

WOMEN VOTERS PICK NOMINEES FOR NEW OFFICES

U. S. Participation in Foreign Affairs Advocated by Convention Speakers.

State director of the Indiana League of Women Voters were nominated at this afternoon's session of the convention at the Claypool.

Mrs. W. T. Barnes was chairman of the nomination committee, which included Mrs. Alice Foster McCulloch of Ft. Wayne, Mrs. Homer McCray, Kendallville; Mrs. Charles A. Carlisle, South Bend; and Mrs. Joseph E. Henry, Bloomington. New directors will be voted upon from 11 until 2 o'clock Thursday afternoon.

Committee Reports Made

At the morning session today reports of the treasurer, Mrs. Chester A. Evans, and standing committees were given.

Following the afternoon business session a garden party was given at the home of Mrs. Samuel M. Ralston for delegates and alternates. Mrs. Walter S. Greenough, State president, will review the year's work of the league, following a dinner for the league presidents at the Severin this evening.

"Women do not expect to plan or dictate foreign policies, but they intend to understand and give their support to such international cooperation as will serve to prevent future wars," declared Miss Ruth Morgan, chairman of the national committee on international cooperation to prevent war, in an address at a mass meeting at the Claypool Tuesday night.

League of Nations Praised

Those who oppose the entrance of the United States into some form of international conference to prevent war were severely criticised and the League of Nations and the World Court, advocated by President Harding, praised by Miss Morgan.

Prof. Robert Phillips of Purdue University who followed Miss Morgan, also cited the benefits to be derived from a world court. "The man who claims we can continue to live the life of a hermit has lost touch with the march of progress," he contended.

REPUBLICANS PLAN SUMMER MEETING

Committee Here to Set Date of Session.

Members of the committee on arrangements for the summer meeting of the Republican State Editorial Association at South Bend met here today to agree on dates for the meeting. June 7-9 had been set at the tentative dates, but they conflict with convention dates at South Bend.

Announcement of a final date has been left open pending receipt of President Harding's decision on an invitation to address the meeting. It is understood he will not be able to attend.

Members of the committee on arrangements are George Lindsay, Marion, president of the association; Will Feudner, Rushville; George Elliott, New Castle; Herbert C. Willis, Waterloo; Chester Adams, Vincennes; Walter Montgomery, New Albany; Ed Neal, Noblesville, and F. A. Miller, South Bend.

MRS. KILGORE IS MOURNED

Private Funeral Services Arranged at Residence Thursday.

Mrs. Dorothea A. Kilgore, 42, wife of Dr. Byron Kilgore, who died Monday at her home, 116 W. Twenty-first St., after a three months illness, will be buried Thursday in Crown Hill Cemetery. Private funeral services will be held at the residence at 10:30 a. m.

Mrs. Kilgore was born in Sept. 1880. She had been a lifelong resident of Indianapolis.

Beside her husband, Mrs. Kilgore is survived by five sons: David, a Butler College student, Frederick, Ohio, Byron Jr., and Charles Kilgore.

MUSKRAT SKINS ARE HIGH

Federal Jury Awards Man Damages for Theft From Express Company.

Muskrat skins came high with Federal Court jury. William Alvey of Hebron, Porter County, was awarded damages of $4,306.90 against the American Railway Express Company by a jury today for $82 muskrat furs which were stolen from the office of the express company the night of April 2, 1920.

The express company attempted to prove that it was not liable for the furs, as Alvey had not called for them within a reasonable length of time after they reached Hebron.

MARKET EXPERT SPEAKER

Nebraska Professor Studies Conditions in Indianapolis.

Dr. Paul Ivey, professor of marketing at the University of Nebraska, will be the chief speaker at a banquet at the Lincoln May 10, for representatives of retail stores of the city. Reservations up to 500 may be made through the retail bureau of the Chamber of Commerce.

Dr. Ivey has been in Indianapolis some time gathering figures on market conditions.

Educators to Consider License Law.

