EXPLAINS NEW PROVISIONS OF INCOME TAX

Collector Thurman Throws Light on Intricate Tax Problem.

Two new and important provisions, which have been the subject of frequent inquiry, are contained in the revenue act of 1921, according to M. Bert Thurman, collector of internal revenue. The first relates to personal exemptions allowed married persons, and the second requires a return be made on gross income of $2,000 or more.

According to Collector Thurman, the act provides a married person, living with husband or wife, whose net income for 1921 was $2,000 or less, shall be allowed a personal exemption of $2,500. If the net income of such person was more than $2,000, the exemption is $2,000. Under the revenue act of 1918 the personal exemption allowed a married person was $2,000, regardless of the amount of net income. The normal tax rate remains unchanged, 4 per cent on the first $4,000 of net income above the exemption and 8 per cent on the remaining net income.

In order that an income slightly in excess of $5,000 shall not be subjected to an inordinately disproportionate tax, because of the reduction of the exemption to $2,000 thereon, the law provides that such reduction shall not operate to increase the tax, which would be payable if the exemption were $2,500, by more than the amount of the net income in excess of $5,000.

For example, on a net income of $5,010 the tax, without this saving clause, would be $330.40, which is 4 per cent on $8,010, the amount of net income less an exemption of $2,000. The actual tax is $110.40, computed as follows: From the net income of $5,010 is deducted $2,500, leaving $2,510, the 4 per cent tax on which amounts to $100.40. To this is added $10, "the amount of net income in excess of $5,000."

The personal exemptions allowed married persons apply also to the head of a family, a person who supports in one household one or more relatives by blood, marriage or adoption.

When RETURN MUST BE FILED.
Heretofore, a person whose net income was less than his exemption ($1,000 if single, or $2,000 if married) was not required to file a return. Under the revenue act of 1921, if the gross income of an individual equalled or exceeded $5,000, or if the combined gross income of a married couple and that of dependent minor children equalled or exceeded $5,000, a return must be filed, regardless of the amount of net income.

"Net income" is gross income, less certain deductions. The fact that allowable deductions from gross income, for business expenses, losses, bad debts, etc., may reduce the net income to an amount below the personal exemption of $1,000 or $2,000, does not alter the requirement to file a return of gross income, if such gross income equalled or exceeded $5,000.

For example, on a net income of $5,010 the tax, without this saving clause, would be $330.40, which is 4 per cent on $8,010, the amount of net income less an exemption of $2,000.
