

ISSUE IS RAISED OVER NEGLECT OF INSPECTION LAWS

Congressional Leaders Ask Explanation of Position Government Takes.

VIOLATIONS ARE COMMON

Records Indicate Thousands of Locomotives Unfit for Service.

By ROBERT J. BENDER
United News Staff Correspondent
WASHINGTON, Sept. 13.—Democratic leaders in Congress, augmented perhaps by a few Republicans, are preparing to raise an issue over failure of the Government to prosecute alleged violations of the Federal locomotive inspection laws. Failing to get action through voiced complaints from the Senate and House Chambers, the Democrats will carry the issue into the fall elections in this form:

Why did the Government enjoin the shopmen from carrying on a legal strike and at the same time refrain from taking legal steps against the carriers to stop violations of the law covering inspection of motive power? Records in the Interstate Commerce Commission reveal that there are thousands of alleged violations of this law already reported and on file. In answering a resolution of inquiry passed by the Senate, the commission frankly admitted some days ago that there was a growing tendency on the part of the carriers to wink at the inspection regulations.

President Harding, in a letter to Chairman McChord of the commission, recently declared the law must be enforced. Yet nothing has been done about it. If those in touch with locomotive conditions are correct there were some 15,000 violations of the law reported in July alone, when nearly 49,000 locomotives were reported for inspection and repairs. August's reports will add 10,000 more violations, it is said, and today some thirty per cent of the total locomotives in the country are on the "bad order" list, many being operated in faulty condition.

Because of the crisis in transportation at a time when shipment of coal is of paramount importance, Administration officials hold that it would be "inexpedient" to enforce too literally the inspection laws. Furthermore, at the rate the alleged violations are piling up, it will be a gigantic task to prepare prosecutions against the roads later, if such prosecutions ultimately are ordered. The mere physical effort involved would be tremendous, officials say.

Meantime, however, interested senators, like King of Utah, are preparing to go into the matter more fully. They would like to lay a foundation for use of so-called preferential treatment of the railroads in the coming campaign.

When You Were Twenty-One

To thousands of men and women in the world of business today, the age of twenty-one meant the facing of life's battles single-handed! If any of them enjoyed the benefits of a college career it was at the cost of tremendous sacrifices on the part of parents, or with a burden of hardships carried, of necessity, by the person who "works his way." As parents TODAY these people can provide generously, yet easily, for the college youth of TOMORROW through our

JUNIOR Life Insurance Policies

This vastly appreciated form of public service was instituted in this State by ourselves a few years after our foundation fourteen years ago. Through its benefits hundreds of youths on their twenty-first birthday will be paid sums varying from $500 to $2,500—all without sacrifice or inconvenience upon the parents. These policies are written on the lives of children between the ages of one day and fourteen years. They are written on the whole life, twenty-pay-life, or the ten, fifteen and twenty-year endowment plan. The premiums which you pay are very small. The full amount is paid to your child at the maturity of the policy. Write or telephone for further information.