By Times Special
TERRE HAUTE, Ind., May 2.—A committee of twenty educators of the State has been appointed to consider proposed recommendations to the board of education in connection with the operation of the new teaching and license law passed by the last General Assembly. Dean Bogardus of the State Normal is chairman.

Indianapolis Folk Joins Traffic 'Chain Gang'

TRAFFICMAN OWENS IS SEEN HOLDING PEDESTRIANS IN CHECK BY THE NEW CHAIN ARRANGEMENT AT MERIDIAN AND WASHINGTON STS.

MOTHER LOVE IS WOMAN'S PLEA IN FIGHT FOR CHILD

Future of Girl in Balance as Two Battle for Custody.

By United Press
CHICAGO, May 2.—The future of Beatrice Nuttall, 12, was dramatically in the balance today as two Superior Court judges resumed hearing pleas of two women who would have her.

Mrs. James Morris, real mother, claimed before she told of the romance that resulted in the child's birth. She declared relatives who spirited the baby away and gave it in adoption through fear of disgrace told her Beatrice was dead.

Mrs. James Nuttall, foster-parent, is to present her claims today. She adopted Beatrice a few weeks after the baby was born.

Although Judge Joseph B. David and Claire C. Edwards announced the case would be determined on "cold law," alone, attorneys quoted both the Bible and fiction profusely to establish claims and emotions of mother love.

$50,000 Judgment Asked

Judgment of $50,000 against the Indiana Power and Water Company and the Indiana Power Company, both of Bicknell, was asked by the Worth-Huskey Coal Company of Chicago, in a suit filed in Federal Court today. Complaint charges that the defendants refused to accept shipments contracted for.

Wise Birds!

Federal building pigeons, wise from years of observation of downtown construction, have gone in for steel construction of nests, according to Morton P. Bonham, assistant custodian of the Federal building.

Bonham decided to destroy pigeon apartments above the doorways. Every nest was found to be skillfully reinforced with heavy nails, he said.

"The modern pigeon sure is a wise bird," Bonham observes.

League Commission Rules on Double Taxation Issue

Report Declares Fundamentals Are Location of Property and Residence of the Individual.

By United Press
GENEVA, May 2.—Largely for the benefit of American financiers and industrialists, on whose capital the future reconstruction and development of Europe must, to a great measure, depend the League of Nations has just made the first recommendations, for solving the problem of double taxation.

Under the presidency of Professor Seligman of Columbia University, a commission including three other international experts has just devoted several months of study at Geneva to the subject.

Besides Professor Seligman, the three other members of the commission were Sir Josiah Stamp of Great Britain, Professor Bruhl of Holland and Senator Einand of Italy.

The report points out the two fundamental elements of economic allegiance are, first, location of property (or origin of income); second, residence of the individual.

Finally, the four possible solutions

'CLARA PHILLIPS' FIGHTS CAMERAMAN AND GUARD

Woman Held in Honduras Bests Two Men and Breaks Up Photograph Plate.

(Copyright, 1923, by United Press)
TEGUCIGALPA, Honduras, May 2.—The woman held as Clara Phillips, Los Angeles hammer slayer, and her woman companion, succeeded in besting the photographers and a jail guard in a hand-to-hand movie fight over a camera.

The fight for the camera lasted about five minutes, beginning in the bedroom in which the prisoners are confined, and ending several yards down the corridor toward the street entrance.

The photographer had gone to the jail to take the woman's picture. This she refused to permit, but he snapped the shutter anyway, and despite the presence of the guard, the woman hurled herself upon him in an effort to destroy the plate.

Her companion, Mrs. R. M. Young, came to her assistance, and together they subdued the reporter and guard. The fight for the camera lasted about five minutes, beginning in the bedroom in which the prisoners are confined, and ending several yards down the corridor toward the street entrance.

The photographer had gone to the jail to take the woman's picture. This she refused to permit, but he snapped the shutter anyway, and despite the presence of the guard, the woman hurled herself upon him in an effort to destroy the plate.

