

U. S. SUPREME COURT NEGLECTS WORK TO TAKE VACATIONS

EAT-MORE-BREAD APPEAL IS MADE TO STATE BAKERS

Consumers Are Urged to Take Another Slice at Every Meal.

"If each American would eat one more slice of bread at each meal the entire 170,000,000 bushels of surplus wheat would be consumed," Elmer L. Cline, vice president of the Taggart Baking Company, told the Indiana Bakers' Association at the Severin today.

In 1914, the amount of wheat used per person was 229.3 pounds a year. By 1921 the consumption had fallen approximately thirty-six pounds per person. Wheat is more healthful than other food. All the American people need to do is to regulate their diet."

Cline showed how many large industries would be benefited if this surplus were used at home.

President A. W. Wilkenson presided at the morning session. Other speakers were I. K. Russell, Chicago; John W. Burns, Kansas City; Dr. H. E. Barnard, Chicago, and a representative of the Fleischmann Yeast Company.

The afternoon session was closed. Wilkenson and Secretary C. P. Ehlers spoke on a membership campaign. Ray Higgins, Indianapolis, spoke on "Compensation Insurance." I. L. Miller of the State Board of Health spoke on "The Indiana Bakers' Law."

CHICAGO FRIENDS START BOOM FOR GOVERNOR SMITH

New York Executive Is Guest of Democratic 'Love Feast.'

By United Press
CHICAGO, June 13.—An Al Smith for President boom is on among Chicago Democrats today.

The New York Governor, the guest at a dinner given by fifty leading Democrats last night, was toasted as "a type of man the Middle West likes" and "a man we hope to welcome later as a holder of a higher office than that of Governor of New York State."

At Smith's request, speakers made no direct reference to his being a presidential possibility. Between the dinner and in the coat room of the "executive" banquet, however, the topic was about the only one discussed.

Mayor William E. Dever "started the ball rolling" by welcoming Smith as the "type we will always welcome."

"You are the type of man the Middle West likes," said Dever. The men who attended the dinner are powers in the Democratic party. They included William Wrigley, Jr., C. C. Fitzmorris, Robert Upham, James E. Gorman, J. J. Riordan and others. The dinner was given by George E. Getz.

Smith and his party went to French Lick, Ind., for the meeting with Tom Taggart, Indiana Democratic chief, early today. Later the group will be joined by George Brennan, Illinois bourbon "boss."

"NO INTERVIEWS, NO POSES"

Al Smith Turns Down Newspapermen
on Arrival at French Lick.

FRENCH LICK, Ind., June 13.—Governor Al Smith of New York arrived here today for a ten-day vacation.

"No interviews, no posing for pictures," snapped the Governor as he walked up to the hotel. "I'm on my vacation. If you can snap the picture, all right, but I'm not going to stop."

To those who know the Governor this is an unusual attitude. He usually grants any reasonable requests made by a newspaper man, but this morning there was nothing doing.

He just turned them down cold, flat and hard. The Governor flatly refused to discuss his stay in Chicago or his conversation with political leaders while there.

LEADER OF WETS IN ILLINOIS ELATED OVER SENATE VOTE

Upper Branch of House Dry,
but O'Grady Sees Victory for Bill.

By United Press
SPRINGFIELD, Ill., June 13.—In spite of the vote in the Senate last night which showed the upper branch of the Legislature dry by an overwhelming majority, Representative O'Grady was ready today to call his bill repealing dry laws of the State for second reading in the House at the first opportunity.

Elated over his victory yesterday in getting the bill on the calendar, he has hopes that it may pass the House.

He and other wets point out the Marks bill in the Senate, which received only thirteen votes last night, is a straight repealer of the search and seizure act, while the O'Grady bill carries a referendum clause.

Dry leaders, however, only smile and point to the fact that every vote taken in both the House and Senate, with the one exception of the vote yesterday on placing the O'Grady bill on the calendar, has been dry and they declare the O'Grady bill has absolutely no chance.

