

BRITON MAKES RAPID SPEED AIR PROPELLOR

Various Government Experts Test Device Constructed by Henry Leitner.

PREDICT LESS VIBRATION

United States Experiments Show Steel Material Resists Breakage.

LONDON, July 11.—After years of trial and experiment Henry Leitner, a British engineer, has produced an all-metal propeller, which is now being submitted to practical tests by the British, French, American and Japanese governments.

France is so well satisfied with the results already obtained that she has placed a contract for the manufacture of propellers for her air force on this pattern. A factory has been constructed in France and dies are being made.

One of the first reports on the Leitner propeller in 1917 stated that it had been tested to seventy-five horse power without deterioration.

Since that day the French official research station has given this metal propeller a test with an engine of 140 horse power. It revolved at the rate of 1,635 revolutions a minute, "without showing signs of fatigue," according to official report.

Compare Tests

A similar test by the British research department gave the same result. A propeller has been sent to the United States Government to be tested on a still more powerful machine. In one test a piece of metal struck the revolving blade. Instead of shattering to pieces the blade was dented only.

The coming of this metal air propeller means much to the air industry of the world. Wooden propellers have been one of the least satisfactory features of aircraft, and their average life in the air is only about twenty hours. They warp in storage and split in hot climates. A bird or other small body striking a wooden propeller has been known to shiver it to fragments. It is recorded that on one occasion a propeller was wrecked by a hairpin.

GERMANS NEEDY

Believe American Travelers Will Find Coiffers.

BERLIN, July 11.—A hundred thousand Americans are expected to visit Germany during this summer season. They may improve the exchange situation by spending $40,000,000 while they are here, says the Aht Uhr Blatt.

It is estimated that if every traveler only stays in Germany for four weeks, spending $400 during this time, as an average, twelve billion paper marks will flow into the empty pockets of those Germans that get in touch with them as hotel keepers, dealers, storekeepers. This will enable the German government to buy more foreign stocks and thus improve the general situation.

Reports from New York State that practically all berths are "sold out" for summer of 1922, thereby verifying the German estimates.

"There is no reason to complain about this American invasion," concludes the Aht Uhr Blatt. "All these globe trotters will, of course, contribute to increase the scarcity of goods of all kinds over here, but, on the other hand, they will make plenty of Germans happy through their purchases, as it is a well-known fact that Americans spend their money freely while traveling abroad, and without Uncle Sam is a fairly thrifty housekeeper at home."

ESTABLISH COLLEGE

British Actors Open New Academy for Stage Recruits.

LONDON, July 11.—A central theatrical college is the latest idea of the Actor's Association of Great Britain—the labor union of English actors. The members believe that such an institution is really necessary to the well being, indeed to the life, of British drama.

The main objects of the college are: "To promote the study of and to teach the arts and crafts pertaining to the theater and cinema."

"Establish a minimum standard of acting for which diploma will be granted by the Actors' Association."

"Assist in keeping pure the English language."

"Provide a focal point for English and foreign artists who are interested in the development of the British stage."

Battery Stations Sold

The Volta Battery Company, maintaining stations at 205 N. Delaware St. and 626 N. Meridian St., was sold today to L. W. Jenkins, representing the former stockholders of the company, by Byron C. Wilson, receiver. The sale was approved by Judge Solon J. Carter, judge of Superior Court, room 3.

Guard Shot Dead

BUFFALO, N. Y., July 11.—Michael Zaleski, 26, was shot and killed here today by a New York Central guard. The home of George Gibbons, foreman in the Lehigh Valley shops, was stoned and a freight car was burned by strike sympathizers.

Police Quell Riot

WILKESBARRE, Pa., July 11.—Police quelled a near riot here last night when strikers rushed a roundhouse with stones and bricks. No one was injured.

