

GRANT COUNTY IN QUANDARY

Officials Await Results of Refusal to Obey State Orders.

Special to The Times.
MARION, Ind., March 7.—County officials today were sitting tight, awaiting word from the State board of accounts, following action of the Grant County commissioners late Monday in refusing to comply with an order of the State board and disallow a claim filed by the superintendent of the poor farm, for pay for labor performed by inmates.

The State board has instructed field examiners to check back to the superintendent all money paid out in the past for such labor, and instructed the commissioners to refuse to approve such claims in the future. The commissioners, however, Monday approved a claim for $135 for inmate labor, acting on advice of the county attorney. The State board claims Grant County is the only county in Indiana that pays inmates for labor, and claims such payment is illegal. The custom has been followed here for the past twenty years and funds for the payment have been appropriated by the county council during that time.

HARTMAN, FREE ON ONE COUNT, FACES OTHERS

erick Van Nuy, who was United States district attorney when he indicted them, were returned, may be named as special United States attorney, to try the cases as he is thoroughly familiar with them from beginning to end, while the present district attorney, Homer Elliott, knows about them only through the files in his office and his general knowledge of the case. However, this is a matter which will depend largely upon whether or not Mr. Elliott wishes to handle the cases himself in the event he decides to push prosecution.

SAIS HARTMAN PLANS TO GO WEST.
Attorney Ira M. Holmes said, following the return of the verdict, Hartman expects to move to California for residence as soon as all cases now pending against him are disposed of.

Hartman was acquitted after the jury had deliberated one hour and forty minutes.

The verdict was returned at 9:10 o'clock to Judge A. M. Bain, of the Morgan Circuit Court, who sat as special judge in the case. The rendering of the verdict was a signal for a demonstration on the part of spectators, most of whom apparently were sympathizers and friends of the defendant.

DISPLAYS EMOTION AT VERDICT.
With the return of the verdict, the commotion which has marked Hartman's demeanor throughout the trial with the exception of one occasion when he broke down and wept for a few minutes, entirely deserted him. He rose slightly from his chair, then fell on the shoulders of Ira M. Holmes, one of his attorneys, and sobbed.

"God bless that jury! God bless that jury!" he exclaimed.

Mrs. Hartman was far more composed than her husband. As the jurors left the box, Hartman, still weeping, shook hands with each member. He also shook hands with Judge Bain and thanked him for the fair trial he had received.

Twelve ballots were taken by the jury before a verdict was reached. The first two ballots stood eight for acquittal and four for conviction. On the next three ballots the vote was nine to three, and on the sixth ballot another juror swung over to acquittal. However, the eighth and ninth ballots showed a loss of one for the defense, the vote again standing nine to three for acquittal. The tenth and eleventh found only one juror voting for conviction, and on the twelfth ballot the verdict was reached.

CHARGES GREW OUT OF FRANCIS' CONFESSION.
The charges out of which grew the case in Criminal Court were first made by Frank Francis, confessing burglar, in an alleged "confession" at Louisville, late in September last year. At the time Francis was under arrest in Louisville charged with forgery and burglary. It has been the contention of Hartman ever since that this "confession" was made on the promise that Francis would be tried only on the charge of burglary dropped. The "confession" was made to William H. Blodgett, of the Indianapolis News and Ira M. Holmes testified in the trial that Detective Frank Elvaine, at that time a detective on the Louisville police force, told him he had seen Blodgett "lay a packers on the desk of Chairman Blodgett" of the Louisville board of public safety. At all events Capt. William H. De Forester of the detective department and Francis brought from jail to the office of the board of safety where he was interviewed by Blodgett.

In this confession Francis charged that Hartman knew the furniture which he had obtained from Francis was stolen, and in fact had taken part in planning its theft. He implicated Hartman in charges ranging from receiving stolen goods and stolen automobiles to violation of the liquor laws.

After this a determined effort to force Hartman off the Republican ticket as a candidate for city judge was made by interests hostile to his candidacy, but he steadfastly refused to resign.

On Oct. 11, Francis and his wife Lura were brought here from Louisville by Captain De Forester and taken immediately to the Marion county grand jury where they remained a long time and gave testimony regarding the return of the indictments on which Hartman is now under arrest.

Late that afternoon Federal authorities unexpectedly took a hand and Mr. and Mrs. Francis were arrested on a Federal warrant issued by order of Frederick Van Nuy, United States district attorney. The next morning they were taken to the office of Mr. Van Nuy, where they remained for an hour and half, and made a signed statement. That afternoon they were taken before the Federal grand jury which happened to be in session, and were taken back to Louisville by Captain De Forester shortly afterwards.

The next day indictments were returned in Federal Court against J. Herbert Hartman; his wife, Lura; his brother, Fred; Frank Francis and his wife, Lura; Karl Kunkle and Cecil Williams, and all were arrested and released on bond the day following, Oct. 14. The indictments were in four counts, and included violation of the national prohibition law, transportation of stolen automobiles in interstate traffic, and conspiracy to commit these acts.

OTHER CASES PENDING.
These cases are now pending in Federal Court.

On Oct. 15, the Marion County grand jury returned indictments against Mr. and Mrs. Hartman, Fred Hartman, Mr. and Mrs. Francis, Karl Kunkle and Fred "Doggie" Johnson. These indictments contained charges of receiving stolen goods, receiving stolen automobiles taken from other States, conspiracy to commit a felony, and carrying home and burglarizing and transporting liquor. Hartman was charged with transporting liquor, receiving stolen goods and receiving stolen automobiles taken in other States. Mrs. Hartman was charged with receiving stolen goods.

The present case is based on a charge that Hartman received a fur cape which had been stolen by Francis.

HARTMAN REMOVED BY COMMITTEES.
About this time after all efforts to force Hartman to resign from the Republican ticket had failed, he was "removed" at a hurriedly called meeting of precinct committee, and Delbert O. Wilmet, who was elected city judge at the November election, was substituted by the Republican city committee.

Hartman brought a mandamus proceeding before Judge Theophilus J. Wolf in Superior Court, room 6, to compel the election commissioners to print his name on the official ballot, but Judge Wolf ruled against him after a hotly contested trial.

The present case went to trial two weeks ago, Feb. 20, in Criminal Court before Judge Murray Bain of Martinsville, judge of the Morgan Circuit Court, after Hartman had taken a change of venue from Judge James A. Collins.

PLAN TO MAKE VOLSTEAD LAW MORE EFFECTIVE

The Volstead act which is supposed to provide ways and means of enforcement of prohibition "has failed because it expects all prohibition enforcement officers from the usual civil service rules," according to Imogen B. Oakley of Philadelphia, chairman of the civil service division of the General Federation of Women's Clubs which this winter is concentrating in a very special way on the enforcement of the eighteenth amendment of the Constitution.

The National Civil Service Reform League offers convincing proof that as a result many of those officers, by lack of education and experience, are wholly incapable and many more are ex-bartenders and ex-saloon keepers, who are opposed to the amendment and its enforcement," declares Mrs. Oakley.

"The civil service division of the general federation has, therefore, joined with the National Civil Service Reform League in sponsoring a bill which is now before Congress and which provides that all prohibition enforcement officers shall be put under the usual civil rules. This bill is known as House Bill 995 and Senate Bill 1376 and every club is asked to write to Frederick R. Lehlbach, chairman of the committee on reform in civil service in the House, and Thomas Sterling, chairman of the committee on civil service and reorganization in the Senate and urge the passage of the bill."
