Local Pastor Serves in Various Capacities

By THE VISITOR.

Four jobs for one man—that's the undertaking of the Rev. Charles H. Gunsolus.

Job No. 1—Ordained minister of the Christian Church.

Job No. 2—Head of a family.

Job No. 3—Head of an instrumental studio of music.

Job No. 4—A student at the Divinity College at Yale.

Any one of these "jobs" would be enough to keep any one busy, but the Rev. Mr. Gunsolus appears to be successful in all of them.

Although ordained as a minister on Thanksgiving day, 1916, Mr. Gunsolus is attending the Divinity College at Yale. By teaching in the summers in his instrumental studio of music at 515 Blake St., Indianapolis, he has been able to round out a year at Yale and hopes to return next fall. This summer's work will tell the story.

Will Discuss Americanism

Sunday night he will preach on "Fundamentals of Americanism" at the First Congregational Church at Sixteenth and Delaware Sts.

He finds time to contribute newspaper articles on special subjects. The fact that he is a married man has not handicapped his ambition to receive instruction at Yale. He is able to earn enough money not only to support his home, but study at the great Eastern university.

The Rev. Mr. Gunsolus is a graduate of Manual Training High School and of Butler.

It's no easy task to complete one's education after a march up to the altar to the strains of a wedding

Four "jobs" are not too much for the Rev. Charles H. Gunsolus, who will preach Sunday night at the First Congregational Church on "Fundamentals of Americanism."

He invites members of fraternal orders, ex-service men and those in service to hear his "Americanism" sermon Sunday night.

BREAK IS NEAR

JAPS TRYING TO DODGE SERIOUS TRADE CRISIS

Biggest Brains of Nation Join in Seeking Ways to Avert Depression.

TOKIO, July 8.—The biggest brains in Japanese business were today seeking to avert the threatening wave of commercial and industrial depression.

Conferences and discussions were continuing and financial leaders were still hopeful of averting a Japanese business crisis. For weeks some have feared the precipitation of such a crisis at any time. Others, while facing the fact of a present serious stagnation and seemingly certain period of severe depression, believe that an actual crisis will be avoided.

Money has become abnormally tight. The listings on every exchange have slumped—some violently. Speculation and inflation, heritages of the war boom, are still unliquidated. If these boom adjustments are forced now, many big concerns may close and many thousands of workmen be thrown out.

In a business and economic sense, Japan is just realizing the war is over. The slump that came to Europe over two years ago and to the United States and most South American countries well over a year ago is just threatening Japan in the spring of 1922. War prices and war profits are still being maintained here—artificially. But buying is getting slackener every day. People are refusing to pay, and most are unable to pay the exorbitant prices. Japan is losing her foreign trade because her prices are in most cases much higher than any other country.

With the banks refusing loans, buyers striking, labor getting uglier and more discontented, the exchanges demoralized and all the business world fearful, the situation is filled with exceedingly uncertainty.

Depression and readjustment are inevitable, every authority agrees. The question is whether the financial storm will be sudden and calamitous, leaving business wreckage and bankruptcies in its wake, or whether the readjustment can be conducted slowly and without such disaster.

Japanese newspapers are filled with demands that the "government do something." But there isn't much the government can do.

Owing to the fact that there is no crematory in Outman the provisions of "Terney's" will were carried out in the gold melting furnace room of the local mill where Terney had been employed.

PROSPECTOR CREMATED IN SUIT OF ANCIENT VINTAGE

Burned for Gold in Garments With Favorite Music Playing.

OATMAN, Ariz., July 8.—For more than forty years Harry Tierney worked in the gold fields of the West. More than a quarter of a century ago he bought a broadcloth suit. When it turned so green and shiny that friends who slapped him on the back sprained their wrists on its slippery surface, Tierney demoted his favorite suit from his "Sundays' best" to "everyday."

He wore the broadcloth suit for many long years in the Portland mill at Cripple Creek, Colo., where he was employed in the gold melting room. Each night he would carefully hang it up and put on other clothes. When Tierney went to Goldfield and took a job in the refinery of the Goldfield Consolidated mill he still wore the suit. It was then beginning to show signs of age.

Then came the gold boom in Outman. Tierney arrived with his now famous broadcloth suit. It was tattered and torn and well patched, but it still hung together and Tierney refused, with many a picturesque oath, to throw it away.

Suit Stuck With Him
It should be explained that in the gold mills of Outman the refinery men are not compelled to have their clothes burned at intervals in order to recover the gold in the garments, as are the employees of Uncle Sam's mints. Tierney had seen many old mills torn down and burned for the gold dust which had accumulated in their plank floors and rafters, but he had never been called upon to give up his gold-impregnated suit.

"When I die I want to be cremated," Tierney often told his friends. "And you won't have to take me to the city to do it, either. Enough gold has filtered into my old carcass and into these clothes to keep the Missus in comfort for the rest of her life. When I die I want my clothes cremated with me."

Insurance collectors always found Tierney obdurate.

"The gold in these clothes and in my teeth is all the insurance I want," he told them.

The old gold refiner overestimated the amount of gold which had filtered into his old suit, however. When the clothes were melted down the seams, lining and pockets yielded only $300 worth of gold. However, unbeknown to either Tierney or his widow, the mill in which he was employed had long carried their faithful gold smelter on the books of an insurance company to the amount of $5,000. A check for $5,000 was given Mrs. Tierney when she left for her old home in Bay City, Mich.

"When I Die"
Owing to the fact that there is no crematory in Outman the provisions of "Terney's" will were carried out in the gold melting furnace room of the local mill where Terney had been employed.

"I'm worth my weight in gold," Terney often used to say during a gold pour, "and when I die you can pour me into a gold brick on top of the slag."
