How to Make Grape Jelly From Bottled Grape Juice

Inexpensive and Takes Only Ten Minutes

By Ann Proctor

You can make the finest grape jelly you ever tasted in ten minutes from bottled grape juice at a cost of only 7 or 8 cents for a big six-ounce glass. This jelly is much better flavored than that made by the old method requiring unripe grapes, because grape juice is pressed from ripe, full-flavored grapes. This is the way to make it. Measure out 4 cups (1 qt. bottle) of grape juice and 7/8 level cups (3/4 lb.) of sugar into large sauce pan, stir and bring to boil. Add at once 1 bottle (6-ounce cup) of CERTO, stirring constantly and bring to hard boil for one minute. Remove from fire, skin and pour into glasses at once.

This makes 15 six-ounce glasses of the very finest grape jelly for only 7 or 8 cents a glass and it's so easy even a child can do it. CERTO is pure concentrated fruit pectin (Mother Nature's Jelly Maker) the use of which is highly endorsed by government authorities and cooking experts and is obtainable from most any grocer or druggist. Accompanying each bottle of CERTO is a book giving nearly a hundred recipes for making all kinds of jams, jellies and marmalades by the famous CERTO Process, which takes only 1 minute boiling and never fails. For extra free copies of the CERTO Book of Recipes write Pectin Sales Company, Inc., Dept. 182, Rochester, N. Y.

Important: Be sure to make your Strawberry, Raspberry, Blackberry and Cherry Jam and Currant Jelly this year with CERTO. Costs less, looks and tastes better, and never fails. If your grocer or druggist does not have CERTO, please call Miss Klein, Main 4900 to learn where to obtain it—Advertisement.

Advocates Bible Be Edited Along 'Newspaper Lines'

CHICAGO, March 31.—Modern civilization needs a new Bible edited along "newspaper lines," Dr. J. M. Vance of Wooster College, Wooster, Ohio, declared before the national convention of the Religious Education Association here.

The new book, according to Dr. Vance, should carry headlines, subheads, editorials and news bulletins. It should contain the same old and new testaments, he said, but should be "put up in a style to meet the needs of the twentieth century."

"Biblical literature should be stressed. Young America is totally ignorant of the Good Book as it is now written. Something should be done to acquaint them with its great truths."

SAYS TREATY MAKING GRAVE SENATE DUTY

Beveridge Refers to Weighty Problems of Solons in Terre Haute Speech.

Special to The Times.

TERRE HAUTE, Ind., March 31.—Framers of the Constitution of the United States would stand aghast if they could hear some of the bizarre notions now advanced regarding the part played by the Senate in the making of treaties, Albert J. Beveridge, candidate for the Republican nomination of United States Senator, said at a meeting held under the auspices of the League of Women Voters here last night.

Mr. Beveridge said the duty and responsibility of the Senate, when passing upon a treaty, is far weightier and graver than the duty and responsibility of the President, for the President or the Secretary of State, acting as his agent, can merely negotiate a treaty, while the power and responsibility of making effective and putting it into force falls upon the Senate alone.

TREATIES CANNOT BE REPEALED.

Few persons realize the fact that a treaty once ratified cannot be repealed as simply as is the case with a law. It cannot be changed without the consent of both parties to the treaty, the speaker said.

"If today public sentiment favors the enactment of a certain law," Mr. Beveridge said, "and Congress accordingly passes that law, and tomorrow public sentiment changes, Congress can repeal or amend that law, as the people then desire. But, if today public sentiment favors the ratification of a treaty, and the Senate accordingly ratifies that treaty, and tomorrow public sentiment changes, the Senate cannot repeal or amend that treaty as the people then desire.

"The President can do nothing except to negotiate a treaty—he has no power whatever beyond that. The Secretary of State is nothing but the President's agent. A treaty, when negotiated, is merely a proposal, exactly like an unsigned contract.

RATIFICATION LIKE SEALING MORTGAGE.

"A treaty does not become binding—indeed, it does not become a treaty at all—until the Senate ratifies the treaty. Ratification of a treaty by the Senate is exactly like the signing and sealing of a mortgage by the owner of property when mortgaging that property.

"A Senator who allows partisan politics to sway him for or against a treaty is false to the Republic, betrays his oath of office, and violates the Constitution. No words of condemnation exist strong enough to brand properly such a public servant. Party politics stop at the seashore. Woe the America when this golden rule of patriotism is abandoned by American Senators."
