

1922 TO BE BIG BUILDING YEAR

All Indications Point to Record Season, Contractor Says.

Record-breaking construction work which started in Indianapolis last year is still continuing and there is every reason to believe that the season of 1922 will be the most prosperous and largest ever known in Indianapolis, according to Walter W. Wise, building contractor.

"In the last ten months or thereabout there has been a marked reduction in the price of building material," Mr. Wise said. "In some instances this reduction amounted to as much as 20 per cent. It averaged considerably more than 10 per cent. With the great demand for material and the constantly increasing amount of building activity now in progress it seems certain that there will be some reaction in price, in fact to my mind it is inevitable, therefore, I consider the present time as ideal for building of any description.

"Many persons have come to realize that conditions right now are ideal for home-building, or for any other kind, and the winter among them have not been slow to take advantage of this advantageous situation. The increased efficiency of labor, both skilled and common, all have tended to bring about a reduction of building costs and has been a very important factor in bringing this situation about. During the World War the young men of the Nation were under arms; the entire strength of the country was turned away from its usual channels of industry and put into the vital work of producing war materials.

"For the first time since that upheaval conditions are as favorable as they were before the war. It certainly looks to me as if this were the ideal time to begin a building operation of any character or description.

"Our own experience recently has convinced us that there is a resumption of building activity now under way on a scale unprecedented in this history of Indianapolis. During the winter and early spring we completed many work orders and three apartment houses, remodeled the Best Laundry with a front of unique and attractive design in terra cotta, and did a large amount of work on the St. Marks Lutheran Church at Prospect and Linden streets.

"This is only a small part of the work we have done and there is a great amount still to be accomplished. This conviction beyond any question that 1922 is to be the biggest building year on record."

and barges bearing the Stines name. This, in spite of the fact that under the peace treaty a large number of German river craft were surrendered to France and Belgium.

RUSSIAN SHIPING.

But important and money making as these river lines are for Stines, he long ago began to turn his attention to the greater possibilities of ocean traffic. During the first half of the war he bought a large block of stock in the German East African and the Waerinn lines. Later he obtained a big interest in the Deutsche Werft, a concern of Hamburg which builds ships. Another which built his all-embracing net was the Hamburg Verkehrs Corporation, which is not only interested in shipbuilding, but owns hotels in Hamburg, Berlin and Frankfurt on the Main. Further more, it is interested in German seaside resorts like Travemunde, and has vessels that carry excursionists there.

At Flensburg, Stines has a company whose work, small ships ply the Baltic. Within the past two years he formed the Hugo Stines lines and this new concern was the cause of one of the deepest humiliations of his business career. Stines owned a considerable block of stock in the once great Hamburg-American Steamship Company, and was made a director. The concern, however, to cooperate from the paralysis caused by the war and the loss of its biggest and best ships, was preparing to resume active steamship service between Hamburg and South America. The latter has always been a favorite field for German exploitation, and German business firms have many friends there.

STINES IS HUMILIATED.

Imagine the surprise of the managing directors, therefore, when one fine morning as they slipped their coffee and pursued the Hamburg papers, their eyes were drawn by a glaring advertisement in which the Hugo Stines lines announced the inauguration of a regular service between Hamburg and Buenos Aires.

For a fellow director to steal a march on them like that wasn't considered "clubby." There was an immediate conference and Stines, the brilliant German marksman, was flung out on his ear. Not, of course, literally and physically. But his name ceased to adorn the board of directors of the Hapag, as the great shipping company is known, and he was expelled from the Hamburg directors' club. Stines' return was two-fold - he advertised and pushed his South American lines more than ever and he immediately took some of his ever-ready cash and invested it in the North German Lloyd, the great Bremen rival of Hamburg.

It was in connection with his shipping interest that Stines got some of the publicity he so much shuns and hates.

There were built for him three new 12,000-ton ships. Stines decided to name them, Ludendorff, Hindenburg and Tirpitz. As representatives of Germany were then conferring with the allies, the latter took this action of Stines as a good sign that Germany was still kaiserlic, militarist and unrepentant. Inside Germany many of the Stines ships went after Stines with a sharp stick.

The whole fiasco surprised him immensely. A total misreading of popular and political psychology, he had chosen the offensive names for his ships thinking of the men who bore them as persons whom Germany once idolized and imagining the people still did so. When he realized his error, it was too late.