Her companion, Mrs. R. M. Young, came to her assistance, and together they subdued the reporter and guard. The fight for the camera lasted about five minutes, beginning in the bedroom in which the prisoners are confined, and ending several yards down the corridor toward the street entrance.

The photographer had gone to the jail to take the woman's picture. This she refused to permit, but he snapped the shutter anyway, and despite the presence of the guard, the woman hurled herself upon him in an effort to destroy the plate.

Her companion, Mrs. R. M. Young, came to her assistance, and together they subdued the reporter and guard. The fight for the camera lasted about five minutes, beginning in the bedroom in which the prisoners are confined, and ending several yards down the corridor toward the street entrance.

The photographer had gone to the jail to take the woman's picture. This she refused to permit, but he snapped the shutter anyway, and despite the presence of the guard, the woman hurled herself upon him in an effort to destroy the plate.

Her companion, Mrs. R. M. Young, came to her assistance, and together they subdued the reporter and guard. The fight for the camera lasted about five minutes, beginning in the bedroom in which the prisoners are confined, and ending several yards down the corridor toward the street entrance.

The photographer had gone to the jail to take the woman's picture. This she refused to permit, but he snapped the shutter anyway, and despite the presence of the guard, the woman hurled herself upon him in an effort to destroy the plate.

Her companion, Mrs. R. M. Young, came to her assistance, and together they subdued the reporter and guard. The fight for the camera lasted about five minutes, beginning in the bedroom in which the prisoners are confined, and ending several yards down the corridor toward the street entrance.

The photographer had gone to the jail to take the woman's picture. This she refused to permit, but he snapped the shutter anyway, and despite the presence of the guard, the woman hurled herself upon him in an effort to destroy the plate.

Her companion, Mrs. R. M. Young, came to her assistance, and together they subdued the reporter and guard. The fight for the camera lasted about five minutes, beginning in the bedroom in which the prisoners are confined, and ending several yards down the corridor toward the street entrance.

The photographer had gone to the jail to take the woman's picture. This she refused to permit, but he snapped the shutter anyway, and despite the presence of the guard, the woman hurled herself upon him in an effort to destroy the plate.

Her companion, Mrs. R. M. Young, came to her assistance, and together they subdued the reporter and guard. The fight for the camera lasted about five minutes, beginning in the bedroom in which the prisoners are confined, and ending several yards down the corridor toward the street entrance.

The photographer had gone to the jail to take the woman's picture. This she refused to permit, but he snapped the shutter anyway, and despite the presence of the guard, the woman hurled herself upon him in an effort to destroy the plate.

Her companion, Mrs. R. M. Young, came to her assistance, and together they subdued the reporter and guard. The fight for the camera lasted about five minutes, beginning in the bedroom in which the prisoners are confined, and ending several yards down the corridor toward the street entrance.

The photographer had gone to the jail to take the woman's picture. This she refused to permit, but he snapped the shutter anyway, and despite the presence of the guard, the woman hurled herself upon him in an effort to destroy the plate.

Her companion, Mrs. R. M. Young, came to her assistance, and together they subdued the reporter and guard. The fight for the camera lasted about five minutes, beginning in the bedroom in which the prisoners are confined, and ending several yards down the corridor toward the street entrance.

The photographer had gone to the jail to take the woman's picture. This she refused to permit, but he snapped the shutter anyway, and despite the presence of the guard, the woman hurled herself upon him in an effort to destroy the plate.

Her companion, Mrs. R. M. Young, came to her assistance, and together they subdued the reporter and guard. The fight for the camera lasted about five minutes, beginning in the bedroom in which the prisoners are confined, and ending several yards down the corridor toward the street entrance.

The photographer had gone to the jail to take the woman's picture. This she refused to permit, but he snapped the shutter anyway, and despite the presence of the guard, the woman hurled herself upon him in an effort to destroy the plate.

Her companion, Mrs. R. M. Young, came to her assistance, and together they subdued the reporter and guard. The fight for the camera lasted about five minutes, beginning in the bedroom in which the prisoners are confined, and ending several yards down the corridor toward the street entrance.

