WASHINGTON, July 29.—It may be said on high authority that the coal, steel, railroad and public utility connections of Andrew W. Mellon, Secretary of the United States Treasury, are now under the closest scrutiny by friends of the striking coal miners who want the United States Senate to call Mellon on the "carpet."

The Pittsburgh Coal Company, an $80,000,000 concern, is the backbone of the soft-coal operators in Pennsylvania.

The Mellons of Pittsburgh are powerful figures in the Pittsburgh Coal Company. Secretary Mellon was one of its directors until he entered the Cabinet. His place was taken by his brother, Richard B.

Other Large Holdings
Richard B. Mellon also succeeded to the Secretaryship as a director of the Pittsburgh By-Products Coke Company, a 10,000,000 concern; also the Electric Carbon Company; the Minnesota By-Products Coke Company, capitalized for 1,000,000; the Pennsylvania Water Company; the Carborundum Company; the Aluminum Company of America, 20,000,000; the Standard Steel Car Company, 5,000,000; the Steel Car Forge Company, 1,500,000; the Tri-Cities Water Company, 700,000.

Through their string of banks and trust companies, the Mellons control hundreds of millions of capital, much of which represents investments in coal, steel and allied industries. Their Union Trust Company has total assets of $143,000,000 and the Mellon National Bank, $125,000,000.

GASOLINE PROBE ONLY SLUMBERING

Senate Committee Plans to Resume Hearing Soon, It Is Announced.

WASHINGTON, July 29.—That Senate investigation to find out why the prices of gasoline was boosted skyward so abruptly just as good weather began is still very much alive, although it has been extremely quiet during the last few weeks.

Before the end of a month open hearings will begin, according to Senator McNary, vice chairman of the La Follette subcommittee appointed to probe the industry.

A drop in the price of oil, followed by a reduction in gasoline prices in some cities, has taken place since the committee undertook its work. A general reduction by which the whole country will benefit should follow, Senators believe.

The questionnaire answers give the Government facts which will serve as the basis for the most exhaustive study of the oil industry ever made.

Effect of High Altitude on Body Matter of Adaptation, Says Doctor

Interest in the effects of higher altitudes on the human system has been aroused in Indianapolis following the death of Dr. Frank T. Wynn in a fall from a cliff on Mt. Siyeh in Glacier National Park Thursday.

Executive to Ask Congress to Put Teeth in Law on Labor Board.

By ROBERT J. BENDER
United News Staff Correspondent

WASHINGTON, July 29.—Four or five more days and the present rail strike probably will be over. President Harding and spokesmen of the shopmen are equally confident.

The "basis for compromise and settlement of the strike," which Harding outlined in his conference with T. De Witt Cuyler, chairman of the Association of Railway Executives, is now being put into a formal written proposal. This will be submitted Tuesday to a conference of 148 rail executives called at New York by Cuyler and to a conference of ninety shopcraft leaders called at Chicago by Bert M. Jewell the same day.

Terms of Settlement

It embodies:

1. The shopmen are to return to work immediately under the wage scale and working conditions decided by the Railway Labor Board July 1, pending a rehearing by the board.

2. The railway executives are to stop the practice of "farming out" shopwork contracts.

3. As to seniority rights:
(A) The shopmen to return to work with restored seniority rights, except as in the case of shopmen on the seniority lists at the time the strike was called and remaining at their posts during the strike.

(B) The shopmen to bring a test case on the question of seniority rights before the railway board with assurances that the executives will abide by the decision of the board.

Purpose of Proposal

The second of the seniority proposals is said by authorities to be included in the President's formal suggestion to cover the possibility of the rail executives positively refusing to agree upon the first named basis.

Whether the formal proposal will include an agreement by executives, to abide by decisions of the labor board and drop pending litigation contesting those decisions, had not been finally decided late Friday. Whether it is embodied or not, it is the intention of the President to "put teeth" into the act at the next session of Congress.

The Right to Work

Being the first of six messages to the Public, based on resolutions adopted by the Board of Directors of the Associated Employers of Indianapolis, and having for their purpose the awakening of the Public to its interest and its responsibility in obtaining just settlement of the present railroad and miners' strikes.

The Public can not afford to have the railroad and miners' strikes settled "at any price."

A settlement that does not definitely preserve the right of individuals to work, will eventually be too costly.

There is at stake in the present disputes an outstanding American principle which is of far greater importance to our citizenship at large than the wages of a few or the hours they shall work.

This principle was clearly reiterated by President Harding in a public address on July 4, when he said—

"A free American has the right to labor without any other's leave. It would be no less an abridgment to deny men to bargain collectively. Government can not tolerate any class or group domination through force. It will be a sorry day when any group denomination is reflected in our laws. Government and the laws which Government is charged with enforcement, must be for all the people, ever aiming at the common good. * * * Liberty is gone in America when any man is denied by anybody the right to work and live by that work, it does not matter who denies."

It is because independent workmen have been willing to take jobs in mines and railroad shops when other men quit these jobs, that the wheels of American industry have been kept turning.

The Independent operator and miner are the sole source of the nation's fuel supply today. But for their uninterrupted and steadily increasing production, a union monopoly would establish complete control of the coal fields, and the public would pay the artificial and uneconomic burden which an unconditional surrender of the operators would impose on the industry.

Any settlement of the miners' strike that would establish a monopoly control of coal production would make possible the closing of every factory door, the suspension of every public utility and the driving of every worker from his job. It would make possible a lockout of the farmer and the factory worker and a boycott of the public.

Such monopoly control means a stagnant fuel industry, inefficient production and artificial fuel costs.

This is the price that every fuel buyer would pay if the strike is settled on terms that do not guarantee to every man the right to work in the mines, regardless of membership in labor organization, church or political party.

One of the conditions which the striking railroad men impose, in considering terms of settlement, is that all non-union workmen shall be discharged. "Liberty is gone in America when any man is denied by anybody the right to work and live by that work," says the President of the United States.

A settlement of this strike which penalizes the independent workman who has accepted the job that the striker has abandoned will be un-American and ought not be tolerated by the public.

The miners' union demands the perpetuation of the "check-off" system, which provides that the operating companies shall deduct from each miner's wages his dues to the union, thus making membership in the union compulsory to every man employed in the mines.

This system flatly denies to independent workmen the right to labor and is therefore un-American and should not be tolerated by the public.

Let every man and woman in Indianapolis stand pledged to the President of the United States, to the Governor of Indiana, and to all Federal, State, County and City officials and public peace officers, in giving their full aid and support in behalf of law enforcement for the perpetuation of public rights and for the absolute freedom of every citizen to work at any lawful occupation without let or hindrance from any source whatever.
