HAMMOND, Ind., Oct. 17.—Mrs. Hazel McNally, charged with murdering her own twin babies, today built up a defense on the claim that it was impossible for her to become a mother.

The demure and attractive 23-year-old wife, in jail here on the story told by her 55-year-old husband, Frank McNally, that she had kept the birth of the children last December a secret until they were "disposed of," was confident that she would be able to prove her claim.

"I haven't done a thing wrong and I am not worried," she said today. "This murder charge is a frame-up—a low, dirty trick by Frank."

The woman's married life with McNally—her second husband—has been far from peaceful.

McNally charged that she gave birth to the twins—children of her first husband—last December, a short time after she had entered into her second marriage.

"I never saw the children," McNally said, "although I was living in the house at the time. But I know they were there. She kept them until February, when she bought a couple of dolls and told me that what I had thought were twins were really dolls."

"He never saw them because I really never had any children," said Mrs. McNally.

Examination of the birth records that any children she may have had were not registered.

Joe Todd, prosecuting attorney, declared he had a strong case against the girl.

This is the second charge which Mrs. McNally has faced as a result of her husband's accusations. She was arrested in South Bend recently on a charge of beating her husband, but was released after five days and re-arrested immediately for the alleged murder.

Meeting of 5 Generations

A visit of Thomas Ashby of New Albany at the home of his daughter, Mrs. Melissa Coble, 640 Avergne Ave., has brought five generations of a family together.

Seated in the picture are Mr. Ashby, and Mrs. Coble. Standing are Mrs. Coble's daughter, Mrs. Mollie Priese, and Edward Wolfstetter, son of Mrs. Priese. The baby is William Wolfstetter, son of Mr. Wolfstetter.

Mr. Ashby, who is 85, is a veteran of the Civil War, having served in the 66th Indiana Volunteers and the 18th Indiana regiment. He was in Andersonville prison seventeen months.

The use of one of the cisterns, and the Democrats the use of the other. Both were drained. Both were cleaned. Both parties then rushed to the distillery and purchased large quantities of whiskey.

This whiskey was carted to the courthouse square and the cisterns were filled to the brim with the liquor. The day of the rally came. The Republicans posted a man at their pump and the Democrats stationed a party worker at their's.

All day long the thirsty persons, and some whose thirst seemed unquenchable, walked or staggered up to the cisterns and huge tin cups were pumped full of the sparkling liquid—rum. You could drink as much as you pleased and it didn't cost you a cent, thus goes the tale of Mr. Linton.

About the same time, long before the water cooler had become an accepted piece of office furniture, the merchants always kept two pitchers and two glasses standing on their counters. In one pitcher was whiskey, in the other was water. The customers, if they were so inclined, might take a drink of whiskey whenever the notion struck them, and follow it with a chaser of cold water.

But as the old saying is, "Them days is gone forever."

At that time the Columbus courthouse was only a small building, constructed of wood. It stood in the exact center of the present courthouse square. On corners of this square were two big, deep cisterns, where the thirsty were won to quench their thirst.

There was to be a big political rally. The Republicans or Whigs, obtained the use of one of the cisterns, and the Democrats the use of the other. Both were drained. Both were cleaned. Both parties then rushed to the distillery and purchased large quantities of whiskey.

By United Press
NEW BRUNSWICK, N. J., Oct. 17.—Blood-stained handkerchiefs found near the scene of the murders of the Rev. Edward Wheeler Hall and Mrs. Eleanor Mills, furnish the newest clew to a solution of the mystery. Prosecutor Beekman attached much importance to the handkerchiefs.

Henry H. Stevens, expert marksman, a brother of Mrs. Hall, widow of the slain pastor, who was planning to go to Europe, he said, was forced to postpone his voyage.

Besides the handkerchiefs, one of which was said to have a letter "S" embroidered on a corner, the county officials said they were today in possession of other leads.

A woman has gone to the authorities with a story of seeing two persons, a man and a woman, surveying the vacant lot on the edge of which the bodies of the pastor and the sexton's wife were found.

Mrs. Hall, the rector's widow, and her brothers, Henry and Willie, appeared before the authorities at the Courthouse for examination today. Their appearance together aroused a furor of excited interest.

The opinion came in forfeiture proceedings in connection with the seizure in August of last year of the British registered schooner Henry L. Marshall off Atlantic City with 1,250 cases of whiskey aboard.

BEER AND WINE ISSUE IS HOPELESS IN NEXT CONGRESS

Wets Expect to Maintain Fight for Amendment of Law at Every Chance.

Copyright, 1922, by United Press
WASHINGTON, Oct. 17.—Beer and light wines will not be restored as the sequel of the congressional elections next month.

The "wets" may make substantial gains in the next Congress, but that Congress, like the one now in office, will be "dry."

These facts are apparent to all observers of the political trend of the year, "wet" and "dry" leaders agree. They are further buttressed by the opinions of experienced politicians allied with neither the "wets" nor the "drys."

Keep Issue to Fore
In spite of the fact that it is admittedly impossible for the "wets" to score a sweeping overturn of the Volstead law this year, they are keeping the issue strongly to the fore every place where there is the slightest chance to inject it into the campaign.

This year's campaign is but the beginning of a fight which they confidently assert will end in the modification of the Volstead law to permit "moderate" alcoholic beverages.
