SCHOOL HEADS IN LIVELY TILT

Commissioners Gadd and Barry Threaten Each Other With Word Barrage.

Shouting, "You can't insult me," School Commissioner Bert S. Gadd advanced on President Charles A. Barry in a threatening manner at the school board meeting on Tuesday evening. Barry arose from his chair and the two stood glaring at each other until Commissioner W. D. Allison stepped between them and begged them to sit down. They did. Gadd contended Barry's remarks concerning the contract for archite-tural services with the firm of Snider & Rotz were entirely uncalled for, under the rules of gentlemanly conduct.

The board failed in court to get a decision against paying Snider & Rotz a large sum for work done under the former school board.

Brightwood citizens asked for a better branch library. A committee recommended change of lighting system in Central Library from indirect to direct, at a cost of from $5,000 to $10,000, claiming a saving in electricity would be gained.

Purchase of a seventy-foot strip of ground adjoining School No. 14 for $7,000 was approved.
