

LITTLE POLAND TAKES VACATION FOR 'POISON' TRIAL

'Female Bluebeards, Dressed Identically, Center of Babble.

By United Press
CHICAGO, March 7.—A holiday was added to the calendar of Little Poland here today as the populace sought points of vantage at the trial of the alleged "female Bluebeards."

Court opened amid a babble of foreign tongues. Children of all ages raced through the court and crowded hallways.

Bailiffs scurried about remonstrating with the irrepressible spectators. The court pounded its gavel fiercely. Only the threat of instant exclusion from the room finally brought some quiet, which lasted only momentarily.

At each question of attorneys examining prospective jurors the babble broke into life and the proceedings were delayed.

Occupying the center of the stage were the two defendants, Mrs. Nellie Koulik and Mrs. Tillie Klinek, charged with murder in connection with an alleged series of "poison parties," which claimed the lives of at least six and resulted in the serious illness of a score more. The poison parties were served to husbands, children, relatives and friends, the State charged.

The two defendants had prepared with care for "their day in court." They were dressed identically. Their figures were laced with obsolete corsets which only partially camouflaged their fat figures.

Mrs. Klinek, alleged by the State to be the arch-conspirator, wore a new near-fur coat open at the throat and a sailor hat tilted far back on her head.

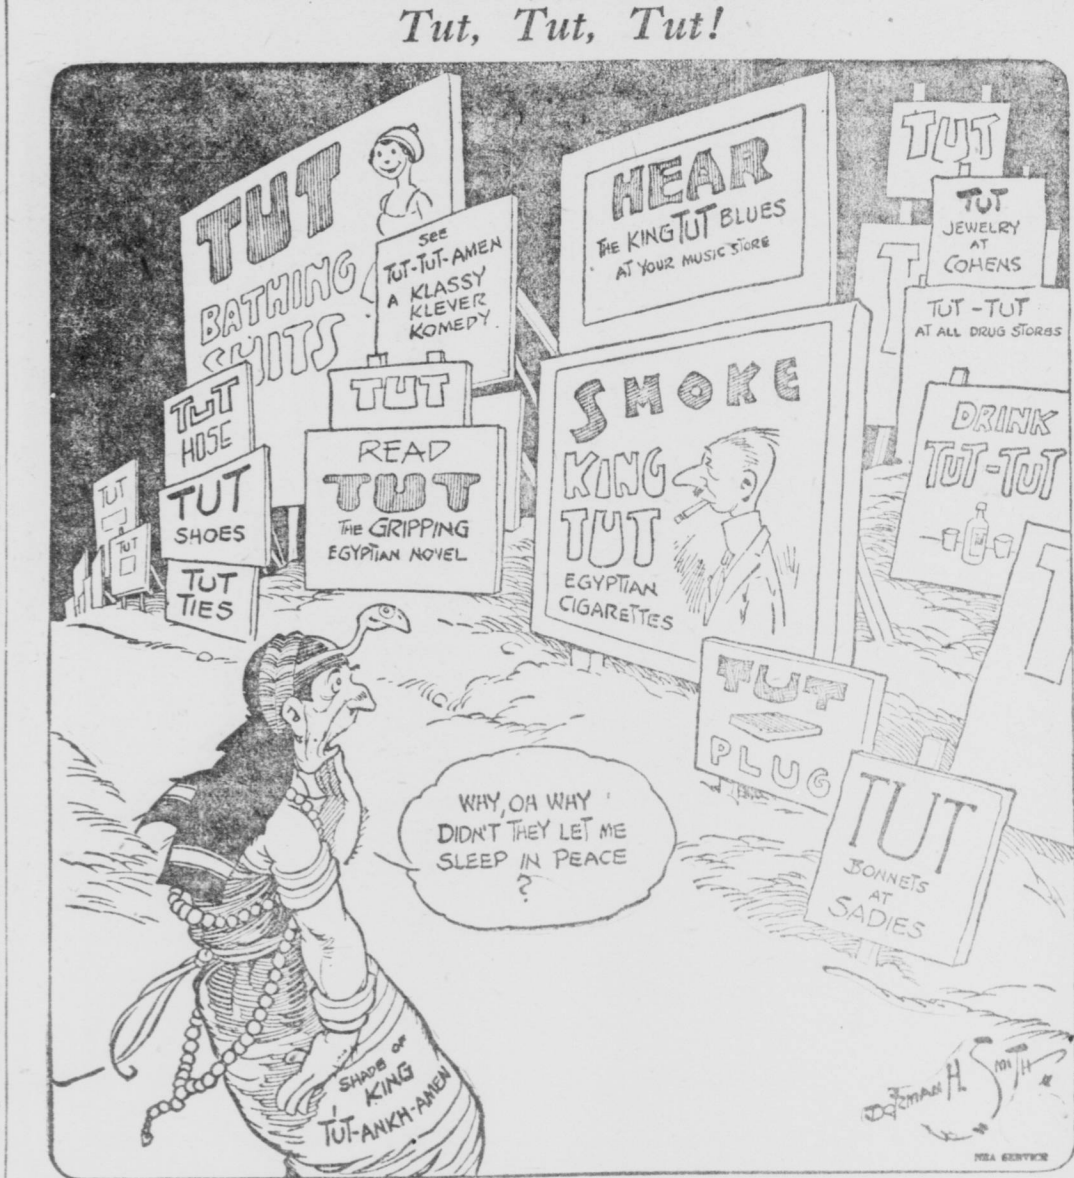

Mrs. Koulik folded her near-fur coat across her knees and wore her sailor hat tilted forward.

SPEAKER DEPLORES HEAVY FIRE LOSS IN UNITED STATES

Would Charge Cost of Fighting Blaze to Those Responsible.

"People who are responsible for fire should pay the city the cost of fighting the fire," Franklin H. Wentworth, Boston, secretary of the National Fire Protection Association, said Tuesday night at the sixth of a series of prevention lectures given at Caleb Mills Hall under the auspices of the Chamber of Commerce prevention committee and the fire prevention bureau of the fire department.

"Keep the fire in the building in which it originates to protect the city against sweeping fires," he said. New England is the home of fire prevention and fire protection, Wentworth said.

"It is lamentable," he declared, "that fire losses still aggregate $500,000,000 annually in the United States and Canada, while Europe is appalled at a $100,000 fire."

Motion pictures of automatic sprinklers, their uses and evolution, were shown by Ira G. Howland, New York, secretary treasurer of the National Automatic Sprinkler Association.

The final lectures of the course will be given next Tuesday night at Caleb Mills Hall. Charles A. Bookwalter, president of the board of park commissioners; Fire Chief John J. O'Brien and Lawrence V. Sheridan, executive secretary of the city plan commission, will speak on "The By-Products of a Fire and Accident Prevention Program."

Man Would Take Blame for Murder to Save Pal

By United Press
TERRE HAUTE, Ind., March 7.—There is a man in jail who wants to take the blame for a murder, but cannot.
