NEW BASKET-BALL RULES SHOW DRASTIC CHANGES FROM LAST YEAR'S CODE

Personal Foul Penalty Increased in Two End Zones—No Free Throws Allowed on Certain Technical Violations.

By VEDDER GARD

Drastic changes in the basketball rules have raised a storm of questions all over the country as to how the new regulations will be interpreted. Another storm is raging between the opponents of the 1922 playing code and its adherents. There is not much question but that the innovations in the net game will be followed by a vast majority of teams. There is always opposition to anything that changes the old order of things. It is evident, however, that nearly every one, including those who can not see the advantages of the new procedure, are willing to give the latest rules a trial in the coming season.

The Western Conference, one of the most powerful collegiate organizations, is willing to test the new rules. This information was brought here by Pat Page, Butler coach, who attended the Big Ten meeting some time ago. There has been some talk of the Indiana High School Association opposing the changes and sticking to the old playing regulations.

The greatest changes in the rules have to do with the increased penalties for personal fouls called in the end zones and the lightening of the penalty for certain technical fouls. The end zones are formed by extending the free throw line to the sides of the court.

Personal fouls called in these zones on the defensive team will carry a penalty of two free trials at goal. One personal foul is charged against the offender. In other words, a guard or any member of the defensive team in the seventeen-foot space under the basket he is defending will have one personal foul charged and the opposing team will be allowed two free throws. But if a member of the team on the offensive were to foul within the same limits, one personal foul would be charged and the defensive team would be given one free throw.

Technical Foul Change For certain technical fouls a free throw is not given, but the ball goes to the opponent at the nearest point out of bounds on the side. The technical fouls carrying this lightened penalty are running with, kicking, or striking the ball with the fists, violating the jumping rules, passing the ball to another player on the free throw, instead of making an honest effort to cage it, interfering with the ball on the edge of the basket, or within it, and double-dribbling.

This rule is another distinct innovation, and some claim it will lead to more players trying to get away with an extra step and the double dribble. Some net stars are on the ragged edge on these restrictions, and the contention is that with not so great a penalty attached if caught they will see just how far they can go. This question can not be settled until actual contests are played.

Other technical violations of the rules will be punished by one free throw. These fouls consist of the following: Interfering with a player returning the ball from out of bounds, taking time out after the three time out periods have been used, talking to officials or other unsportsmanlike conduct, delaying game by touching ball after it has been awarded to opponent out of bounds or leaving court, improper reporting to referee and coaching from side-lines.

Time-Out Rule Another new rule is that which states time can not be called by the captain of a team if his opponents have the ball on an out-of-bounds play. The change was made because it was thought that the ball should not be considered dead for purposes of time-out on an outside play, as most all teams have plays that start from the sidelines, and it is an unfair advantage to stop the game at that point. Substitution of players has been speeded up to 30 seconds.

Last year, there were various interpretations when there was a head ball under the basket. The rule stated that if the backboard or basket interfered with the toss-up the referee should bring the ball out to the foul line. Some referees brought the ball out if it was anywhere in the free-throw lane.

This year the rules clearly state that if the ball is held within the boundaries of the lanes that it is to be brought back. The Big Ten ruled in a common-sense manner that by the free throw lane was meant the space in front of the foul line, and did not include the circle in rear.

Conference Rules. In the western conference meeting, attended by basketball officials and coaches, several points were stressed and some interpretations of the rules thrashed out. In the Big Ten the referees will allow a bit of leeway at the start of the dribble.

The one step rule of last season was thought somewhat severe and it was decided that this year a player would be allowed his one step at the start and if the ball left his hands before his back foot came down again the referee would be considered legal. This is the manner in which most officials in this State interpreted the rule last season, but in the conference games a very strict watch was kept of this play.

Officials were warned to watch carefully guarding from the rear. The meeting brought out that it was almost impossible to guard a man from the rear without fouling.

Playing the Field

With Eddie Ash

HOW MUCH would have you staked that Baltimore would have walked New Haven in the eastern minor league series? Any dopest would have gone in hock to back the Orioles. And the Orioles lost! The Class A team won two out of three by scoring six runs in the ninth Wednesday. What a rally! Balto had five runs when the final inning arrived and New Haven had drawn eight blanks. The six runs were scored after two were out and after the victory every New Haven player was carried around the field on the shoulders of the fans. Sterling Stryker, former Indianapolis hurler, pitched eight of the nine innings for the winners. Baseball dope seldom runs to form in a short series. There's a hunch for you on the world's series.

ST. PAUL used a gang of rookies against the Indians Wednesday and the Tribe won, 6 to 5. A big fifth inning, in which the Hoosiers scored five runs, decided the contest. Speed Martin, one of the Saint regulars, faced the Indians and they collected thirteen hits. Purcell topped with three safeties and Krueger got a home run. Seib hurled for the Hendricks-men.