The photographer had gone to the jail to take the woman's picture. This she refused to permit, but he snapped the shutter anyway, and despite the presence of the guard, the woman hurled herself upon him in an effort to destroy the plate.

Her companion, Mrs. R. M. Young, came to her assistance, and together they subdued the reporter and guard. The fight for the camera lasted about five minutes, beginning in the bedroom in which the prisoners are confined, and ending several yards down the corridor toward the street entrance.

The photographer had gone to the jail to take the woman's picture. This she refused to permit, but he snapped the shutter anyway, and despite the presence of the guard, the woman hurled herself upon him in an effort to destroy the plate.

Her companion, Mrs. R. M. Young, came to her assistance, and together they subdued the reporter and guard. The fight for the camera lasted about five minutes, beginning in the bedroom in which the prisoners are confined, and ending several yards down the corridor toward the street entrance.

The photographer had gone to the jail to take the woman's picture. This she refused to permit, but he snapped the shutter anyway, and despite the presence of the guard, the woman hurled herself upon him in an effort to destroy the plate.

Her companion, Mrs. R. M. Young, came to her assistance, and together they subdued the reporter and guard. The fight for the camera lasted about five minutes, beginning in the bedroom in which the prisoners are confined, and ending several yards down the corridor toward the street entrance.

The photographer had gone to the jail to take the woman's picture. This she refused to permit, but he snapped the shutter anyway, and despite the presence of the guard, the woman hurled herself upon him in an effort to destroy the plate.

Her companion, Mrs. R. M. Young, came to her assistance, and together they subdued the reporter and guard. The fight for the camera lasted about five minutes, beginning in the bedroom in which the prisoners are confined, and ending several yards down the corridor toward the street entrance.

The photographer had gone to the jail to take the woman's picture. This she refused to permit, but he snapped the shutter anyway, and despite the presence of the guard, the woman hurled herself upon him in an effort to destroy the plate.

Her companion, Mrs. R. M. Young, came to her assistance, and together they subdued the reporter and guard. The fight for the camera lasted about five minutes, beginning in the bedroom in which the prisoners are confined, and ending several yards down the corridor toward the street entrance.

The photographer had gone to the jail to take the woman's picture. This she refused to permit, but he snapped the shutter anyway, and despite the presence of the guard, the woman hurled herself upon him in an effort to destroy the plate.

Her companion, Mrs. R. M. Young, came to her assistance, and together they subdued the reporter and guard. The fight for the camera lasted about five minutes, beginning in the bedroom in which the prisoners are confined, and ending several yards down the corridor toward the street entrance.

The photographer had gone to the jail to take the woman's picture. This she refused to permit, but he snapped the shutter anyway, and despite the presence of the guard, the woman hurled herself upon him in an effort to destroy the plate.

Her companion, Mrs. R. M. Young, came to her assistance, and together they subdued the reporter and guard. The fight for the camera lasted about five minutes, beginning in the bedroom in which the prisoners are confined, and ending several yards down the corridor toward the street entrance.

The photographer had gone to the jail to take the woman's picture. This she refused to permit, but he snapped the shutter anyway, and despite the presence of the guard, the woman hurled herself upon him in an effort to destroy the plate.

Her companion, Mrs. R. M. Young, came to her assistance, and together they subdued the reporter and guard. The fight for the camera lasted about five minutes, beginning in the bedroom in which the prisoners are confined, and ending several yards down the corridor toward the street entrance.

The photographer had gone to the jail to take the woman's picture. This she refused to permit, but he snapped the shutter anyway, and despite the presence of the guard, the woman hurled herself upon him in an effort to destroy the plate.

Her companion, Mrs. R. M. Young, came to her assistance, and together they subdued the reporter and guard. The fight for the camera lasted about five minutes, beginning in the bedroom in which the prisoners are confined, and ending several yards down the corridor toward the street entrance.

The photographer had gone to the jail to take the woman's picture. This she refused to permit, but he snapped the shutter anyway, and despite the presence of the guard, the woman hurled herself upon him in an effort to destroy the plate.

