

Indiana Daily Times

Published at 25-29 South Meridian street, Indianapolis, Ind., by The Indiana Daily Times Company.

Telephone—MA in 3500.

MEMBER OF AUDIT BUREAU OF CIRCULATIONS.

Advertising offices: New York, Boston, Payson, Burns & Smith, Inc. Chicago, Detroit, St. Louis, G. Logan Payne Co.

Subscription Rates: Indianapolis, 10c per week; elsewhere, 12c per week.

Entered as Second Class Matter, July 25, 1914, at Postoffice, Indianapolis, Ind., under act March 3, 1879.

THE HOBBY-HORSE most people ride drinks gasoline.

WHILE they are teaching those lady cops to shoot they might put some of the male officers in the school, too.

EVEN if the general staff has obtained all of the German army secrets Congress is not going to allow it much to practice with, it seems.

THAT ANDERSON mayor who has revived a twenty-three-year-old curfew law will not be very popular with the "gang."

EVIDENTLY the custodian of that booze cache found near the home of the chief of police was not very neighborly.

MR. DAUGHERTY must have felt relieved when he decided to retain the Attorney Generalship—after a talk with the President.

Let the Public In on It

Even though the State highway department was caught with Government balloon cranes on its hands with no balloon to pull down, it seems to have little trouble in marketing other surplus war material the Department of Agriculture has so gratuitously dumped into this State.

More than $47,000 worth of material, useless to the highway department, yet presented to it by the Federal Government and on which the State paid the freight, has been disposed of without any apparent attempt to let the public know that the highway department was in the used goods business.

A well-known junk firm and fortunate State officials were about the only ones that knew of the bargains and the figures disclose that they acted accordingly.

Many a farmer in Indiana would have been glad of the opportunity to obtain a $10 set of harness, such as John G. Brown of the Farmers' Federation and Maurice Douglas of the public service commission obtained. And there is many an autist that would have welcomed the chance to replace his worn tires like Earl Crawford of the highway commission and Ben Urbahns of the treasurer's office.

How much more the department could have realized by putting this stuff on the auction block, of course, is unknown. Nor has it been explained why the sale was not open to competition.

A few days ago a high official of the highway department, bemoaning the fact that the Government had saddled the State with a lot of useless material, said it could not be disposed of for fear the Federal officials would cut off future supplies. From the nature of some of the stuff, and the abundance of it lying around the city, it would demonstrate a trait of efficiency and economy if the Government would cease shipping car loads of surplus war goods here to become a "white elephant" on the State's hands.

If the Indiana highway commission is to act as the agent of the Department of Agriculture in disposing of this material, then its disposal should be conducted in a regular manner and the public should be permitted to bid for it. If bargains are being offered—and the figures indicate there are bargains—they should not be confined to State officials and favored junk dealers.

Can Love Be Divided?

Martie Peggy Beall, who killed Frank Warren Anderson in Kansas City because he confessed that he had "fifty loves," has divided men into three groups—the good men, those who are too timid; men who never get caught and men, like Anderson, who played in women's hearts.

Actually, however, Peggy should have only two groups—those who do not have love affairs and those who do have love affairs. Her definition of the amorous intentions of men, borne of her tragic experience, brings to mind the fact that psychoanalysts and other students of human nature have been debating—and probably always will be—whether man is capable of dividing his affections impartially.

Dr. David Forsyth, the celebrated British psycho-analyst, declares man is incapable of loving more than one woman. Man possesses just so much love, he asserts, and when he attempts to bestow it on more than one woman he simply divides it among them.

Albert Payson Terhune, the author, however, is plainly skeptical and challenges the psychoanalysts to present their proof.

"If man cannot love two women with equal devotion, or if he must split up his affections into half portions, according to the psycho-analyst's claim, the claim calls for a lot of proof," he reasons.

And thus the debate will continue indefinitely and Peggy's definition will stand partially correct—those who do and those who don't.

John Bull Sets an Example

Chief Justice Taft of the United States Supreme Court is going to England to observe the practice of English law and courts. It is to be hoped that he will look carefully into the manner by which justice is expedited there and that he will be able, on his return to America, to have some of the methods adopted here. Of course, that is hoping for too much, but nevertheless his observations should make a lasting impression on the courts and legal practitioners of the United States.

