

SHIFT IN TRADE MAY KEEP RICH MINES CLOSED

Strike's Effect Changes Relationship to Steel Industry.

INDISPENSABLE NO MORE

Mixture Found Effective in Producing Greater Yield Per Ton.

By United Press
PITTSBURGH, Aug. 18.—The rich Connellsville coal and coke region may never again hold the same place in relation to the steel industry in the Pittsburgh district.

Scores of mines along the Monongahela River may never be reopened, it is predicted, following important discoveries by independent steel manufacturers, who were forced to look elsewhere for their coking coal on account of the miners' strike in the Connellsville field.

Heretofore coal and coke from Monongahela River mines were considered indispensable to steel making. Following certain discoveries, however, steel men say they only can use about 50 per cent of the normal output in the Connellsville district.

Attention to By-Product
One of the outstanding developments in the steel industry as a direct result of the coal strike is the attention given to production of by-product coke, and the knowledge that steel plants can use coal from other than the Connellsville region. Besides, it was pointed out, the by-product ovens at the mills have the advantage over beehive ovens at the mines in quantity and quality of coke produced.

Independent steel makers found that by mixing coal from the West Virginia field with equal quantities of Connellsville or Monongahela River coal they produced a higher grade coke and a greater yield per ton.

Mixture Gives Results
"A mixture of 40 per cent Pocahontas (West Virginia coal) with 60 per cent Connellsville coal is being used at by-product plants with good results, in some cases increasing the output of a blast furnace from 20 to 25 per cent, a leading independent steel manufacturer said.

"Should this trend to use low volatile coal continue it means that mines which produce coal for coking purposes in western Pennsylvania face a reduced demand of 40 to 50 per cent below their pre-strike output."

TOO MUCH FOR HORSE

Circus Excitement Kills Billy, Reared on Quiet Farm.

ORANGE, N. J.—Billy, one of a team of horses owned by Harry Vall of Newton, N. J., for the first and last time in his life, saw a circus yesterday. Brought up on a farm, the animal was startled by excitement about the big tent as it was driven past.

When the band started a jazy tune, adding to the excitement as the main show started, Billy reared, leaped in the air, shivered as he landed, then fell dead.
