

CADLE PLANS TO DIRECT WORK OF TABERNACLE

Religious Services to Continue, Despite Association Discord.

Following the resignation of Dr. George Savary of the First Congregational Church and Dr. Matthew F. Smith of the First Presbyterian Church as members of the Cadle Tabernacle Evangelistic Association, the withdrawal of W. G. Monardi as a member of the Cadle Tabernacle and the resignation of Bob Jones, evangelist, as associate pastor of the tabernacle, E. Howard Cadle, builder of the tabernacle, today declared that the religious work of the tabernacle will continue under his personal direction.

That there was discord in the ranks of the members of the association became apparent yesterday when the Rev. Mr. Jones, after conducting a revival for three days, resigned and left the city.

CADLE DECLINES TO SIGN CONTRACT

Mr. Cadle, in a statement, blames certain hostile influences of local ministers, whom he claims have opposed his method of conducting revivals.

The breach became apparent when Mr. Cadle received a contract to sign under which he would transfer all of his rights of managing the tabernacle to the Cadle Tabernacle Evangelistic Association of which Ed Jackson, secretary of State, is president.

Mr. Cadle said that he refused to sign the following contract:

"In that consideration that the Cadle Tabernacle Evangelistic Association is to put on a program as outlined in the object of the incorporation of said association: The said Howard Cadle hereby agrees to assign, transfer, give possession and release to the Cadle Tabernacle Evangelistic Association the corner of Ohio and New Jersey streets in the city of Indianapolis, for an indefinite period, or so long as the said Cadle Tabernacle Evangelistic Association continues to carry out the religious and educational program that may be appropriate from time to time by the members of the association in accordance with the objects assigned by said association.

"It is further agreed on the part of said Cadle not to say or to make any expenses connected with the upkeep of the building, janitor hire, light and fuel and that the said association is not to be liable to any and whatever expenses in connection with the expense of the association in putting on the programs that may be outlined in keeping with the objects of the association. It is further agreed that the association will solicit subscriptions and donations, to be made from time to time by public and private appeal for the same.

ASKE AGREES TO OTHER OBLIGATIONS

"It is further understood and agreed that the direction of said association assumes no liability and is not responsible individually for any expense that may be incurred other than the amount of money received as indicated above."

"It is further agreed by said Cadle that said Tabernacle is not to be rented, leased or in the possession of same turned over to any person or persons, but will be retained with the carrying out of the program of the association, and in case there should be any conflict of dates or arrangements for possession of the building, the wishes of the association shall be acceded to and their control unquestioned."

The choir meets tonight at the tabernacle and I am sure that it is loyal to me and we will proceed to bring noted ministers and evangelists to the city," Cadle said.

"There is one thing certain that as long as the Cadle Tabernacle stands nothing but the gospel of Jesus Christ will be preached from the platform."

The bill arrived at the White House from the Senate and was immediately sent to the Treasury Department for an opinion which is expected late today or tomorrow. ALICE BLAKE, PUT ON STAND AGAIN, CLINGS TO STORY

Mr. Tennant, Mr. McGee and Mr. Hutsell as canvassers at $500 each.

Today the controller said he would not pay more than $1,000 for the two jobs assigned by Mr. Tennant and Mr. McGee, and $300 for the canvassing work of McBryne. The $14,000 appropriation would permit payments of only this amount.

The controller came out on top of the heap today, however, when Mr. Ashby informed him that he had decided that the State's case, by explaining the change made was because she was misunderstood and in the interest of truth.

Another point upon which the defense made much was the fact that Virginia Rappé, "the girl in the 'm's," had allowed an ion bath to and from which she was carried by Fred Arbutke. The State partly repaired this breach in its case when Alice Blake testified that Arbutke responded to the declaration of Miss Rappé with admonition:

"Shut up; you're crazy."

The two girls painted a rather sorry picture of the Arbutke party. In retrospect it seemed rather tame to both that it appeared from their testimony.

There were "some drinks, some food, some dancing and some conversation," then the tragic denouement.

It was Virginia Rappé who suggested the dancing, Alice Blake believed. She was an excellent dancer, well known to her friends. In uncertain she said so. Her replies sometimes were a full minute long. Asked as to one detail of the treatment of Miss Rappé in which Arbutke figured, it seemed as if she could not answer. Her lips moved and her face quivered. The scene of a girl dancing, she said, was carried to the courtroom as it was carried for her words. Finally they came clear and distinct when finally spoken.

Both girls were frankly "peev'd" over their voluntary seclusion and answered the questions of the defense that Counsel McNab designed to show that they were impounded by the district attorney.
