about it," is his defense. In proof of his loyalty Irish has cited his work for the Red Cross during the war, his purchase of Liberty bonds and the fact that he has applied for citizenship papers.

5,000 Fight Fans
Get Returns From
The Daily Times

Indianapolis fight fans showed their interest in the Dempsey-Carpenter contest Saturday afternoon when a crowd, estimated at five thousand persons, crowded into South Meridian street in front of The Daily Times office and listened to returns from the arena.

The crowd, thousands of miles away from the ring, listened to the progress of the fight, round by round, and blow by blow, as it was relayed from the telegraph wires to the Magnavox.

Through this remarkable instrument the vast crowd was enabled to hear distinctly the details of the great championship bout so vividly that cheers greeted the announcements that Carpenter had landed a telling blow or that Dempsey had scored.

Frank Chanley read the reports into the instrument as rapidly as they were received from the wires and at all times the crowd was practically aware with its more fortunate fellow fans were who were seated at the ringside in Jersey City.

JEALOUS OTHELLO HAD NOTHING ON SILVIO STENO

'Lost Romance' Is Worth While—Norma on View—Stewart at Circle

Bill Shakespeare might sustain a shock if he could come back to this world and drop into Loew's State this week.

Bill would find that the best scenes of his play, "Othello," not only form the basis of the movie, "Caraval," but that the theme of his powerful play is the basis for the movie tragedy.

The method of suddenly using scenes from "Othello" as a part of the "Caraval" movie assures the movie patron that the "Caraval" movie has many powerfully tragic scenes.

Your reviewer is tremendously impressed with "Caraval," which is an English produced movie, and I understand that the entire movie was filmed in Venice.

"Caraval" is a striking film spectacle with beautiful Venice at carnival time as the background.

Here are a few facts concerning this movie which will be of interest. Many of the prettiest spots in Venice are actually used in this movie. Matheson Lang, who plays the role of Silvio Steno, prominent Italian tragedian, around whom the story centers, created the role in England when "Caraval" was produced on the stage. Hilda Bayley is cast as Simona, the actress wife of Silvio, who plays the Desdemona role opposite the Othello role of Silvio. Iver Novello is cast as Count Andrea Scipione, who whistles but has words to Simona when Silvio is not present.

This situation works the play up to the tremendous dramatic climax. Silvio, the actor, gets proof that Simona has a lover and finally learns that Count Andrea, his best friend, is the man. This thought of his wife's unfaithfulness causes him to absorb the hate and jealousy of the character of Othello, which he is studying as his greatest acting triumph.

On the great night of the presentation of "Othello," Silvio becomes "mad" and in the famous scene when the Moor strangles Desdemona, Silvio nearly strangles to death his wife, who is playing to Desdemona role. Of course, Silvio stops before this rash act is fatal, and so there is a happy ending.

The scenes from "Othello" are skillfully handled; in fact, it is the best attempt of putting Shakespeare on the screen that your reviewer has witnessed. Lang is a powerful and convincing actor. His Othello actually lives and shows that he has given the role much study.

Some of the scenes may be considered "wild," but it is generally understood that Venice is far from being tame. The Rev. John H. Doddridge, son of the Rev. John H. Doddridge, who is playing to Desdemona role, in one or two scenes reminds one of an Oriental dance scene.

Opinion: Granting that the picture should be shortened because some of the scenes are a bit drawn out, "Caraval" is a beautiful and pleasing screen spectacle. The night photography is satisfactory. Although you will not recognize a member of the cast, yet you will appreciate the work of Matheson Lang as an actor.

At Loew's State all week.

CONCERNING "THE LOST ROMANCE."
We, who look over the movies day after day, have a hunch that you are going to be quite "wild" over "The Lost Romance."

Here is a human little story. A story that even you might have written. Maybe you are acting unconsciously in your own production of a lost romance. Who can tell?

Sylvia Hayes and Allen Erskine, a young doctor, are married after Sylvia declines to become the wife of Mark Sheridan, an explorer. Sylvia is a librarian before her marriage to Allen.

Elizabeth Erskine, an elderly aunt of Allen who is devoted to him, is a "old maid" and finds her greatest joy in telling fairy stories to the children of others at the library. Elizabeth invites Sylvia to her home to spend her vacation away from the books.

In the beautiful garden, romance is born because Sylvia thinks that Allen can keep alive the spirit of romance. Mark goes away on a five-year expedition.

The first year Sylvia and Allen are so happy. Romance is alive. Allen is ever so considerate of his wife. At the end of five years, although Allen Erskine, Jr., arrived, things are not as they should be. The Erskines have become "common." They quarrel over everything and anything. Romance had left the world.

Aunt Elizabeth, who understands life because she has been disappointed in never having a real love affair, sees the danger in the situation. Sheridan arrives from his five-year trip and his presence complicates matters.

Sylvia failing to see the romance in her situation, she thinks that she should have married Sheridan. They tell Allen and Allen being a "sensible" sort of a duck, agrees.

Here he tells you steps in, kidnaps Allen, Jr., and before you know it, Sylvia and Allen love each other again. Then all is happy in the cottage. Romance has returned.

The story could happen in real life. In fact, it is going on every day in the divorce courts. Many a couple need an aunt like Elizabeth Erskine.

The complete cast is as follows: Mark Sheridan, an Explorer, Jack Holt; Sylvia Hayes, a Librarian, Lois Wilson; Elizabeth Erskine, an elderly aunt, Mayne Kelso; Allen Erskine, Jr., a young doctor, Conrad Naeel; Sylvia's mother, Mrs. Robert Brown; Nurse, Barbara Gurney; Police Lieutenant, Clarence Gahart; Detective, Clarence Burton.

