

LEAGUE PROGRAM ASSURED SUPPORT

Women Voters' Five-Fold Platform Promised Aid by Candidates to State Legislature.

The lobby to be carried on by the Indiana League of Women Voters in the 1932 State Legislature will meet with favorable attention generally, and in many cases with strong support, is assured. Communications are pouring into league headquarters from candidates in all parts of the State seeking places in the General Assembly. The league queried the candidates in regard to their attitude toward its policies, and the replies are being kept on file at the headquarters for the benefit of the membership.

Mrs. Walter S. Greenough, president of the Indiana League of Women Voters, is pleased with the response to the questionnaire.

Questions Represent Program

Samuel M. Ralston, Democratic nominee for Senator from Indiana, leaves no doubt of his position. He wrote "Emphatically yes," in reply to each of the five questions asked of candidates for the national body. These questions represent the program of the National League of Women Voters and are as follows: Are you in favor of having the United States take the initiative in international cooperation to prevent war? Are you in favor of adequate financial support for the Children's Bureau, the Women's Bureau in the Department of Labor, and the home demonstration work in the Department of Agriculture? Are you in favor of Federal provision for the removal of illiteracy throughout the United States?

out comment in the Woman Voter, the official publication of the league.

The legislative committee of the league will be chosen at a meeting of the appointment committee on Wednesday evening, Sept. 20, in Indianapolis, preceding the monthly meeting of the board of directors. All replies are being published with which will be held the following day.

Peach Mousse

By BERTHA E. SHAPLEIGH of Columbia University

This dessert is particularly good with fresh peaches, but may be made with canned ones. It may be frozen in the freezer can, or in a mold which is water-tight. Packaged in a pall. The vacuum freezer is a good freezer for a mousse.

6 or 8 large, ripe peaches	1/4 teaspoon salt
Sugar for sweetening	1/4 teaspoon vanilla
1 pint cream	1/4 teaspoon almond extract
1/2 cup powdered sugar	1 teaspoon gelatin
	1 tablespoon cold water

Slice peaches and cover with sugar. Beat cream until stiff, add sugar and flavoring and gelatin which is soaked in the cold water and dissolve by placing over hot water. In the mold place a layer of peaches, a layer of cream and continue until all material is used. Cover with a piece of buttered paper before placing on the cover of the mold. He himself worked tirelessly in the fire with ax and spade, and when word came that two of his men were missing and probably had fallen and were lying overcome by smoke and gases, close in front of the flames, he went in and brought out one man and returned for the other and never came back.

Days later, when the fire had burnt out, and men were able at last to go through the black, smoldering region, they found his remains beside those of the man for whom he had returned. Identification was not easy, but soon the wires carried to Chicago the information that the old man had been beyond doubt, Lucas Cullen.

Barney brought the message to his father at the office.

"He went with his boots on," said Luke, winking wet eyes. "That's how he'd like to go. And—well, boy, it couldn't be better than that."

Ethel and Barney received the news together.

"I knew grandfather wouldn't go without doing something," she said proudly. "You see, he can better face them all now!"

"Yes," said Barney; and he knew she meant her father and mother and his own grandfather of the Book of Mormon and Layton and Kinchloe and Quinlan of the flaming torch.

"I guess," Ethel said, "old J. Q. can put out his torch. I can't think that one fine act at the end can change one at all; but it's something begun, where, over there, must have power to go on."

The End.

Marriage a la Mode

On the night before her marriage the young girl of Japan smashes her mirrors and destroys her fans.

This is to indicate that she has renounced the vanities of the world and is turning toward serious things.

After her marriage her trunks are of a different type. One may tell a matron from a maid by her fan.

WASHINGTON SOCIETY

By United Press

WASHINGTON, Sept. 9.—White House vacation rumors, which have kept Washington society editors busy all summer, have now simmered down to the possibility that President Harding will go to Detroit, Sept. 18.

And when they were comfortably seated, and were very quiet, they soon saw just what the pretty little creatures were doing.

As each little Fairy flew to a flower, she gave the flower a gentle shake, and this made each little flower ring like a very tiny bell, except that the ringing was more like the sound from a violin string when played upon very, very softly.

And each pretty flower's sound, mingling with the sounds from all the other flowers made a perfect harmony of sweetness scarcely louder than a sigh. Yet, the music of the flowers was as distinct as their fragrance and as sweet to hear as the most pleasant memories are to feel.

Raggedy Ann and Raggedy Andy sat and listened until the pretty little Fairies, finishing the flower music, fitted up through the ferns and went upon their missions through the deep, deep woods.

Then with the quiet sweetness of it all still within them, the two Raggedies crept out of the little dell as quietly as they had entered. And each thinking very, very pleasant thoughts, the Raggedies arm in arm walked through the deep, deep woods until they came to the house of the two funny little old women.

The two funny little old women were sitting upon their front door, and were crying "Dear me, sobbed one funny little old woman, 'I guess we never will be able to catch Raggedy Ann and Raggedy Andy and make them give us lolly-pops.'"

"No," sobbed the other little old woman, "we will never catch them; they were so mean and ill-mannered to them they will not wish us to have any lolly-pops."

"I am so sorry that we were mean and ill-mannered to the Raggedies," cried the other funny little old woman and she cried "Boo-hoo."

Then the other funny little old woman cried "Boo-hoo," too.

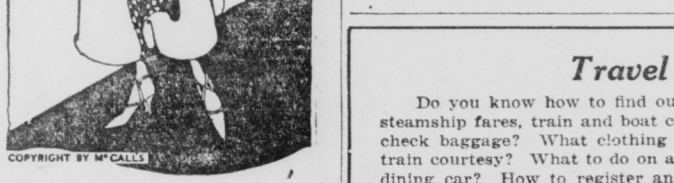

Raggedy Ann looked at Raggedy Andy and then they hid behind a bush, where they could watch the two funny little old women, but where the two funny little old women could not see them. Then Raggedy Ann whispered to Raggedy Andy: "I wish the two funny little old women had a garden of all colored lolly-pops growing right along both sides of their front walk." And Raggedy Ann had no more than made the wish than there, on either side of the little front walk were hundreds of different colored lolly-pops. They were growing upon their little sticks just like pretty flowers, and the sun, shining through them, made them look like so many pieces of colored glass.

Then, before the two funny little old women discovered the pretty garden of lolly-pops, Raggedy Ann and Raggedy Andy, hand in hand, stole quietly back down the path through the deep, deep woods filled with Fairies in everything. And within them they felt a glow of happiness as sweet as the music of the flowers and as pleasant as the happiest of memories.

Kit Fox

Kit fox is revived this season for trimming purposes. It combines very pleasingly with duvetyne, gerona, cashmere and the popular fabrics for winter coats.

So insistent is the fad for side drapes that even the new coats and wraps are showing them. The model sketched uses this long graceful line to good effect in combination with a curved opening from neck to waistline.

The high collar is a matter of individual preference. It is exceedingly smart, but if it doesn't suit one's taste there are a dozen other collars just as modish.

Kasha cloth and all the variations of bolivia and duvetyne are expected to be most popular for fall wraps. There is no question as to the most fashionable color—it is brown in all shades and any shade.