Toledo beat the Blues and Senators again trimmed the Brewers. The Hens still remain in the cellar. The trailing teams started playing ball about five and one-half months too late.

MILLERS and Colonels split a twin bill, the Pongoes taking the first game, 18 to 1. In the eighth inning of the second contest Louisville got ten runs. The A. A. players are barely going through the motions as the end draws near.

MORE publicity for the Ford family. Second Sacker Ford of the Braves got a homer Wednesday. The poor old Dodgers were shut out.

FUSSELL is the name of a new Chicago Cub rookie. He fussed through nine innings against the Pirates and, despite lack of control, he won.

HENLINE is going to return to Ft. Wayne with lots of conversation for the home boys. He clouted another homer Wednesday against the Giants. The Phils got an even break with the champs in a twin-header. McGraw used a line-up of recruits in the second day. Shinnars and Hill, former Hoosiers, performed.

ED LEWIS and Gardini started their swing around the circuit at San Francisco Tuesday. The big squeeze is on.

MANY ROBINS must seek new nests. Brooklyn has asked for waivers on seventeen players of more or less ability. Fans there want something different to look at.

THERE'S going to be lots of turf kicked up in that Franklin-Butler game Saturday. If carrying weapons was permissible, both teams would be loaded for bear. Over the top!

The ponies were to run at the Speedway today. Not the kind that carry jockeys, however, but the polo brand.

Down goes Battling Sild's stock as a terror. He's already got smarted up. His next bout, according to his manager, will be with the winner of the Frank Moran-Joe Beckett match. Shades of the gray beards!

MOBILE won the Dixie baseball title by beating Ft. Worth Wednesday, 2 to 1. Mobile won four games, Ft. Worth two and one was tied. Hap Huhn, Indianapolis boy, got a double. The game was errorless. Mobile will now play Tulsa, Western League champs.

PRINCE OF WALES DUBS HIS BALL ON HISTORIC COURSE BEFORE CRITICAL GALLERY

'Eddie,' a Student of Sandy Herd, Plows Up Yards of Dirt and Displays Many Nerves in Feature Event in Scotland.

By United Press

ST. ANDREWS, Scotland, Sept. 28.—Old Sandy Herd, wherever he be this day, is a man disgraced before the most critical golf gallery in all the world. For the Prince of Wales, the most precious student who ever learned the rudiments of golf from the famous old Scotsman, dubbed his drive Wednesday as he "drive himself in" at the Royal and Ancient Golf Club, before taking the honorary office of captain of the club.

The Prince nervously wagged his driver four times, then hauled back and swung the head of the club into the earth several inches behind the tee. The big gallery, representing all strata of the democracy of the ancient game, was too well bred to groan. It was a tragic mishap, but they bore it with Scottish fortitude. The club, continuing the swing, nudged the little white pill and sent it bounding down the fairway a scant fifty yards.

Sandy Herd, who put the first club in Young Eddie's hands and dinned the don'ts of the game into the royal ears, is somewhere in America. Fate spared him the sight of Wednesday's sad occasion.

All the circumstances were against the Prince, anyway. It was a rainy, gloomy day to begin and the concerted clicking of the cameras as he stepped to the tee was enough to unnerve most any man. The Prince was fussed and he showed his embarrassment.

A club-maker down the fairway was the lucky man to retrieve the ball and the Prince, in accordance with ancient custom, hauled him a sovereign. Hundreds of alert little caddies, wise in the game of golf and disdainful of the ordinary dud, scrambled for the ball. They were not critical about the Prince's mishap but it taxed their forbearance.

"I feel a bit shaky," said the Prince at the conclusion of the ceremony. "Playing in" by newly elected captains of the Royal and Ancient Golf Club is a ceremony dating back to 1754.

The Prince wore a smart golfing suit of gray, in contrast to the seedy get-up of the truest golfers in the world, the natives from the country roundabout, who gathered in their working clothes, most every man with a club in his hand, for golf sticks are used as walking sticks here.

NEW HAVEN trimmed the Baltimore club of the International League in a post-season series. The men of Dunn go big guns in their own league, but they usually get walloped when they go visiting. Last year it was Louisville and this year New Haven.

The Orioles show wonderful class during the playing season, winning handsomely and then something pops and they are beaten by teams who, on paper, are far inferior.

Dunn knows his onions when it comes to tackling up the league bunting, but he slows up, usually when that is done.

THE Brooklyn National League management is cleaning house. Seventeen old timers have been swished toward the gate and waivers have been asked on them.

President Elberts refuses to comment, but eastern fans are agreed that it is time for a cleanup.

Y. M. S. Athletic Meeting. Next Friday night the Y. M. S. baseball and football clubs will hold a meeting in the clubrooms. All baseball players are requested to turn in their uniforms at this meeting.

Uniforms will be issued the football squad and arrangements made for a final workout for Sunday's game with Greenwood. Games are wanted with State teams. For games address Edie Endicott Blum, 726 Cottage Ave., or call Drexel 5156 between 5 and 7 p. m.

