

ITALIAN HOLDS RIGHT TO TALK HIS PRIVILEGE

Tariff Matter Grows
Into Delicate Subject.

WATSON IS SILENT

Indiana Senator Is Turning Inquiries Away.

WASHINGTON, June 9.—Ambassador Ricci's defiance refused to refrain from public discussion of American tariff legislation which he holds to be an international issue vital to the interests of the Italian people, was regarded so seriously in official quarters as to give the Secretary of State Hughes the request of the Republican Senator to refrain from replying to the ambassador.

The matter has become one of extreme delicacy. No other explanation could be obtained for the silence at the Capitol following Ricci's refusal to retract any of his criticism of the pending tariff legislation or to concede he violated properties of procedure in his nations giving full expression to his views as to the effect of the proposed lemon and olive tariff on Italian industries.

Ambassador Ricci called at the State Department with the counsellor of the Italian embassy. He spent about forty minutes with Secretary Hughes. He declined later to comment on the interview. The mere fact that Ricci had left the United States shortly and probably re-entered it only by leaving his post without here is not regarded as affecting the issue from a diplomatic standpoint. Senator Ricci plans to sail for Italy Monday.

NATION TURNS INQUIRIES AWAY.

Secretary Hughes remained reticent as to any and all aspects of the controversy, and Senator James Eli Watson, Indiana, turned away all inquirers. He refused to discuss the matter in any way. It was learned, however, that he had left the United States shortly and probably re-entered it only by leaving his post without here is not regarded as affecting the issue from a diplomatic standpoint. Senator Ricci plans to sail for Italy Monday.

Service Commission Likes Report on Cars

The report of the sub-committee of the general committee appointed by Mayor Shank to investigate the situation of the street car company has been received and recommended by John W. McCordle, chairman of the public service commission.

"The public will get a better understanding of the situation through the work of the committee," Mr. McCordle said. "They are fairly well satisfied that some assistance is necessary for the car company in order that betterments and extensions may be made."

In any event a foreign ambassador desiring to discuss such matters as tariff legislation would be expected to do it through the Department of State, not through public addresses or personal representations to Congress.

GUATEMALAN CALLS ON MOSES.

The most recent instance of the clutter kind was an appeal to Dr. Bianchi, then Guatemalan minister to this country who called in person on Senator Moses of New Hampshire to express opposition to a resolution of inquiry into Guatemalan conditions which the Senator had pending before the Committee on Foreign Relations. Dr. Bianchi was rebuked promptly by the State Department. He tendered an apology.

On the question of freedom of speech by foreign ambassadors, the precedents reveal the attitude of the State Department. It is that an ambassador represents a government and that when an ambassador speaks his government speaks. Utterances of ambassadors on general topics are welcomed but never is it considered safe for them to discuss domestic policies of the government to which they are accredited.

With reference to their discussion of international issues which may be pending for decisions by the United States, attention is directed to the fact that an "international question" is in its final analysis merely one with two or more nations involved." For example, the expression by Viscount Gray of his views on the Lodge reservations to the treaty of Versailles was withheld by him until after he had ceased to function as the British ambassador to the United States and had returned to England.

Fourteen Bottles in Negro's Basket! Yoo Hoo! an' Speed!

Fourteen bottles of liquor were found in a basket dropped by a negro in the 1200 block on Senate avenue when he saw Lieutenant Rominger and a squad of police and Lieutenant Rominger and squad approaching.

As a result, a warrant was sworn out and the police today are looking for the negro, who is believed to have been the owner.

The negro, minus his incumbrances, outdistanced the police in an exciting chase. At one point on a circuitous route, the negro jumped through an open window of a coal shed, the door of which was locked. The police thought the negro was gone, but one lane at the door carried the negro through and in the next five blocks he made good his escape by superior footwork.

Coroner Reports on Death of J. E. Zahn

A coroner's inquest held by Dr. George R.

Christian, deputy coroner, over the body of J. Edward Zahn, 25, 1649 College avenue, who died at the Oxford Hotel Wednesday night shortly after he had rented a room, showed death due to pulmonary edema, the result of the expansion of the blood vessels of the lungs.

Zahn registered at the hotel as "F. C. Parsons" of Chicago and his father, Simon Zahn, said the young man left home earlier than before his death, apparently good health.

New Steel Mill to Be Installed Here

A new steel mill will be installed soon at the Chapman-Price Steel Company, it was learned today. Will Chapman, president of the company, stated that the approximate cost would be $25,000.

The company operates eight mills at the present time and employs 300 men. The addition of a new mill will necessitate the employment of about thirty skilled men and a number of laborers and helpers.

The capacity of the plant will be increased to 10,000 tons a month, it was estimated. The total production in this event, would amount to approximately 24,000 tons of sheet steel annually.

WATCHING FOR EVASIONS OF BUILDING LAW

Hamilton Refuses Permits to Erect Houses Where Plans Are Not Submitted.

City Building Commissioner Francis L. Hamilton is trying to save renters from inconveniences resulting from poorly planned houses "slapped together by landlords who want big profits."

He is requiring applicants for permits to erect residences and garages to submit detailed drawings. Heretofore permits have been issued on the word of the applicant alone. Many construction features which would violate the building code are being caught, he said.

For instance: State housing commission requires any double house having a common entrance to have a four-foot side yard, nine-foot ceiling height, window area equal to one-seventh the floor area and no room smaller than 100 square feet, except bathroom and closets. Quite a few plans were found not complying.

The only way to provide the provisions is to make separate entrances. Some builders do this rather than change ceiling heights and other features.

Even so, whoever occupies the house wins, says Hamilton. He is relieved of the annoyance of entering by the same door as his neighbor.
