

BERESFORD MADE NAME IN WEST
Daley Goes Into Final Rehearsal at Park

Harry Beresford probably is one of the few actors of the stage who actually became a Broadway star over night. The next day after his first appearance in New York in "Shavings," Henry W. Savage, the producer, ordered Beresford's name to be placed in the big lights. That made him a star and in all announcements of the coming of "Shavings" to English's on next Monday as a State Fair Week attraction, the name of the star is as prominent as the play.

A native of Boston, Beresford was one of the well known stars on the other side, having graduated at the Gaiety Theater in London, where for years he was a reigning comedian. Fate taking him to the Western parts of the United States, he gradually built up a sterling reputation as a character actor, first winning attention there in repertoire with Henry E. Dixey.

Starting out on his own, he stayed west on the Mississippi, drawing popularity principally in Barrie plays and comedies written for E. S. Willard. Vaudeville also claimed him for a time.

Tiring of the western country, and fearing that his light was hidden under a bushel, he struck out for New York, where his provincial reputation had long preceded him. He had no difficulty in finding engagements, which came in Irving S. Cobb's ill-fated "Boys Will Be Boys." While this play faded out, Mr. Beresford's performance stood out like a diamond on a black background.

Theatrical managers besieged him, and to make a long story a happy one, Mr. Savage signed him for "Shavings." Broadway knows the rest.

Ask Water Analysis at City Bathing Beach

Mr. Walter Jarvis, director of recreation, has requested the city health department to make another analysis of the water in White River municipal bathing beach at Twenty-Sixth street. Dr. Herman G. Morgan, secretary of the board of public health, pronounced the water safe for bathing several weeks ago, but health officials insisted immediately thereafter. At that time it was understood the health authorities would make frequent bacteriological tests.

Mr. Jarvis said the city life guards on duty at the beach have reported the water appears murky and it was thought best to have it examined. He said there has been no thought of closing the beach.

Oyster Returns to Local Chop Houses

The luscious bivalve returned to the menus of the oyster and chop houses yesterday, the official date for the opening of the oyster season in this part of the country. Indianapolis dealers have made their usual preparations for raising the sea food direct in cold storage from the Atlantic coast. The eastern supply is good and prices will remain about the same as last year. It was reported that William T. Murphy, proprietor of "Oyster Frank's," 408 East Washington street, one of the older oyster houses, has returned from a visit to the lower Chesapeake Bay oyster beds. He said that formerly eastern cities absorbed the best oyster season, but Indianapolis now has the highest grades of New York oysters, selects and standards. Modern shipping methods make it possible for the food to reach this city as fresh as when it is taken from the ocean.

“High-Test”

As Applied to Gasoline Is a Fallacy

It means merely that the gasoline being tested weighs more or less as compared with water at sea level.

Gravity, or test, whether high or low, has no more to do with efficiency of gasoline than the height of a man has to do with his ability to reason.

"High-test" is usually employed as a defense for high price.