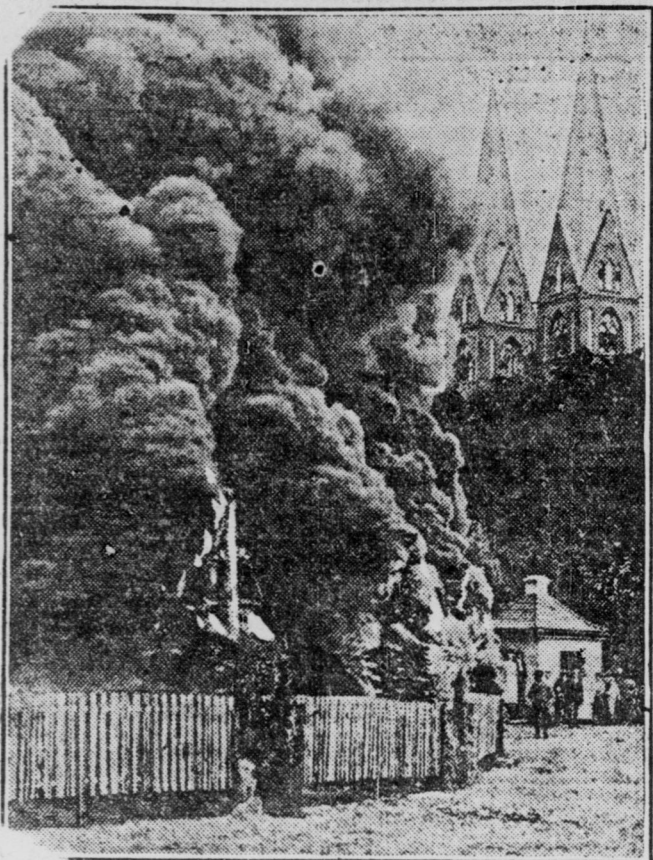

Extradition Wanted

Extradition of Roy R. Sharon, wanted at Muncie for issuing fraudulent checks, was asked of Ohio authorities by Governor McCray today. Sharon was arrested at Bellefontaine, Ohio Sunday.

Query: Why Should Flo Cable Us About 'Em?

By United Press
NEW YORK, July 11.—Legs of "Zeigfeld's Polles" girls make the million-dollar pair of Mlle. Mistinguette of Paris look like 30 cents.

So called Flo Zeigfeld, Jr., from Paris today when he learned that Mlle. Mistinguette arrived here to exhibit her legs on Broadway.

"Look at the legs of Martha Lor-ber and Margie Whittington," Zeigfeld cabled. "They have been acclaimed the greatest in the world by Michael Fokine, world famous ballet dancer."

Later in the day Zeigfeld sent another cable which read as follows: "Add legs—take a peep at the limbs of Evelyn Law and Madeline Starhill."

Zeigfeld was right.

Exodus of Old Congressmen Will Bring New Regime

By HARRY B. HUNT.

WASHINGTON, July 11.—The next Congress is going to be a totally different institution from the one that is now perspiring, swearing and wrestling with the bonus and tariff tangle through these sultry weeks of a Washington summer.

That much already is assured by developments to date, regardless of what the whimsical voter decides to do in November.

The leaders of the present Congress, who have been attacked as leaders of other Congresses seldom have been, are going. Some of 'em are already gone. Familiar figures around the legislative halls of Congress for the last two decades will disappear after this session, and the frosty winds of November promise to bring a new deal all around at Capitol Hill.

Some of them have been cut down to primaries already held; some will suffer the same fate in the primaries yet to come; others will, in all probability, feel the ax of popular displeasure in November, and still others have gone out via the retirement route.

Seldom has an off year in politics witnessed so many upsets and changes as this year. The best laid plans have gone awry, long political shots have come home, and favorites have been beaten. And this is only July, with the primaries not half completed!

House Reflecting Changes

The House already is reflecting the changes. Frank W. Mondell of Wyoming, the Republican leader, who has seen twenty-six years' service, is retiring. He will try to come back to Washington, though in the Senate. He will seek the Republican nomination in Wyoming on August 22. Should he be successful there he will have a stiff fight on his hands in November against John B. Kendrick, the sitting Democratic senator from Wyoming.

In some political quarters in Washington it is said that Mondell has little chance of beating a rug of Kendrick's strength next fall, even should he get by the primaries, but Mondell thinks he has. Kendrick is a cattleman, born and bred, and he has a big following in the State. He was elected Governor in 1914 and served until he resigned to come to the Senate in 1917.

Republicans Retain Control

Who will succeed Mondell as majority leader in the House is a question that already is causing considerable agitation—for it is assumed that the Republicans will retain control of the lower branch.

There are plenty of candidates—James R. Mann, of Illinois; Sidney Anderson, of Minnesota; Martin B. Madden, of the same State; Philip Campbell, of Kansas; Joseph Walsh, of Massachusetts, are a few of them—all this, of course, being contingent upon those named being re-elected.

Fordney Retiring

Joseph W. Fordney, of Michigan, chairman of the all-powerful Ways and Means Committee, author of a tariff and a bonus bill at this session, is retiring, and this big prize position will go to William R. Green, of Iowa, unless Green should unexpectedly be defeated.

Fordney is retiring because he is tired of Congress and of Washington. He has been in Congress for twenty-four years consecutively; he is wealthy, he is sixty-nine, and he says he wants to spend some time with his family in his old age.