Fall Boosts President in Newspapers

By United Press
LONDON, June 13.—Albert Fall, ex-Senator from New Mexico who recently resigned as Secretary of the Interior gave President Harding a boost in an interview published by "The Evening Standard" Tuesday.

Declaring Harding is "a splendid character," he added:

"On the question of prohibition, for instance, although the President likes to drink as much as I do, he is quite prepared to stand a fall by the enforcement of prohibition simply on the ground that it is the law of the country and must be enforced at all costs."

Europe Watching Sofia With 'Dinner-Plate' Eyes as Balkan Nation Revolution May Embroil Others in Conflict.

By WILLIAM PHILLIP SIMMS,
Times Staff Correspondent.

WASHINGTON, June 13.—A fight between a Prussianized king and a bull-necked farmer over the American principle of majority rule. That is what is now going on in Bulgaria.

This fight may lead anywhere, to civil war in Bulgaria, to a new Balkan war, or all Europe may be engaged. Which is why Europe is now watching Sofia with dinner-plate eyes. King Boris, III, has behind him only 15 per cent of the population. These are army officers and the upper classes.

Farmer Stamboulsky has 85 per cent with him. The farmers, if the king wins Bulgaria, will make trouble in Europe as soon as the army thinks it can get away with it. They want the Deceuzla from Rumania and an outlet on the Aegean Sea from Greece.

Boris May Lose Crown
If the farmer wins, Bulgaria will carry on as before. Only Boris may lose his crown if not his head.

If the king sticks, it will be significant, the first one allowed to be put back in the saddle a pro-German, war-time coteler of politicians.

Stamboulsky, then agrarian leader, bluntly told King Ferdinand, when the latter joined in the war with the Kaiser, "You will pay for this with your head."

"Look to your own head," replied the king. Stamboulsky was sentenced to death, but his sentence was commuted to life imprisonment. When

Sensation Sprung in Richard Croker Will Case Being Heard at Dublin.

By United Press
DUBLIN, June 13.—A sensation sprang out of the Richard Croker will case Tuesday when Richard E. Davis of Northampton, Mass., positively identified Bula Croker, widow of the Tammany chief, as having lived with Guy B. Marone as man and wife at the Davis home in 1911-12.

Mrs. Davis testified similarly. Bula Croker, Indian princess, is charged by her step-children with having been already married to Marone when she wed the Tammany chieftain. She has consistently denied the charge, producing witnesses who testified she was living in Oklahoma at the time the alleged marriage with Marone occurred. Davis, who stated he was a plumbing contractor, testified Marone sought a room for himself in 1907, and in September 1911 introduced Bula as his wife.

Davis said he had seen "Mrs. Marone" many times in 1912, but did not see her after the summer of 1912 until she had taken the name of Mrs. Croker.

"I saw her in Dublin this afternoon sitting in an automobile on Grafton St.," he said.

"Had you a good look at her?" asked the counsel.

"I had four or five good looks," Davis said.

Mrs. Davis corroborated him, saying "I positively say that Mrs. Croker is the lady I knew as Mrs. Marone."

High Tribunal Is Nearly Two Years Behind on Dockets and Yet No Effort Is Made to Catch Up.

By JOHN CARSON,
Times Staff Correspondent.

WASHINGTON, June 13.—The Supreme Court of the United States is eighteen months to two years behind its work.

But the Supreme Court has just taken its annual vacation of four months. Not until October will the court do anything much toward cleaning up the dockets.

This is precedent again, to a great extent, and precedent is the greatest of all things with the court.

Originally, each member of the court was assigned to a circuit. He still is assigned, but that means little. The idea some years ago was that each member should visit his circuit during the summer months and should sit in on cases.

Practice Abandoned
When cases were advanced to the Supreme Court, one member of bench was counted on to be familiar with the facts. But the practice, it was held, made of this member an advocate for the decision of the lower court and the practice was abandoned.

Then the four summer months became a period for vacation and the Supreme Court takes its vacation.