An 18-year-old lad has just been hanged in London for the murder of a titled woman. The death penalty was exacted shortly after he committed the brutal deed. William Donovan recently was electrocuted at the Michigan City penitentiary for the slaying of his wife. In both countries capital punishment was inflicted, and the only difference is that it required the English courts only a few weeks to send their man to the gallows, while it required the courts of Indiana nearly two years to send Donovan to his death.

In Great Britain, Chief Justice Taft will find there is no pioneer spirit and that the wheels of justice are not checked by overemphasis of individual rights. In Great Britain, the nation has rights as well as the individual. By the nation is meant the people as a whole. Their law officers maintain a sharp watch to see that the rights of the whole are not lost in the courts.

Too, wealth is not the power in Great Britain that it is in America. This fact prevents it from being given a favored seat when it is brought into court. Justice cannot be bought in England, except occasionally in small provincial cases when social influence has its sway.

The People Should Know

Senator James E. Watson's criticism of foreign envoys for the alleged discussion of the effect of the proposed high tariff measure will have on international commerce involves a delicate question of diplomatic courtesy and privileges. The situation, doubtless, will be bridged by the good sense of the State Department and the diplomats concerned, for all are too familiar with Washington activities to take umbrage at senatorial ebullitions uttered for very apparent purposes.

Perhaps the Senator's remarks, which seemingly were made with the full approval of the White House, will have the desired effect and will check what seemed to be a growing disposition on the part of the envoys accredited to this country to carry to the people their views of the pending measure. And, perhaps, too, the Senator was correct in assuming that diplomatic views antagonistic to his high protection theories, which he boasts he has entertained for forty years, were uttered from purely selfish motives, yet the public is entitled to know how the Fordney-McCumber bill is looked upon by foreign governments.

Regardless of the fact whether the envoys were within their rights in the alleged criticism of the measure, they were giving the people a better insight into its provisions than are the long-winded senatorial dissertations issued gratuitously practically every day in the capital.

Already Sir Auckland Geddes, the British ambassador, has shown the State Department that Senator Watson misinterpreted his statements relative to American and British commerce. It is entirely possible that the Indiana Senator has rushed into something without logical preparation, just as he did when he sprang to the defense of his friend, Harry M. Daugherty, only to be repudiated a few days later.

Ducks Play All the Parts in New Fox Comedy Movie

Ducks and geese, for some unaccountable reason, long have been regarded as the most stupid of Mother Nature's feathered children. That this belief is a false one has been demonstrated times without number, and one of the most convincing proofs that ducks especially are of a much higher order of intelligence than they usually receive credit for is shown in the fact that duck actors take the most important parts in a new Sunshine comedy about to be released by William Fox.

The title of the picture is "The Wise Duck," and it is said to be of such an unusually funny nature that Mr. Fox has placed it in his list of special comedy productions, and in many of the theaters where it will be shown it will be the most important entertainment on the bill. The ducks perform like human beings, it is said, and the picture contains such a variety of novel features and stunts that it is expected to take its place as one of the greatest comedies of the season.

ON STAGE AND SCREEN. The Stuart Walker Company this week is presenting a love comedy, "The Boomerang," with George Gail in the leading male role. The presence of Gail in the cast has had the desired result in stimulating business. George N. Brown, noted walker, shows the effect that constant training has on the body. He stages a walking exhibition on the stage of B. F. Keith's three times daily. He knows the value of walking in keeping one in a healthy condition.

The feature act at the Lyric this week is called "The Class and Jazz Revue," a musical comedy offering. The Rialto is offering a combination movie and musical comedy bill this week. As an added feature Jack Dillon, heavyweight champion, is appearing in person.

The movies on view today include: "Wild Honey," at the Ohio; "North of the Rio Grande," at the Apollo; "The Ten Dollar Raiser," at Lewis's; "Salvation Nell," at Mister Smith's and "The Scrapper," at the Isis.

At Brookside Park the Municipal Players are presenting nightly the Booth Tarkington success, "The Man From Home." Performances are given each week day night with the exception of

THE OTHER day.

I SAW a mother.

ON A busy street.

AND SHE had a girl.

OF ALONG about.

AND WAS dragging it.

BY ITS little arm.

AND GOING so fast.

IT COULDN'T stop up.

AND WHERE I watched.

IT STARTED to cry.

AND THE mother stopped.

AND GAVE it a shake.

AND GOT another hold.

AND WENT on dragging.

AND IF that mother.

HAD BEEN my wife.

WHICH GOD forbid.

I'D HAVE taken her.

AND GOT a rope.

AND MAYBE a Ford.

AND HAVE made her walk.

