

DANNY DEEVER' OF 5TH MARINES MAY BE FREED

Clarence L. Massey, Held as Slayer of Sergeant, Thought Innocent.

MOTHER WANTS HIM

Special to Indiana Daily Times and Philadelphia Public Ledger.

WASHINGTON, March 7.—The "Danny Deever" of the famous 5th Marines, Clarence L. Massey of Monongahela City, Pa., will be released from Ft. Leavenworth Military Prison, if efforts of Congressman Kelly (Pa.) and other officials here are successful. Massey was court-martialed for killing a sergeant in a fit of rage. He has served two years of a life sentence. His friends believe him innocent. They say evidence in his trial was incomplete. A widowed, dependent mother is praying Mr. Kelly will be able to obtain recommendation for his pardon.

The case was brought to the attention of Congressman Kelly several months ago. War Department officials advised him to get affidavits from officers and comrades of Massey before requesting re-opening of the case. Those affidavits are now ready. They were obtained from Massey's captain, his lieutenant, a sergeant and a number of his "buddies." They bear eloquent testimony of his good character and some express a doubt he was the murderer.

ON DUTY FOR FORTY-FIVE DAYS.

Mr. Kelly has gone over the records of the court-martial carefully. He says the evidence brought out substantially the following narrative:

Massey had been on continuous duty in the front line trenches for forty-five days. He was back of the lines with several friends. They were hungry—too hungry to wait for mess. They decided to eat in a little French restaurant nearby. The wine they drank with their meal was unexpended. They pocketed the money in their bilharious when they returned to the barracks—though there was no real disorder. They went to bed, lights were out, but good-natured banter still passed between the bunks. A sergeant ordered them to "shut up." It was agreed he was not a very popular sergeant with any of the men. But there was temporary quiet. When the talk died down he could be heard snoring toward them. Then came the flash of a revolver in the darkness. The lights were lit. The sergeant was dying on the floor. Massey was arrested.

GUN CLEAN.

AFTER SHOT.

On one point Mr. Kelly is certain. Evidence was presented to show Massey's revolver was clean—not a bullet had been fired from it when it was seized. But other testimony was damningly circumstantial and the boy was sentenced. Some of his "buddies" openly expressed the opinion he had simply been made the goat.

Oned much longer. Mr. Kelly believes, the lit sentence will be short, after all. Mrs. Mrs. A. Massey, too, is very ill. She needs her son. Mr. Kelly hopes to be able to reopen the case in a week or so in the hope the judge advocate general will see fit to recommend a pardon.—Copyright, 1922, by Public Ledger Company.

NEW YORK, March 7.—Apropos the recent collapse of many Wall Street bucket shops—there is no need to put an "alleged" before the "bucket shop" designation applied to any brokerage house that falls in a rising stock market—a school has been opened in the 200 pages of the New York Stock Exchange.

It has been named the New York Stock Exchange Institute, and it is conducted by the Wall Street division of the New York University at 90 Trinity place.

"We are giving to these boys from the New exchange work which is a school lesson of the work they are doing," explained Dr. A. Wellington Taylor.

"They frequently have occasion to write out orders for buying or selling stocks and bonds that come in over the telephone. Accordingly we have emphasized permanence in connection with the class in business English."

"We also explain to these boys in simple terms the functions of Wall Street, and the need of an organized market. The boys, accustomed to seeing the exchange as a place where men shout themselves hoarse and full of apparent confusion, are taught the laws governing the seeming confusion."

Boys who take the course are to be given the best chances for promotion.

Bert Williams, the most noted negro on the American stage, once told the writer he was more than two-thirds white. His grandfather on his mother's side was the consul of Denmark and of Spain to the British Bahamas. He was well educated and of polished manners and he spoke many languages. As a youngster he served an enlistment in the United States Navy. His full name was Elbert Austin Williams.

The Manhattan Opera House, built by the late Oscar Hammerstein as a home for grand opera, has been sold for $900,000 to the Scottish Rite Masons, who will convert the structure in West Thirty-Fourth street into a temple. Many new operas were given for the first time upon the Manhattan stage, and here is where Mary Garden, Tetrazzini, Bondi and Orville Harrold got their start. The building was opened as a rival to the Metropolitan Opera House sixteen years ago.

Mayor Hylan thinks exercise is a good thing, particularly for city employees, "who have crawled so far into dark corners and pigeon holes" as to have lost sight of the fact that recreation is "indispensable to happiness and progress and as necessary to life as food and drink." He is out with a proclamation to the 80,000 employees of the city calling upon them to engage in sport of some kind.