GRR-R GROWLS KAYO'D DANDY OF FRANCE AS HE NURSES NICE SHINER

'Let Me at Him,' Mumbles Former European Champ Heavy Through Thick Lips—Carries His Mits in Gauze Muffs.

By United Press

PARIS, Sept. 28.—George Carpentier is slowly recovering from the effects of the recent beating he received from Battling Siki. The former European heavyweight champion, seen at his home today presented a rather sad appearance. He left his bed for the first time and sat up for a while on a sofa clad in a loud silk robe. His face is misshapen, with greatly swollen lips and a lacerated cheek. His hands are still bandaged and almost useless.

Carpentier still talks of nothing but the beating he is going to give his conqueror if he ever gets him in the ring again.

"I'm just living for the chance to hit that Siki on the jaw. He tripped me to the floor and I wasn't knocked out."

"I'll make him look ridiculous the next time. I never got in a good punch after I broke my right hand," he said.

As soon as he is able to make the trip he is going to Biarritz to join his family and then he is going to Amsterdam.

Francois Descamps, his manager, has abandoned the idea of attempting to have the decision of the judges overruled.

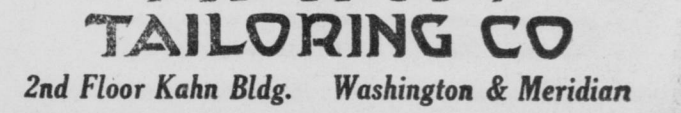

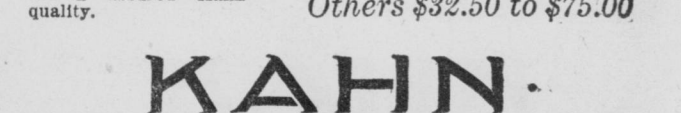

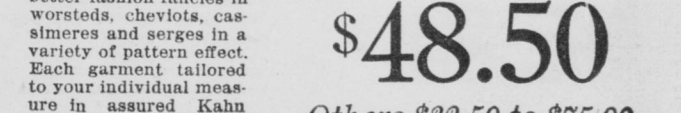

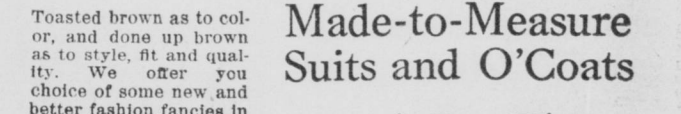

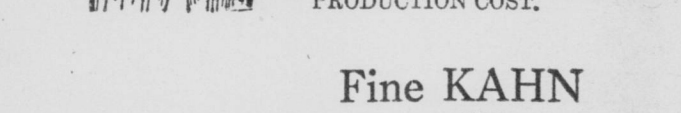

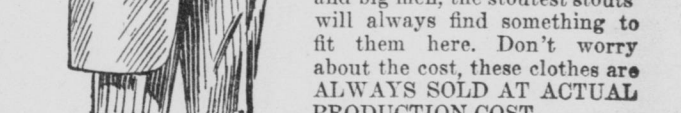

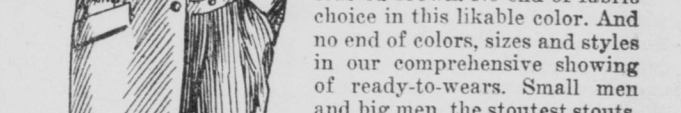

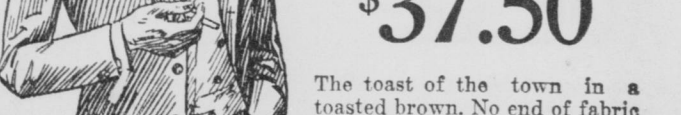

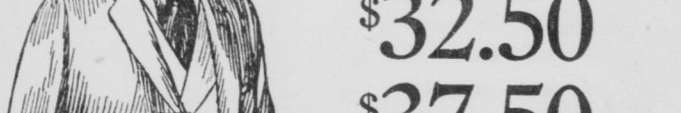

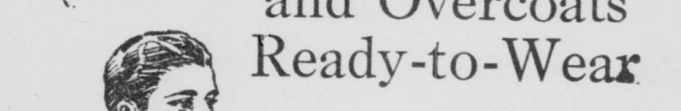

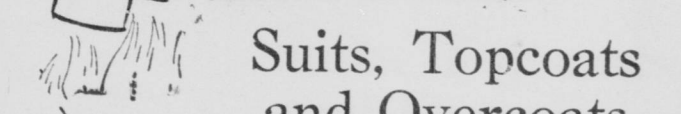

"I am not going to protest the decision," he said today. "Instead, I am going to file a challenge with the federation on Oct. 21, which, according to the regulations, is thirty days after the bout. Siki then will have to grant Carpentier a return match."