FOR a lot of miles.

JUST A little bit faster.

THAN SHE wanted to walk.

AND THE more I see.

OF MOTHERS like her.

THE MORE I think.

THAT WHAT we need.

MORE THAN anything else.

IS a school for mothers.

AND I'll bet a dollar.

WHEN THAT mother gets mad.

SHE BARKS at her kid.

TILL it gets mad.

AND THEN she'll look it.

FOR BEING mad.

AND AFTER a while.

WHEN THE girl grows up.

THIS SELF same mother.

WILL SIT at home.

AND WONDER why.

THIS DAUGHTER of hers.

SEEKS ALL her pleasures.

AWAY FROM home.

AND THEN it is.

SHE'LL PAY in tears.

AND ACHING heart.

FOR ALL the grief.

SHE GAVE her girl.

WHEN SHE dragged it around.

AND BARKED at it.

I THANK you.

Saturday night. The bill will be changed on each Monday night. At the present time no matinees are being given. The admission is free.

BLANCO COMINO TO THE RIALTO. Blanco, a hypnotist, will be at the Rialto next week. It was announced today. He will hypnotize a man in a show window of the Gauspohl Trunk Store, 27 North Illinois street, causing the man to sleep for sixty hours. It is announced. The sleeping experiment will begin at 2 o'clock Saturday afternoon. Blanco will begin his engagement Sunday at the Rialto.

CREPE HANGER

JACKIE COOGAN. This picture shows Jackie Coogan as he appears in his new film "Oliver Twist," in the episode in which he is assistant to "Sourberry," the undertaker.

Five Good Books for Engineers
Indianapolis Public Library, Technical Department, St. Clair Square.

FREE BOOK SERVICE.
"Municipal Housecleaning," by Capes & Carpenter.
"Collection and Disposal of Municipal Refuse," by Hering and Grosdoy.
"Sewage Disposal," by Klinkenut, Winslow & Pratt.
"Sewerage," by Folwell.
"Water Purification," by Ellms.

Unusual Folk

DETROIT, June 9.—From factory walls in Detroit to the precincts of Oxford university, in far-off England, is a long step. It was not too long, however, to be taken by Miss Goldie Green, working girl with ideas and energy, and a pioneer among the industrial toilers in this country who and struggling for higher education for those like themselves, at loom and bench.

After completing a year's work in the great English educational institution, Miss Green is back in Detroit for vacation, but already she is planning her return abroad.

is an interesting and enthusiastic platform speaker and it is her hope to arouse public interest sufficiently to insure educational advantages, such as she has had, for many of her sisters in the industrial ranks.

A THOUGHT FOR TODAY

Therefore, by beloved brethren, be ye steadfast, unshaken, always abounding in the work of the Lord; forasmuch as ye know that your labor is not in vain in the Lord.—I Corinthians 15:58.

Did you ever hear of a man who had striven all his life faithfully and singly toward an object and in no measure obtained it? If a man constantly aspires, he is not elevated? Did ever man try heroism, magnanimity, truth, sincerity, and find that there was no advantage in them, that it was a vain endeavor?—Henry D. Thoreau.

PINT OF BLOOD FOR SON.
ST. JOSEPH, Mo., June 9.—Herbert Calvin gave a pint of his blood to save the life of his son, injured in a sawmill.

Tollies & The Minute

BY FRED MYERS.
The crowds on Main street stood aghast when, with her skirts above headmast, A pretty flapper ambled by. And heard a traffic cop cry: "Excelsior!"

AT LAST! THE GREAT AMERICAN NOVEL! CHICAGO—"It is simply four walls and four kids day after day," wrote Mrs. W. J. Cross. Then she attempted suicide, but will live.

Another good point about the radio is that the operator never can report the line busy.

The duty of the best man at the royal wedding in Belgrade, Roumania, was to hold the King's crown in place while the person made the hitch. It might pay the King to put the b. m. on steady.

Having waited a respectful period for some enterprising aquil-carpenter to refer to the war fraud scandal as "the great divide," we lost from being pounce.

A Chicago girl, who is deaf and dumb, listens to grand opera by placing her fingers on the singer's throat. How we envy that girl!

FASHION NOTE. New York has recognized the brown derby.

OWNERS OF SUCH ROBES SHOULD ORDER AT ONCE. (Credit line lost in transit.) Glass house numbers made to order. See samples at R. H. Wisker book store.

REMARKABLE OBSERVATION OF MR. NOAH LITTLE.