Her companion, Mrs. R. M. Young, came to her assistance, and together they subdued the reporter and guard. The fight for the camera lasted about five minutes, beginning in the bedroom in which the prisoners are confined, and ending several yards down the corridor toward the street entrance.

The photographer had gone to the jail to take the woman's picture. This she refused to permit, but he snapped the shutter anyway, and despite the presence of the guard, the woman hurled herself upon him in an effort to destroy the plate.

Her companion, Mrs. R. M. Young, came to her assistance, and together they subdued the reporter and guard. The fight for the camera lasted about five minutes, beginning in the bedroom in which the prisoners are confined, and ending several yards down the corridor toward the street entrance.

The photographer had gone to the jail to take the woman's picture. This she refused to permit, but he snapped the shutter anyway, and despite the presence of the guard, the woman hurled herself upon him in an effort to destroy the plate.

Her companion, Mrs. R. M. Young, came to her assistance, and together they subdued the reporter and guard. The fight for the camera lasted about five minutes, beginning in the bedroom in which the prisoners are confined, and ending several yards down the corridor toward the street entrance.

The photographer had gone to the jail to take the woman's picture. This she refused to permit, but he snapped the shutter anyway, and despite the presence of the guard, the woman hurled herself upon him in an effort to destroy the plate.

Her companion, Mrs. R. M. Young, came to her assistance, and together they subdued the reporter and guard. The fight for the camera lasted about five minutes, beginning in the bedroom in which the prisoners are confined, and ending several yards down the corridor toward the street entrance.

The photographer had gone to the jail to take the woman's picture. This she refused to permit, but he snapped the shutter anyway, and despite the presence of the guard, the woman hurled herself upon him in an effort to destroy the plate.

Her companion, Mrs. R. M. Young, came to her assistance, and together they subdued the reporter and guard. The fight for the camera lasted about five minutes, beginning in the bedroom in which the prisoners are confined, and ending several yards down the corridor toward the street entrance.

The photographer had gone to the jail to take the woman's picture. This she refused to permit, but he snapped the shutter anyway, and despite the presence of the guard, the woman hurled herself upon him in an effort to destroy the plate.

Her companion, Mrs. R. M. Young, came to her assistance, and together they subdued the reporter and guard. The fight for the camera lasted about five minutes, beginning in the bedroom in which the prisoners are confined, and ending several yards down the corridor toward the street entrance.

The photographer had gone to the jail to take the woman's picture. This she refused to permit, but he snapped the shutter anyway, and despite the presence of the guard, the woman hurled herself upon him in an effort to destroy the plate.

Her companion, Mrs. R. M. Young, came to her assistance, and together they subdued the reporter and guard. The fight for the camera lasted about five minutes, beginning in the bedroom in which the prisoners are confined, and ending several yards down the corridor toward the street entrance.

The photographer had gone to the jail to take the woman's picture. This she refused to permit, but he snapped the shutter anyway, and despite the presence of the guard, the woman hurled herself upon him in an effort to destroy the plate.

Her companion, Mrs. R. M. Young, came to her assistance, and together they subdued the reporter and guard. The fight for the camera lasted about five minutes, beginning in the bedroom in which the prisoners are confined, and ending several yards down the corridor toward the street entrance.

The photographer had gone to the jail to take the woman's picture. This she refused to permit, but he snapped the shutter anyway, and despite the presence of the guard, the woman hurled herself upon him in an effort to destroy the plate.

Her companion, Mrs. R. M. Young, came to her assistance, and together they subdued the reporter and guard. The fight for the camera lasted about five minutes, beginning in the bedroom in which the prisoners are confined, and ending several yards down the corridor toward the street entrance.

The photographer had gone to the jail to take the woman's picture. This she refused to permit, but he snapped the shutter anyway, and despite the presence of the guard, the woman hurled herself upon him in an effort to destroy the plate.

