

ARMS PARLEY NOT A PANACEA, SAYS SEN. NEW

Not Expected All Armies of World Will Be Disbanded.

DRAFT BOARDS MEET

"It is not to be expected that all the armies of the world will be disbanded, or the navies scrapped. Indeed, if we can halt where we are a sudden weight of which scarcely can be imagined, much less foretold, will be spared the world," declared United States Senator Harry S. New in speaking of the coming disarmament conference at the third annual meeting of the Indiana Selective Service Association at the Chamber of Commerce Tuesday night.

Senator New said the thing from which he hopes most "is the growing realization of the great fact that the nations cannot go on indefinitely and forever in taxing their people for colossal armaments. That they will maintain armies and navies is not only certain, but necessary, but there are limits which can only be fixed by mutual agreement." He warned that too much should not be expected of the conference, and besought support for the President against foes of the Administration, whom he predicted would attempt to embarrass the Nation's representatives at the conference by demanding that they hold out for the impossible.

Ex-Governor James P. Goodrich praised the Indiana draft board members, who comprise the membership of the selectives, for their spirit, which he said is that which always has pushed this State to the front in time of war.

Achievements of the field artillery in the last German offensive were described by Sidney S. Miller, a major in the outfit. Lucius B. Swift, Indianapolis, served as the speaker.

"The soldier bonus" is impossible of attainment at this time because laborers who "pled the Government for extreme wages" during the war have found compensation appropriations, the Senator said.

"I feel like the soldier, that he has been wronged by that man," he said.

"The approval given to the fine purpose of President Harding in promoting this conference will not be limited to any class, nor to any country. It will be world-wide and universal. While we hope for great things, it will not do to thunder in the index and predict too much. The smaller things, the rivets and the cement of nations still exist and it will occasion no surprise if it develops that some of the participants will enter the conference with suspicious eyes, which they will find it difficult to yield.

"Indeed, the President himself has sought, in a recent speech, to impress upon the mind of the people the fact that we may gain less than we had hoped for. The caution has been uttered not in a spirit of pessimism, but from a sense of great responsibility and confidence. Different nations will have more from others than from ourselves. It is beyond the power of this Government wholly to dictate the methods of procedure, or to define absolutely the range of the subjects to be considered.

"The efficiency of armaments is comparative. Suppose we have today twelve battleships and their associated complement of auxiliary vessels of various types, and some other nation has six and corresponding auxiliaries. If we proceed to build twelve more, and the other nation six more, we shall find ourselves relatively where we were before the expansion. If the conference does no more than to reach an agreement that we shall reduce our armaments, it will have accomplished much, for it will have saved us many hundreds of millions.

"It is a matter of knowledge common to those having relation to the military affairs of the great powers, that since the last shot of the great war was fired the world's chemists and engineers have developed gases and destructive forces more terrible than the most appalling that were employed in that monster conflict. If an engagement can be entered into that will arrest this, a great gain will have been made.

Beyond the possibility that the limits of armament may be fixed there is the hope, but not the certainty, that some of the points of friction from which wars may come may be considered and agreements concerning them reached, Senator New said.

"But get the proposition right. It is not to engage with others to maintain national boundaries with which we have no concern; not an engagement to enter upon war at the behest of some one else; not to make of ourselves a collection agency to join in with some else to keep subject peoples in subjection. It is but to propose to others—all others—that the United States is more than willing to prove its faith by its deeds, to provide for peace by ceasing to provide for mutual destruction, and if that be pacifism, make the most of it."

New officers of the association were elected at an afternoon session as follows: Edward H. Knight, Indianapolis, president; Dr. D. R. Saunders, Frankfort, and George W. Dyer, Indianapolis, secretaries; Harry B. Dyer, Indianapolis, treasurer; Ben H. Alford, Anderson, and William Patterson, Oxford, J. J. Heavey, Huntington, Dr. W. W. Thiele, Shelbyville, and M. R. Hollingsworth, Princeton, members of the executive committee.

COURT SETS WILL ASIDE

HOLLYBURD, Ind., Sept. 7.—The will of Henry Rupp, disposing of an estate valued at $200,000, was set aside by Judge John W. Denaker on the opening day of the Bartholomew County Circuit Court here yesterday.

The complaint to contest the will was filed in the court by Mrs. Sarah Lutz, a daughter of Mr. Rupp. It was claimed that an undue and unequal division of the real estate among the several children was made by the provisions of the will.

SHOPLIFTER SENTENCED

Kate Adams, 33, 4421 Carrollton avenue, who was arrested Saturday by operatives of the Guiley-Hyland detective agency, pleaded guilty to a charge of petit larceny in city court today and was fined $1 and costs and sentenced to one day in jail by Judge Walter Pritchard. A charge of shoplifting against her was dismissed. According to the detectives, Mrs. Adams admitted stealing merchandise valued at $12 from three downtown department stores.

They're Running Big Show

Officers at the State Fair are mighty busy now, answering daily hundreds of questions and making decisions that will keep the gigantic affair running smoothly. Among them are Joseph H. Barr (left), director of the Columbian, who is listening to them the standard operation of these departments. Although the public is welcome at any time in any of the police or fire stations, it is planned to have a close contact with these departments and the only way for the public intelligently to support or criticize the department is by having at least a general knowledge of the conditions," says the statement.

"In order to understand these questions or to grasp their import, we believe a close contact with these departments and with the aims and purposes for which they are organized will be exceedingly beneficial to a large number of our citizenship.

"The board of public safety is arranging for public days at the thirty-one fire stations of the city, police sub-stations and police headquarters, when visitors will be welcomed, and every effort made to explain to them the standard operation of these departments. Although the public is welcome at any time in any of the police or fire stations, it is planned to have a close contact with these departments and the only way for the public intelligently to support or criticize the department is by having at least a general knowledge of the conditions," says the statement.