Sir: After thirty years' careful observation of my grocer, I have come to the conclusion that, while he is undoubtedly penny wise, he is far from being pound foolish.

NOAH LITTLE.

THE EDITOR ASSUMES NO RESPONSIBILITY FOR HIS SUBSCRIBERS' STUFF.

(Sullivan Times) Rev. A. A. Cohn wishes to announce that he has rushed to the season and is now eating green beans which he insists that he grew in his garden this season.

Apropos of decorated verbs, Mildred Tenkey writes to Dick Little, the Chicago Tribune columnist, as follows: "Could you persuade Gamaliel to place two more verbs in his new lexicon. This one I overheard at the corner of State and Madison streets: 'Why a man was pickpocketed right out in our neighborhood yesterday.' And this one our compotometer operator thrilled us with: 'My chum's landlady keyed the door on her the other evening.'"

We note in a city brew that an Irvington man's new home will have a full basement.

FINIS.

A singer named Annabel Hyatt, when invited to sing, said "I'll try it." But a very tall note became stuck in her throat—Now Annabel lies cold and quiet.

CLUCK! CLUCK! (North Manchester News-Journal.) Mrs. Charles Gill has in the county egg-laying contest during the month of March.

First call for the nut who insists one may keep cool by not thinking hot thoughts.

PUBLIC IMPROVEMENT NOTE. "We note with joy," said Billy Duke; "Our neighbor's boy has broke his uke."

EAGER TO SERVE. Barber—A little tonic on the hair, sir? Irate Hairless Patron—I guess you can't see that I have no hair, eh? Barber (timidly)—Ah, pardon me, sir! Would you care for a polish?

It may be all right for women to smoke, and far be it from us to challenge their rights in this respect, but if they ever take up chewing, Heaven help us! (Orca)

(Copyright, 1922, by Fred Myers.)

FLAPPER ONLY EXPRESSES HER YOUTHFUL SOUL

'Minister's Daughter' Declares Bobbed Hair and Moderate Length Skirt O. K.

To the Editor: After reading Nora Kay's interview with Miss Burnside in the Daily Times, I wish to express my opinion on what is called the modern flapper.

It seems to me that the styles are more sensible and comfortable than they have ever been. As in all cases, there are a few exceptions—the girl who wears her dresses above her knees and her hose below her skirts.

I am considered a well-educated, refined business girl, and I have bobbed hair and wear my skirts short, but not extremely so.

My associates are from some of the most refined families in the city and they, as well as their families, approve of bobbed hair.

When properly taken care of it is very youthful and comfortable looking. You will find just as many respectable women with long hair.

What would life mean to us, continuing in the same ruts, year after year? Today's flapper is but the outward expression of what youth has always had hidden in its heart.

A MINISTER'S DAUGHTER.

INDIANA VOTES TO AFFILIATE

Retail Furniture Dealers Will Join National Body.

The Indiana Retail Furniture Association will affiliate with the national organization, it was announced following the annual state convention held at the Claypool Hotel.

H. A. Recker of Indianapolis was elected head of the Indiana body. Other officers are: First vice president, John F. Seranur, Anderson; second vice president, E. M. Clawson, Ft. Wayne; and secretary-treasurer, Samuel Mueller, Indianapolis.

Ray Clem, Indianapolis attorney, was appointed counsel for the association. He will be designated as a special secretary. The following board of directors was appointed: D. F. Scott, Terre Haute; Louis Silverman, Terre Haute; Saul Salomon, Indianapolis; George H. Olin, Indianapolis; Frank Kottman, Indianapolis; J. E. Katterberry, Evansville; Leo F. Schulteis, Vincennes; R. E. Moore, Franklin; O. J. Hollaway, Newcastles; John F. Seranur, Anderson; C. C. LaFollette, Thornton; John Reifers, Lafayette; H. B. Stultz, Huntington; Ed Clawson, Ft. Wayne; and A. H. Holler, South Bend.

Castle Will Give to Wife in Verse

NEW YORK, June 9.—Frederick E. Castle, will, admitted to probate in Newark, reads thus:

"All my earthly goods I have in store. To my dear wife I leave for evermore. I freely give—no limit do I fix. This is my will, and she the executrix."

Castle lived at 95 North Maple avenue and was an insurance broker. He died May 13 last. His wife is Mrs. Lucy W. Castle.

