Paderewski Includes Indianapolis in 'Art's Greatest Comeback Tour'

By WILSON G. SMITH
Famous American Music Critic and Composer.

PADEREWSKI, erstwhile premier of Poland and present premier pianist of the world, has come again into his kingdom—the kingdom of art where he reigns with regal splendor.

Time was when he sat at the piano and like an improvisator wove tonal threads of which dreams are made, and cast the glamour of his poetry like a spell upon all who heard.

Technic, the mechanical means of expression, was lost sight and hearing of through the resplendent and ecstatic glow of his inspiration. He was a painter of moods clothed in colors glowing with adolescence—as changeable and beautiful as the rainbow.

To the old masters he imparted an undreamed of import, call it inspiration if you like, for it had a subtle quality that differentiated it from all others.

He molded his tonal phrases with the plastic certainty of utterance with which the deft hands of the sculptor models his clay.

In his halcyon days Paderewski did more to make obvious to the public the essential of tonal beauty as opposed to mere technical display in piano playing than all the herds of petty tyrants of the keyboard before or since.

This was Paderewski in his first estate; in later years he seemed obsessed with the idea that noise—or volume, if you like—was the great requisite, and banged the piano like Hercules at his Augean task or Vulcan at his anvil.

The piano fairly groaned and shrieked under his titanic onslaughts. It was frenzied emotionalism carried to the nth degree, with but few traces of the subtle beauties that had characterized his former artistry.

It was a most astounding debacle and can only be accounted for through psychological reasoning and analysis, complex and subtle.

But now the tale is a different one. Concisely, it is Paderewski redivivus, the supreme artist of his first estate, with all his engaging charms of tonal beauty and interpretative inspiration reincarnated and made audible.

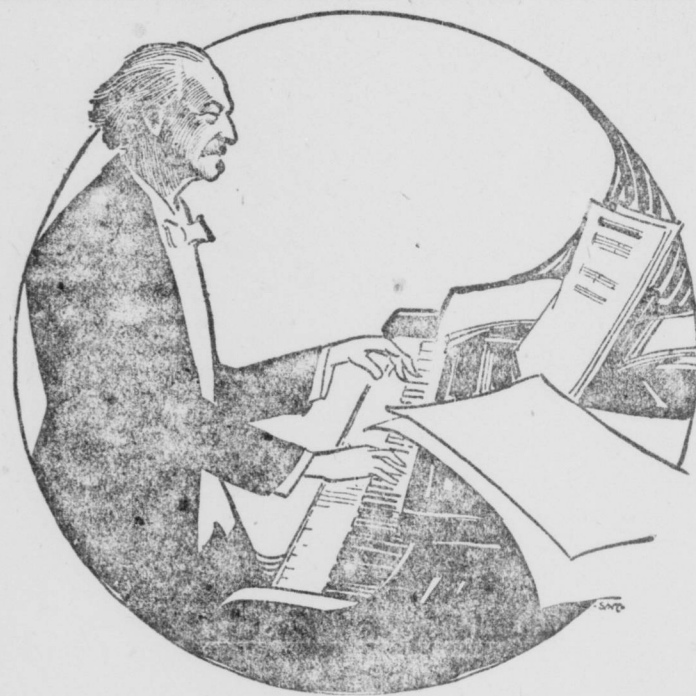

The master is himself again; through tragic experiences his inspirational style has become more melodic and imbued with an even greater appeal and charm.

Twelve thousand people obsessed by enthusiasm rose in mass to do him homage at the recital in Cleveland where I heard him the other evening.

To arouse such enthusiasm in a mixed audience, with a severely classical program, means not mere virtuosity, but something more far reaching and that is, personality and the intriguing charm of inspirational playing. So I make no mistake in using the term "Paderewski redivivus"—an artist supreme and unapproachable.

Columbus Pastor Is Dead

By Times Special
COLUMBUS, Ind., Feb. 28.—The body of the Rev. Frederick Wambagans, 68, pastor of the Evangelical Lutheran Church, was taken to Indianapolis today where it will lie in state at St. Paul's Church. Burial will be made at Crown Hill cemetery. Rev. Wambagans, suffered a stroke of paralysis two weeks ago.

Paderewski has come back—at 62—scoring the greatest personal artistic achievement in the century.

While cities are clamoring for this artist, Ona B. Talbot today announced that Paderewski will appear in concert at the Murat on the afternoon of Sunday, March 25. The world's supreme pianist was 55 when he abandoned his artistic career for the patriotic services of his beloved Poland. When he accomplished all he could for his country, he decided at 61 to return to his piano. But could he regain his former glory? Wilson G. Smith, one of America's foremost critics and composers, answers the question in the following article.

Three Murderers.

Detectives here today started a search for three bandits who shot and killed Sam McGee, messenger at the Los Angeles First National Bank, Feb. 13, and escaped with money and securities totaling $400,000.

Police Chief Louis D. Oaks, of Los Angeles, in a letter to the Indianapolis police, states that his department has information that the robbery was committed by members of an organized gang of Eastern crooks. He believes the robbers will attempt to float their securities in cities of the Central West and East.

Vandever, vice president of the Fidelity and Deposit Company of Maryland, which company had insured the missing securities, offered part of the reward, and the American Bankers association also offered part. Besides the reward for the arrest and conviction of the bandits, a reward of $5,000 will be paid for the recovery of the first $50,000 worth of securities and 5 per cent for each additional $50,000.
