

NO ATTEMPT TO SOLVE PROBLEM OF INDUSTRIES

Conference at Washington Only Interested in Present Day Unemployment.

and Philadelphia Public Ledger. Special to Indiana Daily Times

WASHINGTON, Sept. 10.—The national unemployment conference to be held in Washington the latter part of the month will be an effort to deal with the employment problem as it exists and where it exists at the present time.

No attempt, it is understood, will be made to adjust or settle industrial problems of a controversial nature nor to convert the sessions into a debate between the representatives of capital and labor. To prevent the possibility of such a controversy arising in the conference the administration is carefully sifting over the names of men suggested for appointment as delegates with a single view to picking the conference as a representative of the country geographically rather than as representatives of groups of labor and industrial bodies.

The delay in announcement of the appointment of the delegates and fixing the date of the conference is due principally to the painstaking manner in which President Harding and Secretary Hoover are endeavoring to bring about that end. The President, himself, made it plain that there is a growing disposition in the administration to check the governmental tendency to give recognition to groups and interests. The President's attitude was interpreted as a notice to both capital and labor that the conference must not be made a cockpit for their quarrels nor would the Government tolerate demands from either side for special privilege.

Informal reports of the business and industrial situation existing in the White House within the past few days indicate some improvement throughout the country, but hardly an improvement sufficient to have affected the employment situation materially. The grain and cotton situation appears in a better light, it was said, but the situation in the situation with which the Government recently took steps to assist through the War Finance Corporation and the formation of live stock pools among the banking interests of the West and Middle West, has shown no decided change for the better.—Copyright, 1921, by Public Ledger Company.

DELEGATES TO ARMS PARLEY NUMBER FOUR

1920 Mr. Root spent the summer at The Hague in preparation for the leading jurisdiction of the world on the establishment of the League of Nations' court of international justice. In 1908, while Secretary of State in the Roosevelt Cabinet, Mr. Root negotiated the Root-Takahira agreement, which dealt with the desires of the United States and Japan to preserve the economic and political status quo in the Pacific and China. Few Americans have a keener insight into Far Eastern affairs than does Mr. Root, New York jurist. He has served on numerous international arbitration tribunals and in 1912 was awarded the Nobel prize for peace. His last foreign diplomatic mission was as ambassador extraordinary to Russia during the 1917 revolution there.

In addition to the four members of the American delegation, there will be a staff of "advisory counselors" who will be military, naval and economic experts, as well as prominent women, an outstanding ex-service man and representatives in the Senate, was well received.

Harding, it was learned, plans to leave much of the work of preparation of the conference to Hughes.

Consideration now is being given to the selection of twelve principal advisers to the main delegation. In this group will be military, naval and economic experts, as well as prominent women, an outstanding ex-service man and representatives in the Senate, was well received.

Elihu Root is regarded as the most experienced American statesman in international questions and he is regarded as being well versed in Pacific and Far Eastern affairs, having negotiated, while Secretary of State in 1908, the Root-Takahira agreement which guarantees the "open door" principle in China.

REPUBLICAN CLEAVAGE MAY BREAK ANEW

Writer Sees Disagreement Along Standpatter and Progressive Lines.

By WALLACE BASSFORD.

WASHINGTON, Sept. 10.—It was a splendid assemblage that gathered last March to witness the inauguration of President Harding, after eight years of Republican wandering in the wilderness, largely due to President Taft's strong leaning toward corporate interests and to Republican legislative favors to the big rich. The crowd on the presidential pavilion and the reserved sections was made up largely of silk-hatted gentlemen whose names are found in the list of the directors and officers of the corporations, railroads and banks. There were many greetings, much of handshaking and congratulating, but perhaps nothing was more enlightening than the brief confab between one of the guests and one of the wise old Republican Senators who had seen McKinley and Taft come and go. The director was in fine fettle—the conditions were suspicious. He remarked, as he looked about on Republican Senators, Representatives and hangmen, "such a scene of prosperity and without number, that it looks as if the millennium has come."

"Yes," replied the old and wise Senator, "and that same millennium will within a few months, blow up with a loud bang."

It has not yet blown up, but those who saw the beginnings of cleavage in the Republican ranks in 1908, and saw that split result in the election of a Democratic Congress, are strongly minded of those days. Dissension is strong in the Republican ranks today.

They are again finding ample causes for disagreements along the old lines of standpatter and progressive.

While the tariff bill was being put together in the House, the Democrats, with the assistance of Republicans who refused to dance at the crack of the party whip, succeeded in modifying the bill in half a dozen important particulars. In fact they beat the opposition every time in which they allowed to have a separate vote. Now it is learned that the bill is to be laid aside, at least for a time, in order to give the right of way to the taxation bill, which was not started until after the tariff bill had passed the House. There are those who think it is being held aside permanently. The President seems inclined to the view with which Republican defeat has followed their tariff tinkering in the past.