Chameleon Is Latest Ornament

VISIT TO BUSINESS ZOO INTERESTING

Monkeys Are Popular as Pets

By NORA KAY. Have you a chameleon to match your newest frock? You should have to be strictly in style, for a nice, gentle chameleon, guaranteed to change color as often as a woman is supposed to change her mind, will be the finishing touch to the up-to-date flapper's equipment this summer, according to R. J. Ward, Indianapolis, Ind., store man.

Right at this season the bird and pet stock is very low, Mr. Ward said, but the chameleon supply will soon be on hand, the monkey cage will be repopulated, the canary birds will get back into the best vocal form and the little zozos and aviaries resume their usual lively appearance.

BIRD STORE IS CENTER OF INTEREST. Even in its present quiet state, however, the bird store is a center of interest to many passers by who stop to watch the vividly colored birds in the window, and one, more curious than the rest, ventured in and learned more about "birdology" and "fishology" and various other "ologies" than she ever suspected could exist.

"Of course, most people are familiar with that old parrot favorite, the canary bird, that spends two years or so learning to sing and then gets eaten by the family cat," said Mr. Ward.

"More canaries are sold than any other kind of bird, probably because they are a favorite article of cut diet, and therefore must frequently be replaced.

"Next in popularity and much higher in price, comes the parrot, but Polly suffers under the handicap of having a voice that sounds as if it needed oil, and a beak that must be approached with care. Then, too, one never can tell what sort of language one's parrot is apt to use, regardless of who is listening, and for this reason many people are afraid to take a chance on them."

More moderate in price and less likely either to swear or bite are the parakeets, tiny green parrots that curl affectionate claws around one's finger, just as if they enjoyed perching there. But their voice, too, are of the type that need lubrication.

NAMES IN NAMES. NAMES BIRD MAN. If a real store man can show either the ever, bird store men can show either the shusham thrush, the gray, rose-crested cardinals or the bull-bird. (No one knows why the poor bird was given such a name as that, but that's what the bird store man called him.

There is a Japanese nightingale, too, the kind one reads about in fairy stories, but after seeing the aristocrat of the bird cage eagerly devouring a horrid looking worm, the visitor lost all interest in his voice.

Not every one has the horror of creeping things, Mr. Ward said. "If they did, I wouldn't have any sale for this beauty," he added, opening a cage and bringing forth a snake looking alligator called a "gila monster."

When it comes to noxious pets, what could excel the tarantula in the art of silence? Or the diminutive turtles that are not only speechless, but practically motionless? Or, if you wish something a little out of the ordinary, there is the water bear, which, Mr. Ward declares, is the same thing as our old friend of antediluvian days, the plesiosaurus, only about one-hundredth as large.

And the telescope fish must not be forgotten, for with his queer eyes that stand out on either side of his head like the headlights on a high-priced car, he makes an ordinary goldfish look about as unimportant as a fly.

Neither birds nor fish, however, have the general appeal that is made to the public by the animals that are nearer than any others to possessing human attributes—dogs and monkeys—according to Mr. Ward.

The best sellers of the canine world, he said, are the fox terriers and the collies—the former for those who want little dogs that may be kept indoors, the latter for boys and men who think that nothing smaller than a collie can be considered a "regular" dog.

Elmore Wins Early Tomato Championship

The amateur early tomato championship crown placed on the brow of W. L. Swartz by Harry Messer, secretary of the Patriotic Gardeners Association, yesterday remained but a day. Mr. Swartz got the title when he informed Mr. Messer his tomato plants bloomed on the 8th of June.

A. C. Elmore, 821 West Thirty-First street, informed the Daily Times today he has tomatoes as big as walnuts on the vines in his backyard, and, besides, he has already picked a mess of peas.

June Brides and Graduates Appreciate Gifts of Jewelry

South Bend Watches

The Watch Pictured Is the New 1922 South Bend. Handsome 20-year case, 19 jewels, adjusted to 4 positions and to heat and cold—at the 1922 price, only $40.00

Railroad Watches
South Bend
Illinois
"Bunn Special"
Hamilton, Elgin
Hamden

There is no gift that gives as much satisfaction as REAL JEWELRY. Beautiful Lavallieres, Wrist Watches, Pins, etc., Stick Pins, Cuff Links, Watches for men.

You can buy anything from our stock for a small payment down and a little each week.

Diamonds

A magnificent collection of stones in all sizes, mounted in any style setting you desire. Buy a good diamond and your money is safely invested. Let Windsor help you to wear better diamonds.

$1.00 A WEEK