His friends say he is a disgruntled and disappointed man after twenty-four years' service. His bonus bill is hung up in the Senate, with its future uncertain; his tariff bill was rewritten in the Senate, and its principal feature, the American valuation scheme, was eliminated entirely. Many other members of the House, whose names figure less conspicuously in the day's news, will be missing next session. Copley and Ireland of Illinois, two prominent members of the present House, with considerable service behind them, already have been defeated in the primaries.

Over on the Senate side the changes will be scarcely less conspicuous. Senator Henry Cabot Lodge of Massachusetts, the present Republican leader, will almost certainly return, his friends say, now that Samuel W. McCall, his Republican political foe in Massachusetts, has decided not to contest the primaries with him.

Other changes, however, will be notable. Boies Penrose, the overshadowing figure at the start of this session, is no more, and his successor in the powerful chairmanship of the Finance Committee, Senator Porter J. McCumber of North Dakota, fell in the primaries of North Dakota a few days ago—a victim of the Non-Partisan League, after twenty-four years' continuous service in the Senate.

The diminutive, but commanding, figure of Philander C. Knox also is gone. Senator Knox was an outstanding figure in the early part of the present session.

Senator Harry S. New of Indiana recognized from the start of the session as an Administration spokesman in the Senate, likewise fell a victim to popular disapproval in the primaries, and in all probability Albert J. Beveridge will come to Washington as his successor.

The brilliant Kenyon of Iowa will be gone. He resigned to accept a Federal judgeship, and his successor, Senator Charles E. Dawson, did not try to succeed himself. In his place doubtless will come Smith W. Brookhart, proclaimed in advance as a legislator of the La Follette type.

The spectacular "Jim" Reed may be among the missing next session. He is having the fight of his life in the Democratic primary in Missouri against Breckinridge Long and, if successful in this fight, must win again in November in order to come back.

The volatile John Sharp Williams of Mississippi, last of the old-style Southern statesmen, will be missing. He is retiring of his own accord after twenty-eight years of congressional service, sixteen in the House and twelve in the Senate. There is a strong possibility that John Sharp may be succeeded by a woman from Mississippi, Miss Belle Kearney is seeking his seat, and, according to reports in political circles in Washington, she stands a good chance of getting it.

"Uncle Joe" Retires

There is regret at the passing of many of these prominent figures from Washington official life, but there is genuine, non-partisan sorrow over the retirement of "Uncle Joe" Cannon. "Uncle Joe" is rounding out forty-six years of service in the Lower House. He has passed his eighty-sixth year. He thinks he has had enough. He will be missed by the Democrats no less than by the Republicans; but perhaps most of all he will be missed by the hundreds of visitors who daily flock through the Capitol and who never fail to thrill when the ballyho man throws out his chest and levels his forefinger and says:

"There, lade-e-z-z an' gentlemun, is 'Uncle Joe' Cannon!"

Bird Is Connoisseur

SHADYSIDE, Ohio, July 11.—A big windstorm dislodged a bird's nest from a rambling rose bush in the yard at the home of Michael Mochary.

The nest, abandoned some time ago by a red bird, contained a $20 bill, pages from a Bible and parts of postal money orders from Cleveland, Kenwood, Freeport, Fairpoint, Powhatan and Canton, Ohio; Wheeling, W. Va.; Danti, Va.; Gary, Ind.; and Winslow, Ariz.

Mochary expressed belief that the articles might have been placed in the bush by thieves who failed to return for them.

Chemical Foundation Head Refuses to Turn Over His Record.

By United Press
WASHINGTON, July 11.—Francis Garvan, head of the Chemical Foundation, refused today to hand over to Government agents books and records of the sale of hundreds of German copyrights and patents to his organization by the Wilson Administration. Garvan charged Assistant Federal Attorney J. W. H. Crim, who is handling the patent case before the Federal grand jury, is a representative of German interests.

Later, however, he promised to allow justice agents to come to his New York office to go over the records.

SAYS RAZOU WAS DULL

Texas Man Sues Distributor for Damages.

FT. WORTH, Texas, July 11.—Call for Mr. Solomon!

The seventeenth district court must decide whether S. E. Houthens of this city wears a tough, obstinate beard or whether he attacked said beard with a faulty razor.

Houthens filed suit in Justice of Peace McCain's Court, alleging that the razor was ill mannered, caused his face extreme misery and was anything but the nice, gentle razor the company claimed for it when sold.

The lower court gave Houthens judgment of $4, the company having to pay costs of $2.60. The law does not permit an appeal to be taken to the district court when the amount involved is less than $20, but the barber supply company was not discouraged. It asked for an injunction restraining payment of the judgment, alleging in its appeal that Houthens took the razor home and without sharpening it introduced it to his wily whiskers. A temporary injunction was granted.

