The Raggedies

By JOHNNY GRUELLE
Raggedy Ann and Raggedy Andy were sitting down beneath the flowers when they heard the thump of running feet coming through the deep, deep woods. Raggedy Andy put his head down close to the ground and listened. "Why do you put your head down so close to the ground?" asked Raggedy Ann. "Why, when you put your ear to the ground you can hear the sound of walking or running for quite a distance," Raggedy Andy replied. "I remember hearing an Indian story one time and that is what the Indians do. You try it, Raggedy Ann, and you can hear four feet thumping on the ground." Raggedy Ann put her head flat upon

Layer Sandwiches

By BERTHA E. SHAPLEIGH
Cooking Authority for NEA Service and Columbia University.

The sandwiches may be made with any kind of filling and consisting of five slices of thinly cut bread; three white and two brown, having a white slice top and bottom. Butter each slice generously. A very good filling is cream cheese with chopped olives and pimentos; any kind of cold-chopped meat mixed with salad dressing. Put the five slices together, press, trim off crusts and cut in cross-wise slices one-quarter inch in thickness.

the ground and listened. Sure enough he could hear the thumping of four feet. "It must be the two mean old women," she said. "Let us get farther back from the path, Raggedy Andy." Raggedy Andy thought this would be the best thing to do, too, so the two dolls hid farther back in the daisies, but peeped out so that they could see the path. Presently they could hear the thumping of the four feet very plainly and soon around a bend in the road came Benny Bunny as fast as he could hop. "Hippity, hippity!" "Oh, Benny Bunny!" cried Raggedy Ann, standing up and waving her hand. Benny Bunny stopped so suddenly he nearly turned a somersault and then came back to Raggedy Ann and Raggedy Andy.

"I was just running to catch up with you, Raggedy Ann and Raggedy Andy," said Benny Bunny. "For, what do you think? Those two mean old women are trying to catch you, sure pop. I watched them as they climbed up the bank of the laughing brook, and they asked me to carry them upon my back and help them catch you. 'Oh, no, indeed,' I told them. 'Raggedy Ann and Raggedy Andy are very dear friends of mine, and I would never do anything to harm them.' Then who should come along but Freddy Fox, and you know Freddy was punished for eating the ice cream you gave me. The two old mean women got Freddy Fox to help them find you, so they may be along any minute."

"Now, I'll tell you what we must do," Benny said. "Here's a hollow place in the path. I'll lay down in it and you must cover me over with leaves so that you cannot even see a speck of my clothes, then you go

CLOSES PAGEANT WITH APPEAL TO
FREE ARMENIANS

Lady Anne Gives Striking Picture of Deplorable Conditions in Country.

Reversal of the arrangements that allowed Lady Anne to make her appeal for the freedom of Armenia preceding the Armenian pageant, met general approval last night. A member of the audience was heard to remark that in all of the reading that he had done he had never had the clear understanding of the situation that he obtained from Lady Anne's talk. A letter also was read from an oriental traveler who had viewed the pageant, saying the presentation of Armenian home life was very realistic, and enclosing a check for Armenian relief.

Today all of the garments worn in the pageant and probably the curtain will be made into packages and sent directly to Armenia. The white cotton costumes will be very acceptable to relief workers who will be able to use them to clothe children.

According to sentiment expressed by the audience the pageant was an entire success and Lady Anne was highly pleased with the results obtained. She has said Indianapolis is the first city to give public attention to her appeal and perhaps other cities will follow its lead. All of the five hundred Indianapolis folks who took part, can rest assured, she feels, that their efforts in making the pageant a success, have not been in vain.

CAR SHORTAGE CRITICAL

A shortage of coal cars will be one of the main contributing causes in a coal famine which will face the country this winter, said E. J. Suffer, representative of the Poorless Coal Company, which owns several Indiana mines, in an address before Traffic Club of Indianapolis at a meeting at the Hotel Lincoln yesterday.

Marriage a la Mode

In Soudan there is no marriage ceremony, so divorce is unknown. A chief may marry a whole family of girls at one time if he likes, and put them to work as his slaves, doing all the heavy work. When he is tired of a wife he may kill her, or retain her as a drudge. The former course is usually followed, for too large an establishment has its disadvantages, and new wives are always available.

Miss Indianapolis' Smile Lasts
Through Many Hours of Shopping

The many hours of shopping has not chased away the smile of Miss Indianapolis. She is pictured here with her mother, Mrs. R. E. Blossom, in the flower garden at their home, 2854 N. Illinois St.

Miss Indianapolis was given a marvelous reception last night when she made an official visit to the Lyric Theater.

Many people waited until a Yellow Cab, driven by Miss Indianapolis' official chauffeur, Harry Irons, arrived at the theater and greeted her before she entered. As she proceeded to her box she was greeted by applause.

Henry Burton, representing the theater management, introduced Miss Indianapolis. The spotlight was then turned on Miss Indianapolis as she arose and smilingly acknowledged the applause of the patrons of the theater. She was presented a magnificent bouquet of roses by the theater management, which had been purchased at Bertermann's.

Mrs. C. Roltaire Eggleston, chaperon, Mrs. Blossom, the mother of Miss Indianapolis; David Gibson of Cleveland, a representative of the Scripps-McRae League of newspapers; and Elaine McGrath, managing editor of The Times, were members of the party.

After the theater a visit was made to Craig's, where light refreshments were served. The Yellow Cab was the sign that Miss Indianapolis was in the vicinity and a large gathering greeted her when she left for her home.

One of the very pleasant experiences that Miss Indianapolis has had was her shopping visit to the Tucker Glove Company where she obtained her hosiery and gloves. "The reception given me at Tucker's show to what length the business people of the city are going to make puts it, has arrived at the L. S. Ayres Company. Pictures of this marvelous creation will be published in the Times soon. The official photographs of this gown will be taken by Dextheimer.

The gown to be worn by Mrs. C. Roltaire Eggleston, the chaperon, has been purchased at Block's. Both Miss Indianapolis and her chaperon will be equipped from head to foot from Indianapolis stores.

Tonight Miss Indianapolis and her chaperon will arrive at 10 o'clock in a Yellow Cab at the Murat to take part in the tribute to be paid by the Indianapolis Athletic Club to Stuart Walker. Later they will appear at a ball to be given by the club at the Athenaeum.
