SANTA TO BRING FLAPPER DOLLS

SKETCHED BY TIMES STAFF ARTIST

As this is a story about Christmas, it really should begin somewhat like this:

"Little boys are being good these days. Mother never has to ask them twice to go on an errand and Dad finds little use for his house slippers, except to wear 'em."

But as this is to be a "different" Christmas story, about the new and "different" toys, a less conventional start might be made, something like this:

Just as the flapper is going out of style in the drawing rooms of the "four hundred," the flapper doll is coming into style in the playrooms.

Bob Their Hair

Behold her!—Miranda (why on earth should a flapper have a name like that?) and her co-flapper, Ann. They of their hair. Their rosy cheeks and red lips do credit to the beauty counter of the leading department stores. The dolls perpetuate the flapper, just as the screen perpetuates Mary Pickford's curls and Harold Lloyd's glasses.

With his eyes and the corners of his mouth turned up (perhaps he's flirting with the flapper dolls), Felix, the crazy cat, greets you. He's hoping the lad in whose stocking he finds himself on Christmas morning has a sense of humor.

Bears, it is said, will be quite popular this Christmas. Because of the warm weather, apparently they found it unnecessary to hibernate this year.

Hairy Ape Arrives

Polly comes from Europe to amuse the youngsters of America. And Tarzan, the "hairy ape," looks anything but ferocious in his Americanized clothes.

"Mamma" dolls are to be had in every size. The more realistic they are, the farther Dad must dig into his pocket.

On the whole, it looks like a very merry Christmas for the "younger set."

Childers Saw Death as Aid to Cause of Irish Independence

By NEA Service

LONDON, Dec. 6.—Erskine Childers, British-born fighter for Irish independence, went to his death at the hands of Irish Free State executioners breathing defiance and declaring that the Irish people some day would repudiate the Anglo-Irish treaty and form an independent state of the type for which he died.

This is brought out by a last statement from Childers issued in prison and printed today exclusively through NEA Service.

Childers' last words were:

"I am proud to die for a principle greater than any government or any country. It is true I am English in the strict sense of the word, but I deny that accident of birth can limit the human mind and I have been ready to fight for the liberty of mankind against tyranny wherever found."

"I am condemned to death by men who were ready to condemn tyranny when exercised by the English in Ireland, but who take another view when it is a question of maintaining their own positions, positions won by betraying the cause for which so many of their countrymen died."

"One day the people of Ireland will awake to the fact that they have been betrayed and that it was left to this damned Englishman, as I have been called, to remain true to the principles for which the best and bravest sons of Erin have given their lives gladly."

"Friends of liberty the whole world over will realize that I have not sacrificed my life in vain."

"I face my fate proudly conscious of the great privilege that is mine of dying for the cause of liberty, a cause more often betrayed than served these days."

"I am condemned to death by men
