TOOTHLESS PET DOG
Splits Old Irvington's Society

If the ghost of Ikey, departed terrier pet of Miss Genevieve Hall, daughter of Prof. Jabez Hall of Butler College, 28 S. Irvington Ave., could come back tonight he would find himself more of a dinner table topic than that of whether the college shall be moved to Fairview.

One day Ikey bit little Mary Muriel Carlisle, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Earl Carlisle, on the arm as she played at the home of her grandmother, Mrs. Alvin R. Dittick, 5506 Lowell Ave., according to Mrs. Dittick. That was a month ago.

A doctor patched up the wound and a demand was made-up the Halls to pay the bill, Mrs. Dittick said.

The Halls refused. They had no teeth and wouldn't do such a thing, they said, according to parties in the comedy.

Then Ikey disappeared.

Miss Hall started an investigation. Enter the Rev. and Mrs. Peter McEwen, 21 S. Irvington Ave., known as great lovers of dogs, to aid Miss Hall. Business of investigators searching the classic highways, sometimes late at night, it was said.

A Clew—A fresh mound of dirt in the back yard of Samuel O. Smart, 5510 Lowell Ave.

Suspicion—There lies Ikey.

Samuel Smart, Jr., 21, sat on the front porch carelessly strumming a guitar as a reporter approached. The amateur sleuth had tramped over half of Irvington trying to find somebody who would disclose what became of Ikey. Irvington is careful about talking to strangers.

"Sure I'll tell you," he said, twining a final twang before carefully leaning the instrument against the porch rail. "I shot him because he bit the little girl next door and snapped at my mother. I asked the policeman out here if I should shoot him and he told me to go ahead. We buried him in the back yard. I didn't know what else to do with him. The board of health told us to put him in the ash can but it was hot weather and we didn't know when the collector would come along."

"They tried to prosecute me in city court for shooting inside the city limits, but the policeman had given me permission. Then they had the board of health send an inspector out here." The court records show the case was continued until Oct. 13.

"Miss Hall came over here and wanted to know why the people next door didn't keep the little girl inside if they didn't want her to get bitten," interposed Mrs. Smart. "She said her dog had no teeth."

"The health inspector had the dog dug up and we found he had a full set of teeth, upper and lower," said Smart Jr.
