

'Hick,' Drama Critic, Gives Account of Fight Matinee

Carpentier's Role Too Heavy for Great Actor—Compares Gentlemanly Qualities of Great Tragedians.

By WALTER D. HICKMAN.

There is one actor in this world who couldn't take a "curtain call" after a matinee, although an audience of more than 90,000 wanted him to.

Georges Carpentier is the actor. After Georges had finished his part during the fourth "act" of the matinee at Jersey City, he was in no shape to take a curtain call. Jack Dempsey took his "call," although it reminded me of one of those forced affairs which is so often wished upon an audience.

Well, it was a dandy show, although I was scheduled to go a dozen "facts." Carpentier might call the show "A Little Adventure in Forgetfulness," and Dempsey might term it "The Surprise Party."

The more I think of what I saw at this fight, the more convinced I am that the Frenchman handed Dempsey a big surprise in the second round. There is still a bunch of discussion on the fact whether Dempsey swayed under Carpentier's blows in the second round. All I can say is that one of a jury of 90,000 and then some who saw the fight, I saw Dempsey sway in the second round when Carpentier landed the surprise punch.

If Carpentier could have followed up his terrific drive in the second round with an upper cut, which he sent at Dempsey but which just scraped his chin, the matinee might have ended there.

BLOW IN SECOND LACKED POWER.

When Carpentier's blow landed the crowd went wild. Dempsey's expression reminded me of a kid who, on going to a party, trips his trousers in hosing to his best girl. Surprise and a wee bit of fear was written on his face. In a flash that expression was wiped away and Dempsey seemed to be saying to himself, "I won't fool with Frenchie another minute." Dempsey then deliberately forced Carpentier to engage in the dangerous in-fighting which gave Dempsey a chance to land those terrific six-inch jabs against his opponent.

When Carpentier failed to knock Dempsey down with his drive to the chin the Frenchman realized that he was bound to lose the fight. Carpentier had sent his most wicked punch at the champion and only rocked him a wee bit. From then on Carpentier was all out of luck and he knew that sooner or later he would wake up with a lily in his hand, so to speak.

Carpentier may have the brains when it comes to fighting, but he lacked the weight which was necessary to give the knock-out steam to his blows. He didn't hurt Dempsey, although he caused him to wobble.

The verdict seems to be that Carpentier has lost none of his popularity by being knocked out. The Frenchman was game. He fought the best he could, but his best was not good enough to knock out the muscled giant who was his opponent. Carpentier played a great part. He gave the best that was in him and the crowd knew it. He was game and he took his punishment without a whimper. I think it was an act of humanity that Dempsey deliberately knocked Carpentier out in the fourth round, because Carpentier would have been covered with blood and might have been fatally injured if the matinee had continued two more acts.

When Carpentier was knocked down the first time he made a successful effort to get on to his feet. Then Dempsey planted the jabs which sent Carpentier into the land of forgetfulness. Even when he was slipping into the realm of white ships that sail in the clouds, he made one feeble and pathetic effort to lift his right foot, but the muscles would not function.

Carpentier failed to win the championship, but he retains the love and the admiration of the fight fans of America. The crowd was with the Frenchman. His ovation was many times greater than that given Dempsey when he first appeared in the ring.

FRENCHMAN SHOWS GENTLEMANLY INSTINCT.

Carpentier gave the impression that he was a gentleman. When Governor Edwards of New Jersey came into the ring, just before the beginning of the fight, Carpentier left his corner, walked toward the Governor and shook hands with him. Not so with Dempsey. He made a movement as if to get up and while in a half-sitting and standing position, shook hands with the Governor in a perfunctory way. This example tells in a clear way the essential difference which was apparent in the two men.

And yet we saw a different side to Dempsey. After Carpentier had taken the fatal nine counts, Dempsey waited for the Frenchman to recover from the knockout blow. Then Dempsey, knelt

Sight Restored by Grafting Eyes

VIENNA, July 6.—Successful eye grafting was described today by Dr. Koppány in a lecture before the Biological Society here.

He said that he had transplanted new eyes in blind fish and rats, successfully joining the optic nerves so that subjects regained sight.

Dr. Koppány sketched a method by which he said it would be possible to restore partial sight to blinded soldiers if others could be found willing to sacrifice an eye for the purpose.

vaudeville people, who entertained all of their theater managers and a representative from the papers in all cities where their houses were located. C. Rollat, Eggleston, manager of Keith's of Indianapolis, piloted a party of five to the big fight. Eggleston returned late yesterday with his party in great style after spending the Fourth at Atlantic City and Philadelphia.

Nearly forgot to tell you that I saw a bunch of film and screen stars at the fight, but Tom Mix and his big hat seemed to grab off most of the attention. Tom looks like he is a real fellow.

Again I repeat that the program was all wrong in announcing that the matinee was for "twelve acts."

All wrong I say.

THREE SUITS FILED.

SHELBYVILLE, Ind., July 6.—Three complaints have been filed in the Shelby Circuit Court against Otto Corle, Shelby County farmer, in which are demanded payment of notes, foreclosure of mortgages and sale and partition of real estate held by the defendant. One of the complaints was filed by Mrs. Jessie A. Corle, mother of the defendant, who requests the sale of the real estate. The other complaints filed are for payment of notes and the foreclosure of a mortgage.

DEMPSEY IS RAPID THINKER.

All of that talk that Dempsey is not a quick thinker is just plain bunk. Dempsey can not only think rapidly, but he has so much self-control that he can overcome any element of surprise.

Just as interesting as the fight was the audience. It looked like a speedy race crowd dumped into a big bowl. There were numerous Indianapolis people present, but the biggest and the best party was given by the B. F. Keith

FORMER SCHOOL TEACHER DIES

Miss Fidelia Anderson, 82, Invalid Four Years.

Following an illness of one week, Miss Fidelia Anderson, 82, a resident of Indianapolis for more than fifty years and formerly a member of the Shortridge high school faculty, died Tuesday afternoon at 6 o'clock at her home, 607 North Delaware street. Miss Anderson had been an invalid for four years, and had been in poor health since suffering a paralytic stroke about twenty years ago.

Miss Anderson was the last surviving member of her immediate family. Relatives who survive her are A. B. Anderson, judge of the United States District Court, a nephew, and three nieces, Miss Ada Duzan, Miss Jessie Duzan and Miss Grace Duzan, all teachers in the city schools.

Miss Anderson was a member of the Second Presbyterian church, and always took an active interest in church affairs. When it was impossible for her to attend church, she was provided with a program of the church service, and a manuscript of the pastor's sermon.

Funeral arrangements have not been completed.