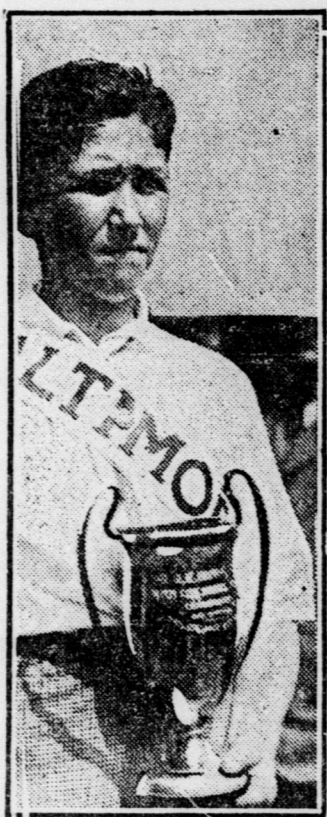

But that is about the only mistake that can be charged up to Stines in the shipping game. One of his greatest strokes has been to plan two fleets of ships. One is to consist of 12,000-tonners and the other of 2,000-tonners. His experts have advised him that 12,000-ton ships are not only much cheaper than the Titanic vessels, are not only run more economically, but that tonnage will perhaps earn more money and give better service than the huge floating hotels.

HAS EYE ON RUSSIA.

The Stines 2,000-ton ships are being built for a specific purpose. Stines, like every wideawake German business man, has his eyes on Russia. Some day he will not very long expect that immense country to be opened once more to the commerce of the world. With the almost total breakdown and ruin of the Russian railways, the main means of transport of goods to and from Russia for some years will be by sea. Stines has an entire department of his executive branch here in Berlin devoted to the study of Russia. They are experts on Russia.

Only recently the director of this department returned from a personal visit and reported to his chief that eight years of war, blockade and neglect have put Russian harbors into a terrible state. The big freight ships that America and England have will probably not be able to negotiate these harbors. But where they fail, the Stines 2,000-tonners will slide in like ducks on a mill pond. So will the Stines tankers built at Kiel. Already, Stines' ships are busy at work feeding other branches of the Stines business. They bring iron ore from Sweden and timber from Finland. Thus they fetch raw material for Stines' blast furnaces and Stines' paper, pulp and cellulose mills. And they carry back to Sweden and Finland, from Stines' mills, some of the manufactured materials those countries so badly need.

As they ply back and forth, these vessels also pass another interesting set of Stines' ships. These are mere smacks, but they carry the Stines houseflag and they are engaged in the very important job of helping to feed Germany. They are the Stines' "herald boats."—Copyright, 1922, NEA Service, Inc.

Highways and By-Ways of Lil' Ol' New York

By RAYMOND CARROLL
(Copyright, 1922, by Public Ledger Company.)

NEW YORK, May 29.—The average for last year for strangers arriving in New York City was 125,000 a day, or the equivalent of the entire population of a Springfield, Mass., or a Des Moines, Iowa. Local statisticians, by adding in the commuters, speed up the daily average to half a million, but 125,000 is ample, even for the metropolis, as it represents eighty-seven visitors every minute who are plumed with questions and have to be told where to eat, what are the best shows and shops, and just how to get anywhere.

New York is such a shifting, changing, quick-silver place that three months absence is quite enough to make a "chick" out of Father Knickerbocker. Himself were he to visit the United States.

Scarce a day passes in the life of any man who has so much as a seat on a park bench in the big town, but he is called upon to set some newcomer right upon a point of interest, and the most worn question is, "Which is east and which is west?"

There are people arriving who still want to know about the Bowery and Eden Musee, Koster and Bial's and the Hoffman House, places they haunched on a last previous visit. It is almost a tragedy to tell them the Bowery is no longer wicked; Eden Musee and Koster and Bial's closed forever and the Hoffman House dismantled. However, these venerable old survivors for their disappointment in the familiar statue of Liberty and Aquarium, the metropolitan museum of art, Brooklyn bridge and Central Park.

Less confused but nevertheless out of date are the strangers who come seeking the Woolworth building, the Cathedral of St. John the Divine and the Ritz, the drive, the Metropolitan tower and "millionaire's row" in Fifth avenue. These "sights" are visible, however, and draw their daily quota from the 125,000. They have the up-to-date strangers who scram for the roof gardens, the midnight cabarets, and, whisper it, "some of that New York boozeh!"

The more serious-minded seek out the new Park avenue apartment palaces, the Queensborough bridge, the new subway and the great steamships tied up in the North River.

As a lover of New York it has ever been a delight to give freely of such knowledge as we possessed to any particular stranger. There have been excursions to Greenwich Village, the much-derided "Bohemian" section of short-haired women and long-haired men, Morning-side Heights, called the "Acropolis of America," with its Columbia University building; the Black City, our all-colored district in Harlem, and the "great east side," where we find the large colonies of foreigners living their overseas lives, Italians and Russians, Jews and Chinese, Greeks and Armenians.

But there came into our circle a visitor who asked: "Take me where I can see the big movie palaces."