The session which recently took a month's recess while the country is suffering from a score of serious ills, passed but one bill of wide application and large importance—the Agricultural Credits bill.

The President called the session to pass the bill, but the Senate, after a hard fight, voted to lay it over and to take care of the railroads by legislation so that they could at once receive the money owed them by the Government and defer for ten years payment of those sums which the roads owe to the Treasury. None of these three things, which the Republicans claim are wise, salutary and useful, has been accomplished.

Congress got each job about half completed and then took a recess. The Democratic leaders took the view that it was just as well, on the ground that they would, if they remained in session, enact poor and harmful legislation. They, however, have not enough votes to initiate good legislation, nor, in most cases, enough to defeat the bad.

Just as the Senate's bill in Congress should be in such a muddle, it is hard to understand, for the votes recorded in the Congressional Record prove that the average roll call showed only about two-thirds of the Republican membership present, excepting during the first few days and the last few days of the session. In other words, something like one-third of the Republicans were absent on each roll call.

DEATH MYSTERY NEAR SOLUTION, VIEW OF POLICE

Many Indictments Expected to Follow Raid on Greek Booze Steamer.

NEW YORK, Sept. 10.—A vigorous Federal investigation was under way into the plot to smuggle vast quantities of contraband and liquors into the country, and which received a check when Federal agents and sailors on board the Greek steamship King Alexander and seizure of $1,000,000 worth of contraband.

The Federal authorities believe they have evidence that will result in many indictments.

The death list is now put at two. In addition to Frank J. Fitzpatrick, chief of the New York office of the narcotic division, who committed suicide after the raid upon the steamer, the Greek vessel's fourth mate is missing and is believed to have been drowned.

All but thirty of the 326 members of the crew of the King Alexander have been released. It is believed all of the men wounded during the battle will recover.

MOTOR RACES FEATURE LAST DAY OF FAIR

panied by his mother, in an automobile which he is said to have purchased from Daugherty.

The arrest of Church was ordered after the arrest of Daugherty, who obtained evidence that Daugherty was slain in a basement room of the 200th Street Fireman's Fund.

The blood-stained hats of Daugherty and Ausmus were found there, together with a bloody baseball bat, a bloody hammer and blood-stained newspapers and clothing. Each of the bats bore the initials of the missing owner.

HANS RECEIPT FOR THE MONEY.

Church is declared to have admitted purchasing the car, which he drove at the time of his arrest, from Daugherty and a man he did not know, but who is said to have been Ausmus. He had in his possession a receipt given by Daugherty for $5,400, the purchase price of the car.

Miss Anna Barrett, said to be Church's fiance, and her father were questioned at the detective bureau. She denied an engagement to Church but admitted in entire friendship with him.

Church gave as his reason for desiring to purchase the car the assertion that his father, who lives at Eagle River, Wis., had instructed him to buy it.

Police were bewildered in the maze of theories as to the motive for the slaying of Daugherty and Ausmus, and the method in which the deeds were consummated.

Church is a small man of rather slight physique while Daugherty was a powerful man, a former college athlete. It is considered almost inconceivable that Church could have slain Daugherty and Ausmus single-handed with only blunt tools for weapons. The police are inclined to think the slayer had accomplices.

This theory was partly substantiated by a statement by Mrs. Bertha Gardner, who occupied the second floor of the house where Church lived, that she had seen Church and the two other men drive up in front of the house in an automobile Thursday afternoon.

Daugherty and Ausmus left the auto shop early this morning to deliver the car to Church. Church is said to have made efforts to induce Daugherty to leave Ausmus behind.

TWO SALES MEN MYSTERIOUSLY DISAPPEAR.

Half an hour after leaving the agency Daugherty telephoned that payment was to be made at the Madison and Kedzie State Bank, and a chauffeur was sent to bring Daugherty and Ausmus back after the car had been delivered. Neither Daugherty, Ausmus or Church appeared at the car and the first two never had been seen alive since. It later was learned that Church had an account of the bank but his mother had a small sum on deposit.

On the theory that the man may have been committed at the instigation of a band of automobile thieves, squads of police were conducting a round-up of all known or suspected automobile thieves.

RELIEF FOR MINISTERS.

LONDON, Sept. 10.—Harold Pomeroy

IPSWICH, England, Sept. 10.—Diseased boards have decided to make an allow-

LONDON, Sept. 10.—Harold Pomeroy

He left a note declaring he was not insane; but the coroner's verdict was that he was.

It was again pointed out that the Harding Administration entered upon the actual preliminaries of the conference in a spirit of high faith. Its leading spokesmen emphasized that "no nation ever engaged upon so lofty an enterprise in a more disinterested spirit than that which marks our interest in the armaments conference." There is evidently some confidence both at the White House and the State Department that if the six nations which are to confer in
