

ILLINOIS AWAITS
ACTION AT HERRINManufacturers' Association Calls on Governor Small to Demand Justice.

By United Press

CHICAGO, Aug. 9.—The Illinois Manufacturers' Association expects Governor Small to issue a proclamation in a few days demanding that Williamson County authorities take immediate steps toward the prosecution of the parties guilty of the Herrin massacre.

In a statement today the association declared the Governor reached this decision following the conference here yesterday.

The Governor admitted the situation was serious enough to consider placing Williamson County under martial law, but said he would first issue a proclamation giving them a final opportunity to punish the perpetrators of the outrage.

WILL HAYS COME BACK?

Invited to Address G. O. P. State Convention in Nebraska.

By United Press

LINCOLN, Neb., Aug. 9.—Whether Will Hays is leaving politics entirely during his tenure as head of the motion picture industry may be determined by his acceptance or non-acceptance of an invitation to address the Republican State convention here Aug. 15.

Hays has announced his complete divorce from politics, but Nebraska Republicans feel perhaps he didn't refer to such matters as speaking before an occasional State convention.

Radio Affords Means of Sending
Word By Long Distance TelephoneBy PAUL F. GODFREY
America's Foremost Radio Authority.
Countless persons have talked over a "radio" telephone without knowing it.

It's going on every day. As many as half a dozen may talk at the same time between two cities by "radio."

To obviate the necessity for increased wire lines as the demands on their service increased, the American Telephone and Telephone Company has been using "radio" waves with great success for long-distance telephone connections.

The waves, generated by a miniature generating plant, are guided to their destination some hundreds of miles away by a pair of copper wires which may be carrying one, and perhaps two, conversations. As many as five "radio" messages may be thrown upon the wires without interference.

This method was the first commercial practicable application of the "wired wireless," of which we have heard so much. Its continued use should help hold down the rapidly climbing telephone rates. In the past, when increased business had overloaded existing channels, the operating companies have had to erect new lines of poles and string upon them thousands of miles of wire.

Given "wired wireless," as applied to land line telephony, it is only necessary to provide at each end a miniature generator of radio waves and a receiver suitable for "translating" those radio waves into sound waves. With this method in use, existing circuits will be able to take care of the growth in volume of traffic for a long time.

Amplifies Volume.

Strange as it may seem, the quality and clarity of the voice as it carried across the continent in this way, is far superior to that one carried by the old type system. The three-element vacuum tube—that marvelous device used so much in radio work—is called in to act as the miniature generator of radio waves. It is also used as a detector of the waves coming from the distant place. At intervals of 400 to 500 miles are repeaters which utilize this same vacuum tube.

Prior to the invention of the vacuum tube, which is primarily a radio contribution, it was possible to telephone only so far as Denver from New York.

The application of the vacuum tube to telephone line work makes transcontinental telephony possible. The voice of the man on the Atlantic coast now reaches his friend in San Francisco with the same distinctiveness as though they were talking across the street.