The biggest complaint that can be paid this movie is that the acting is human. It is real. Just like people we all meet every day. Personally, your reviewer enjoyed the work of Elizabeth Erskine as the aunt, the best of all. Here is sympathetic and natural acting.

Just a gentle tip—You can't afford missing "The Lost Romance."

At the Ohio all week.

ONLY ONE WOMAN IN "GODLESS MEN" CAST.

"Godless Men" is the title of the feature that heads the Colonial's program all this week.

It is based on the celebrated story, "Black Paw," by Ben Ames Williams and directed by Reginald Barker, one of the foremost directors.

An all-star cast is seen in the feature, including Helene Chadwick, regarded as one of the most beautiful actresses on the screen and called "the most photographed girl in America" by Russell Simpson, Frankie Lee, Alice B. Francis, James Mason, John Bowers, Lionel Belmore and Irene Rich.

Helene Chadwick not only plays the leading feminine role in the feature, but is the only woman in the picture.

THOUGHT YOU WOULD LIKE TO MEET HER

VIRGINIA CALDWELL.

This was such a perfectly lovely little scene of Virginia Caldwell, who plays one of the chief roles in "What's A Wife Worth?" which is the chief movie event at the Alhambra today, Tuesday and Wednesday. She is a great lover of dogs and her latest pet is shown in this picture.

CAREY MOVIE AT THE REGENT.

Harry Carey in "The Freeze Out," a Western story, is the chief movie on the bill at the Regent this week. Carey has the role of Ohio, a mysterious stranger who drifts into a Western town. Helen Ferguson is chief in the support of Carey.

The bill also includes a comedy.

LUCY COTTON APPEARS IN "BLIND LOVE."

Playing the leading role in "Blind Love," which is the feature offering at the Regent this week, is Lucy Cotton. You will remember that Miss Cotton appeared in "The Miracle of Love," "The Broken Melody" and "The Invisible Fox" all movies. On the stage she understudied the Ina Claire role in "Smoker Girl" and appeared in "Up in Mabel's Room."

The chief male role in "Blind Love" is played by George Le Guere, who played a leading role with Constance Talmadge in "Mamma's Affair."

The bill also includes the usual comedies.

ON THE STAGE TODAY.

At the Murat tonight, a new play, "Artists' Night," will be presented for the first time on any stage. It was written by Samuel Mervin and Peggy Wood. Miss Wood will be in the cast.

The Four Queens, a quartette of girls, tops the new bill at the Lyric.

ANITA STEWART SHOWS BEAUTIES OF VIERLE.

Anita Stewart in "Sewing the Wind," turns the table on the man who would have his ward make a plaything of the girl whom he loves and as a result of her fighting with the greatest weapon a woman has—virtue—she sends the "cheekless home to roost" on the guardian's own doorstep.

Anita, as Rosamond, is the daughter of a woman whose name has, for some time, been a byword in the night life of Gotham. She has been brought up in a convent, where purity and virtue have been her watchwords. Returning to her mother, she finds her in the one of the gaming and dance halls patronized by the fast set. Realizing where she is, Anita runs away and becomes a stage star, and meets James Morrison as Ned, who falls in love with her. And his love is not unrequited.

The owner of the gambling hall learns of Anita's success on the stage and shares her into a visit to the place, on the ground her mother, whom he has turned out of the place into the streets, after she has denounced the crowd, is ill and is calling for her daughter. Anita goes. Ned learns of her visit, and finds her in the gambling palace.

Then Ned's guardian, who has had a part in an effort to save his ward from a "disgraceful" marriage, calls on Anita.

The Well Dressed Woman

By GLORIA SWANSON,
Star in Paramount Pictures.

Miss Talmadge portrays the character of both the mother and the daughter. The writer thinks the picture falls far short of being up to Norma Talmadge standards, and much room is left for better photography. The story is one that does not give latitude enough for Miss Talmadge's ability. There is, however, an excellent moral carried in the story.

At the Isis all week.

PLAZA PROJECT GIVEN APPROVAL

Typographical Union No. 1 Supports Memorial.

A resolution approving the proposed establishment of a plaza in connection with the State war memorial was adopted by Indianapolis Typographical Union No. 1, Sunday.

The resolution follows: "Whereas, the last session of the General Assembly of the State of Indiana passed several measures designed to allow cities of the first class to go to the expense of providing a suitable memorial commemorating the loyalty of veterans of the late World War, and

"Whereas, the local authorities have adopted plans to take advantage of the terms of this law which plans are being opposed to the extent of forcing an election to decide the question; and

"Whereas, Indianapolis Typographical Union No. 1 has a number of members, who because of the sacrifices made during the war are directly concerned to the question of providing a suitable memorial to the nation's heroes; and

"Resolved, by Indianapolis Typographical Union No. 1 in regular session, that we do emphatically and without reservation endorse and commend the proposed World War memorial and the program for construction thereof so far made."

The question of whether there shall be a plaza built by the county and city in connection with the war memorial is expected to be submitted to the voters soon.

HOUSE ANXIOUS TO ACT ON BILLS

Senate, However, Hopes to Get Recess.

WASHINGTON, July 4.—While the House this week is getting down to the real business for which President Harding called Congress, namely the tariff and tax bills, the Senate will try to force insurgents in its midst to accept a vacation they don't want.

House leaders virtually have abandoned plans for a six weeks' hot weather vacation. Instead they will try to put both the tariff and tax bills into the Senate's hands by Sept. 1. This admittedly means hard fast work, because of the magnitude of the two problems of revising the nation's internal revenue and customs laws.

House and Senate leaders agree that it is possible both bills must be handled in the special session. This means they must be in Harding's hands before December when Congress goes into its regular session.

Senator Lodge will present a recess plan this week, after the Senate returns on Tuesday from its holiday and, according to plans, will try to force it through.