Maids have their board and lodgings supplied by their employers and often when seen leaving or entering the hotel arrayed in their furs they are mistaken for wealthy guests.

Effort to Smuggle French Securities Leads to Detection

CHILDREN LOSE FEET BY FREEZING
Amputations Reported Not Uncommon in Armenia.

BERLIN, March 7.—French securities valued at several million marks, stolen by German soldiers during the war, have just been restored to their owners, owing to an attempt to smuggle them out of the country.

The securities were found by two soldiers in an abandoned French chateau and brought to Germany. Acquaintances who tried to cut in on the division reported to the police and the soldiers were arrested boarding a train for the occupied area. They could not be tried for theft, owing to the general amnesty due to pre-revolutionary offense, but were convicted and sentenced for violating the so-called capital flight law prohibiting the removal of property abroad to escape taxation. ## SUSPECTS HELD IN CHICAGO MURDER

Wealthy Merchant, Cousin of State's Attorney, Slain.

Why citizens often have had to wait ten or fifteen minutes before they could get a telephone connection with police headquarters has been discovered by Chief of Police Herman F. Rikhoff and remedial measures undertaken.

Chief Rikhoff said it required twelve minutes for him to get headquarters over the telephone from his residence. He found, on investigation, although there are five trunk lines into headquarters, only one of them was used by operators at the main exchange for calls to headquarters. Apparently, he said, the only user made of the other four was for outgoing calls. The chief complained to officials of the Indiana Bell Telephone Company and said he received a promise arrangements would be made for both incoming and outgoing calls on all five trunks.

The men—Frank Salerno and James Carino—purchased a store from Benedetti and quarreled with the victim over payments.

Carino, it is learned, was born in a mysterious telephone message. He was standing at a corner waiting for a taxi when an automobile drew up beside him, the slayer stepped out and after talking a few minutes in a loud voice with Benedetti, shot him.

Adolph Rossman, a witness to the slaying, identified Salerno as the man who fired the first shots.

CHICAGO, March 7.—Two suspects were held today in connection with the probe into the murder of Anacleto Benedetti, wealthy Italian merchant and cousin of Robert Crowe, State's attorney.

CHICAGO, March 7.—Producing more "Doc Kenneicos" for America's main streets" was declared to be the biggest problem facing the National Congress on Medical Education meeting here today.

"We have come to a place in our development where only the second-rate physicians are trying to practice in the country," said J. L. Litsenberg, president of the Minnesota Medical School asserted.

"The rural communities of the United States are facing a serious shortage of competent physicians," he said.

"This convention would do well to start a 'back to the farm' movement for doctors."

"American cities are overstocked with medical men who would be of greater service to society in rural places, but who are unwilling to make the effort of coming into the country."

Dr. Litsenberg pointed to Army physical examinations as evidence that country folk are not as healthy as city folk.

"The old theory," he said, "that rural life invariably made strong bodies was thoroughly exploded when we began to select men for the Army. We learned that the city lads in the main, were the sturdiest."

This fact he said was the result of better medical attention in larger cities.

NO AIRSHIPS FOR GERMANY

Allied Decision Will Not Deter Building in United States.

Special to Indiana Daily Times and Philadelphia Public Ledger.

WASHINGTON, March 7.—American organizers of the General Air Service, the company which proposes to operate a fleet of lighter-than-air type of craft between New York and Chicago, do not believe the recent decision of the Council of Ambassadors and the Aeronautical Committee on Control, operating in Germany, will affect their plans. The council, according to advice from Berlin, is determined that Germany shall not continue to build large dirigibles, which intended for commercial purposes might be turned to military uses. The council believes it dangerous to permit the maintenance of an aircraft industry in Germany.

"The intention of the council and the apparent intention of the Allies to prevent the Germans from building airships will not interfere with the plans of General Air Service," said Clifford A. Tinker, former Navy air officer, who is connected with the company, "the General Air Service does not expect to build airships in Germany. The ships will be built in the United States and the dirigibles which have been made abroad for certain parts and material I do not believe would be used."

Lieutenant Tinker also said that action of the council will have absolutely no effect on the work of the Zeppelin which Germany, under the terms of the reparations provisions of the Versailles Treaty, is building for the Navy.—Copyright, 1922, by Public Ledger Company.
