Doctors Say It Is Criminal To Neglect a Cold

Health authorities are quoted as saying that a very large percentage of colds might be prevented and that a still greater amount of serious illness might be avoided if people would not neglect the common cold at its first appearance. Every cold carries with it an element of great danger.

That is why Father John's Medicine has established itself as the family medicine of greatest value because it treats colds in the natural way, drives them off promptly and rebuilds the power of resistance so that strength and normal health is promptly regained.

Martha Lee's Advice

True Love and 'Petting' Are Not to Be Compared

PERHAPS I am hopelessly behind times, but I can not see that "petting" and love have much to do with each other.

"How can a boy love without kissing?" asks a reader who agrees with "Robinson Crusoe" that all girls like "petting."

I suppose these boys never thought of sacrifice and unselfishness in connection with love. Of course they do not realize that sometimes the greatest love is that which never is declared.

Must Have Kisses
Miss Lee: I think poor Robinson Crusoe is right. How can a boy love without kissing? Why, he cannot do it. I wouldn't have a girl I couldn't kiss.

I don't think such a great opinion from us "shells." I am what every one calls pretty but surely have a "sweetie." I am sure I would die if I didn't have at least a dozen kisses a week.

Miss Lee: Not prying into your personal affairs, but didn't one of your boy friends ever hug or kiss you? If they didn't, you surely are queer, and I hope you soon will learn how to love.

So you would "just die" without a dozen kisses a week? Well, and if you did, you know what would happen, don't you? Your girls would let other boys kiss them and not miss you, because your friendship would have such a flimsy foundation.

I thank you for your sympathy for me. Naturally, I cannot answer your personal questions. But in return, let me hope that some time you will learn true love, which does not have to be expressed by kissing.

Husband's Love Gone
Dear Miss Lee: I am 21. My husband is 31. We have a baby girl 1½ years old. Our troubles have just begun in the past year. It seems as though my husband loves me no more. He gets puffed at the least thing, he has broken up my plans many times. I tell him I will go back to my parents and he says that is what he wants.

But love him and cannot leave him. I don't like to bring my baby up without a father. At times he seems to think the world of baby and me. I stay at home and make everything as pleasant as possible. Please tell me what to do.

UNHAPPY WIFE.
I think you will have to take a long risk, to restore your home. Next time your husband tells you to leave, do so. Tell him you will return when he is ready to treat you as he did when you were first married. I have no doubt that will make him realize what a brute he has been.

Another Chance
M. F. W.: As long as there is a possibility that you and your husband can be happy together, I think you should take it.

He may not deserve a third chance. But he seems sincerely repentant, and for your baby's sake I think you should take him back. Make it clear to him that this is his last opportunity to make good.

Worried About 'Dates'
Dear Miss Lee: I am a girl of 18 and not bad-looking. I am a senior in high school and have a good time wherever I go. But although I have many really nice boy friends, I very seldom have a "date." I mother am a little bit old-fashioned. I don't like to be taken too seriously, and I don't like to have my dates. I wish I could have for me for all their "dates." But I wish to have both.

I do not see why you should take the boys "seriously." Beth, as long as you are in high school. But it may be that you treat them altogether in a sisterly manner and they never think of asking you for "dates." Don't let it worry you.

It is good for you to have "many boy friends" now; the "dates" can come after you leave school.

Man Demands Love
Dear Miss Lee: I am 18 and have been going out with a boy for a year. Before I began to go with him he was what some people call "wild." After he began to go with me he has become very serious and I wish to have both.

I thought I loved him, but now I see I do not. He notices the change and says that he will love me always even though I leave him. I don't know what to do. I wish to have faith in him. He says he will go back to his old life, and he will still love me. I wish to have him on. I already have caused four boys to go the same way. I don't know what to do. I wish to have him and other again. I feel that I should make him think I love him. Should I?

RECKLESS.
It's a bad habit, this of leading men on and then discovering you do not love them.

If this man really loves you, that love will keep him straight even though you do not return it. You are young.

Ask the man to take your friendship now. You may find love within the next few years. Remind him that

Relieves Rheumatism
Musterole loosens up stiff joints and drives out pain. A clean, white ointment, made with a lot of mustard, it usually brings relief as soon as you start to rub it on.

It does all the good work of the old fashioned mustard plaster, without the blister. Doctors and nurses often recommend its use.

Get Musterole today at your drug store, 35¢ and 50¢ in jars and tubes; hospital size, $3.00.

you could not learn to love a man who would be so weak as to return to a "wild" life just because a girl who gives him full friendship cannot give him love as well.

FLORANCE: It is all right to send a valentine to your boy cousin. However, the boys are the ones who are supposed to send the valentines.

Affection Is Gone
Dear Miss Lee: I am 20. I have a baby girl 14 months old and have been married three years. Since baby came my husband has seemed to lose his affection for me. He will not let me go any place. I am considering good friends and giving me your advice as to how to win back his affection.

I suppose your husband feels that it is a mother's duty to stay home and take care of her children. But if she does that entirely she becomes dull and uninteresting.

Be sure I am a good mother that your husband cannot complain on that score. Then be just as good a wife. Even though it is hard to dress up after you have been taking care of the baby all day, do so when your husband comes home. Have his dinner ready, and be sure it is good. Be cheerful, no matter how cross the baby has been. In fact, treat your husband as you would the baby, for apparently he is just spoilt.

Starting Young
Dear Miss Lee: I have gone with a boy a month. I am not sure and somehow have turned against the first one. As I meet different boys I don't care for the first one. I know the first boy loves me, but I just cannot love him.

No, Peggy, you cannot love this boy, or any other boy, for several years. Don't take the boys so seriously; let them be your friends.

Husband Back Again
Dear Miss Lee: I have a divorce from my husband. But a few days after I got it he came to my mother's house to bring our children Christmas presents. He cried and begged me to take him back. I told him I would see him once in a while. He calls for me in his car at a store where I work. He tries to