Detectives Land Thieves Following Fight for Girl

PARIS, July 11.—It happened in the cellar of a Montmartre cafe.

The hall boy, Charles, and the waiter, Paul, loved the same girl. Duelling is prohibited and out of date. Yet something had to be done about it. It was determined to settle the difference by a boxing match. Whoever got the "k. o." lost the girl.

The cafe management furnished the cellar and the public was admitted and encouraged to bet drinks.

Among the public was Inspector Balaguerie, of the Paris police, accompanied by his friend, Inspector Bonnelle. The two detectives were trying to forget their jobs and take recreation like other human beings.

Coney Island 'Hots' Only Dogs New York Boy Likes

By United Press
NEW YORK, July 11.—Perhaps it's the fault of the big city with its steel and stone environment, but any way the modern New York boy inclines more to the type of Samuel F. B. Morse and Thomas A. Edison than to Tom Sawyer and Huck Finn.

It is the observation of Bernard J. Fagan, chief probation officer that the only dog the New York boy cares for is the Coney Island hot dog. Furthermore, Fagan declared, the boys of the big city would rather tinker with the innards of a disabled alarm clock or experiment with radio sets, than play "rummy," run "in the parks" or go fishing in the rather hopeless streams within street car's reach of the metropolis.

Appropos William Allen White's recent disappointment with the boys of Emporia, Kas., who failed to heed his invitation to parade with all the dogs they could muster, Fagan said, simply that "boys ain't what they used to be."

"It would be difficult to say whether the city boy has an inherent love of animals because he has so little opportunity to cultivate the companionship of pets," Fagan said. "There is no room for dogs, either in apartments or on the streets. But in his choice of games the modern boy is of a different breed. And sometimes this change that has come over boys causes problems for the children's court."

For a Vacation Without Mishap Avoid Usual Discomforts—Return Entirely Fit

The real enjoyment, the great benefit of vacation, comes from the all-day life in the open, from the outdoor sports—fishing—swimming—base-ball—tennis—golf.

But unaccustomed exercise is apt to make the muscles sore, stiff and painful. Other sports-sports are sunburn, insect bites and poison oak or poison ivy.

Vicks can be applied to prevent these discomforts and is also a soothing relief. It helps, too, in case of summer colds, hay fever or headaches.

Wheat Shortage Over Europe Aids Locally

WASHINGTON, July 11.—American wheat growers hold a strong position this year. American wheat is needed in larger quantities to feed the world. Europe's supply of the bread staple is low. The world's stock of wheat is below average. The world's consumption capacity for wheat tends toward the pre-war average, while crops of all wheat-growing nations, except the United States, show reduced output.

Stocks Low
Surveys of crop output made by experts of the Commerce Department show that wheat stocks are the lowest in several years. Argentina and Australia have much less wheat than last year. The carry-over crop of the United States is comparatively light because of the heavier demands from abroad. Canada is reported to have large stocks on hand.

To meet international wheat demands the United States and Canada will share in orders, the United States keeping the lead as a wheat exporter. Experts find that wheat is passing through somewhat the same stages of readjustment as wool, cotton and other staple products. In pre-war times Europe was relied upon to absorb the American surplus as well as the surplus of other large wheat-producing countries.

Surplus Used
The world would have faced serious wheat shortage during the past two years if surplus wheat stocks had not been accumulated as a result of heavy production during the war years, according to the expert opinion of the Government. Successive large crops during the war years helped to carry the world over the lean producing years that followed the war. The records show, however, that both production and consumption of wheat have been below average for the past five years.

Wheat consumption of central and western Europe fell from 2,000,000,000 bushels in 1913 to 1,200,000,000 bushels in 1917. Since 1917 there has been steady recovery in production and imports by Europe. In 1921 consumption reached about 1,850,000,000 bushels. This year Europe's consumption will go back close to pre-war levels.

ORIOLE HANGS ITSELF WITH HAIR IN NEST BUILDING

Suicide Theory Scouted, as Bird Was Apparently Happy.

CAMERON, Mo., July 11.—Ben Johnson, a farmer near Cameron, is authority for the statement that a bird hanged itself on his farm recently, and as evidence to substantiate it he brought to a newspaper office in this city the dead bird still swinging on the limb where it met its death.

A common house hair was the instrument through which the bird, an oriole, had accidentally snuffed out its own life. The horse hair was being used by the bird in building a nest that was on the same limb of the tree. The hair was drawn about the neck of the bird and one end attached to the limb at the nest. The unfortunate bird got a loop about its neck in preparing the nest for its young and being unable to get it loose was hanged just effectively as some criminal with the regular rope and noose.
