Boys and Girls Should Get in Practice for Big Times Tournament—Remember That Bicycle.

The weather man seems to have been working against the marble players of Indianapolis, but he has promised more warmth for tomorrow and if he is right it will be a good day to practice for The Times city tournament. For this reason the rules are being reprinted today.

Entrants in The Indianapolis Times' marble contest should study carefully the following rules, which will govern the local contest, the sectional tournament and the national match at Atlantic City.

Six contenders or less will play in each game. The order of their turn to shoot will be determined by a 10-foot lag, to see who gets nearest to a given line.

Games for the title will be played with object marbles or ducks three inches apart on a cross mark. The mark will be in the center of a ring 10 feet in diameter.

The game will be played with each contestant knocking down on the edge of the big ring.

The shooters must be left lying when they stop inside the ring. If the shooter goes beyond the ring, the owner picks it up and waits his next turn.

A player gets as many ducks as he knocks out of the circle. Each duck-hitting shot entitles him to another shot. If he hits an opponent's shooter, he gets a duck.

If the opponent's shooter is knocked out of the ring, the owner of the shooter is "killed" and must turn his ducks over to the one making the "killing." Ducks not knocked out remain in the circle. If all ducks are knocked out, the one having the most wins. Accurate scores must be kept.

The referee is boss of the game. His decisions are final in all cases.

Watch The Times for further details of the big national marble shooting contest.