The vacation does not explain entirely, however, the tardiness of the court. To some extent, students of the court's work agree that work has grown so as to make it difficult if not impossible for the court to keep up. Then the court has arrogated to itself so much jurisdiction—for instance, the authority to interpret the Constitution and declare laws constitutional or unconstitutional—that it is responsible for increasing its work.

The routine of the court provides for four hours of court session on five days each week. Usually, on Monday the court reads its opinions.

Goes to Work at Noon
On Tuesday, Wednesday, Thursday and Friday, the court goes to work at noon. Arguments are heard for two hours and then a recess of thirty minutes is taken. Then the court day for two more hours or until 4:30 o'clock. Promptly at that hour and regardless of anything, the court adjourns. If an argument is within five minutes of being completed, the adjournment is taken and the argument resumed the next day for the five minutes.

On Saturday, the court confers on opinions written by its members.

About every three weeks, the court takes a recess from hearing arguments and devotes itself to writing opinions.

To say that the court members work only four and one-half hours each day is hardly correct, however. It is true that justices do some work at their homes. But the court is not compelled to work more than four and one-half hours each day of eight months in the year. Then the court takes a vacation of four months. And the court docket is two years behind.

MAJESTIC PASSENGERS LOVE HEAVY BOOZE RATION

Agree to Drink 300 Bottles Beer, 2,700 Bottles Wine 2,400
Bottles Whisky, 48 of L. Liquors En Route to U. S.

By United Press
LONDON, June 13.—The S. S. Majestic, sailing today will carry the following liquor:

300 bottles of beer and stout.
2,700 bottles of wine.
2,400 bottles of whisky.

Passenger and crew who filled out the "Booze Ration Cards" have promised to drink it all in the five-day voyage before the fateful three-mile limit is reached. Unless they average a quart a day for every man woman and child aboard the balance will have to be dumped into the sea outside the territorial waters of America.

The total of hooch slightly exceeds the requirements listed by the passengers in advance, and is about four-fifths of the stock carried on the ship's last voyage.

Applications ranged from the seaman who ordered forty bottles of beer to a plutocrat who felt that his five-day liquor capacity amounted to twelve bottles of champagne with some slugs of Vermouth, gin, whiskey and benedictine thrown in as bracers.

JEFFERSON SAYS FESLER UNLOADED AUDITOR'S DUTIES

Township Assessor Replies to Criticism by State
Accountants.

County Auditor Leo K. Fesler "unloaded part of his work" on Center Township Assessor M. L. Jefferson, "and then raised a squawk because my expenses are large," declared Jefferson today.

His statement followed publication of a report of field examiners of the State board of accounts, in which it is said expenses of the township assessor's office were "appalling."

An investigation of the office, made on request of Fesler, showed that 4,700 names were omitted from poll and property assessment rolls from Jan. 1, 1921 to May 31, 1923, according to the report.

Says Work Is Shifted
"Under the law Fesler is supposed to handle this work that I handle; mortgage exemption records, transfers, soldiers and soldiers' widows' exemptions and the report of the State tax board, which taxes railroads, public utilities and many corporations and which is supposed to be certified to the auditor," said Jefferson.

Jefferson admitted that he probably had a few inefficient deputies on his roll, as the 150 taken on each spring are political workers, he said.

"It is physically impossible to run this office on the same basis as rural townships," Jefferson said. "We handle nearly $600,000,000 worth of property assessments each year, and it is steadily increasing. Of course we can't cut expenses 40 per cent."

Office Expense $68,934
Attention was called by the report to the fact that Jefferson's office cost $68,934 for 1922, while the auditor's deputy hire cost less than $10,000.

"Say, my office does six times the work each year that the auditor's does," declared Jefferson. "And in that $68,934 my little salary of $3,750 was included, while Fesler's $10,000 was not mentioned."

"Those fellows omitted from poll taxes were roomers at boarding houses, mostly drifters."

"That $106,365 collected on omitted property was the bulk of it, the result of the loving taxpayer forgetting that he held a mortgage on somebody and trying to 'get by' which we caught in the recorder's office."