Her companion, Mrs. R. M. Young, came to her assistance, and together they subdued the reporter and guard. The fight for the camera lasted about five minutes, beginning in the bedroom in which the prisoners are confined, and ending several yards down the corridor toward the street entrance.

The photographer had gone to the jail to take the woman's picture. This she refused to permit, but he snapped the shutter anyway, and despite the presence of the guard, the woman hurled herself upon him in an effort to destroy the plate.

Her companion, Mrs. R. M. Young, came to her assistance, and together they subdued the reporter and guard. The fight for the camera lasted about five minutes, beginning in the bedroom in which the prisoners are confined, and ending several yards down the corridor toward the street entrance.

The photographer had gone to the jail to take the woman's picture. This she refused to permit, but he snapped the shutter anyway, and despite the presence of the guard, the woman hurled herself upon him in an effort to destroy the plate.

Her companion, Mrs. R. M. Young, came to her assistance, and together they subdued the reporter and guard. The fight for the camera lasted about five minutes, beginning in the bedroom in which the prisoners are confined, and ending several yards down the corridor toward the street entrance.

The photographer had gone to the jail to take the woman's picture. This she refused to permit, but he snapped the shutter anyway, and despite the presence of the guard, the woman hurled herself upon him in an effort to destroy the plate.

Her companion, Mrs. R. M. Young, came to her assistance, and together they subdued the reporter and guard. The fight for the camera lasted about five minutes, beginning in the bedroom in which the prisoners are confined, and ending several yards down the corridor toward the street entrance.

10 inches tall and weighing 165 pounds. He has light hair. He wore a dark blue suit, a dark hat and carried a light overcoat.

"My personal opinion is that the differences between the President and Senators over the court issue will be reached through reservations. There will be no split in the party."

"I am especially opposed to that part of the court plan which gives the British six votes to our one in the election of judges to the court," he said in an interview. "But that does not disturb my relations with the President or my determination to aid in his nomination."

"I am especially opposed to that part of the court plan which gives the British six votes to our one in the election of judges to the court," he said in an interview. "But that does not disturb my relations with the President or my determination to aid in his nomination."

"I am especially opposed to that part of the court plan which gives the British six votes to our one in the election of judges to the court," he said in an interview. "But that does not disturb my relations with the President or my determination to aid in his nomination."

"I am especially opposed to that part of the court plan which gives the British six votes to our one in the election of judges to the court," he said in an interview. "But that does not disturb my relations with the President or my determination to aid in his nomination."

"I am especially opposed to that part of the court plan which gives the British six votes to our one in the election of judges to the court," he said in an interview. "But that does not disturb my relations with the President or my determination to aid in his nomination."

"I am especially opposed to that part of the court plan which gives the British six votes to our one in the election of judges to the court," he said in an interview. "But that does not disturb my relations with the President or my determination to aid in his nomination."

"I am especially opposed to that part of the court plan which gives the British six votes to our one in the election of judges to the court," he said in an interview. "But that does not disturb my relations with the President or my determination to aid in his nomination."

"I am especially opposed to that part of the court plan which gives the British six votes to our one in the election of judges to the court," he said in an interview. "But that does not disturb my relations with the President or my determination to aid in his nomination."

"I am especially opposed to that part of the court plan which gives the British six votes to our one in the election of judges to the court," he said in an interview. "But that does not disturb my relations with the President or my determination to aid in his nomination."

"I am especially opposed to that part of the court plan which gives the British six votes to our one in the election of judges to the court," he said in an interview. "But that does not disturb my relations with the President or my determination to aid in his nomination."

"I am especially opposed to that part of the court plan which gives the British six votes to our one in the election of judges to the court," he said in an interview. "But that does not disturb my relations with the President or my determination to aid in his nomination."

"I am especially opposed to that part of the court plan which gives the British six votes to our one in the election of judges to the court," he said in an interview. "But that does not disturb my relations with the President or my determination to aid in his nomination."

"I am especially opposed to that part of the court plan which gives the British six votes to our one in the election of judges to the court," he said in an interview. "But that does not disturb my