

WARM DEBATE ON CENSORSHIP BILL IS LED BY WOMEN

Public Morals Corrupted by
Films, Charge at Senate
Hearing.

Charges that uncensored movies are corrupting public morals and undermining church and school were answered by statements that censored films were "un-American," "a blow at free speech and thought," and a death sentence for the photoplay industry at a public hearing on the movie censorship bill before the Senate committee on public morals in the Senate Chamber Thursday night. Women took the leading part in the three-hour debate. Senator Oliver E. Dunn, committee chairman, presided.

Representatives of churches, reform associations, and women's clubs spoke for the bill. Moving picture distributors, Indiana Photoplay Indorsers, and a delegation of Southport women representing a Parent-Teacher organization, spoke against the measure.

Regulation Urged

"Movies should be regulated and licensed like any business," said W. S. Clemens of Chicago, representing the National Reform Association. Southport women said censored movies meant more expensive pictures, but no better. They said moving pictures in country schoolhouses could not be supported if a "big license fee had to be paid."

Mrs. E. C. Rumpel, head of the Indiana Legislative Bureau and representing many women's clubs, said film censorship would be adopted just as prohibition and women suffrage. She said Will Hays was employed to offset the movement toward censorship.

"Another Commission"

Moving picture men, in answering Mrs. Rumpel, said the move was aimed to destroy the film industry, would create "another commission," and predicted the public would refuse to return legislators who voted for the bill.

Mrs. M. E. Robbins of Indianapolis pointed out the big expense of censorship and said the public would pay increased admission charges. A. J. Rucker, attorney for the Indiana Indorsers, said the censorship move would put pictures in politics and would prohibit pictures of educational interest because of "whims of censors."

In answering hecklers, the Rev. Harry L. Bowley of New York said the "life-like impressions" of movies stamped them "more dangerous than newspapers and magazines." He denied he would censor the press.

KIDNEYS MUST HAVE PLENTY OF WATER

Kidney and bladder irritations often result from acidity, says a noted authority. The kidneys help filter this acid from the blood and pass it on to the bladder, where it may remain to irritate and inflame, causing a burning, scalding sensation, or setting up an irritation at the neck of the bladder, obliging you to seek relief two or three times during the night. The sufferer is in constant dread; the water passes sometimes with a scalding sensation and is very profuse; again, there is difficulty in voiding it.

Bladder weakness, most folks call it because they can't control urination. While it is extremely annoying and sometimes very painful, this is often one of the most simple ailments to overcome. Begin drinking lots of soft water, also get about four ounces of Jad Salts from your pharmacist and take a tablespoonful in a glass of water before breakfast. Continue this for two or three days. This will help neutralize the acids in the system so they no longer are a source of irritation to the bladder and urinary organs, which then act normal again.

Jad Salts is inexpensive, and is made from the acid of grapes and lemon juice, combined with lithia, and is used by thousands of folks who are subject to urinary disorders caused by acid irritation. Jad Salts causes no bad effects whatever. Here you have a pleasant, effervescent lithia-water drink which may quickly relieve your bladder irritation. By all means have your physician examine your kidneys at least twice a year.—Advertisement.
