Quota for Fiscal Year More Than Filled and Officials at Ellis Island Labor to Pass Foreigners Seeking Admission to U. S.

By United Press
ELLIS ISLAND, N. Y., July 2.—The lid of the melting pot was opened today to the greatest rush of immigration since new restrictions went into effect two years ago.

Dawn found a staff of officials which had labored throughout Sunday once more at work, passing the first of the 2,500 immigrants who are expected to gain admission to the United States today. Two thousand and seventy-four, first of the human cargoes dumped here by a dozen trans-Atlantic liners the moment the new immigration year began, were admitted Sunday.

The rush of foreigners seeking homes here, lured for the most part, according to their stories, by high wages—such as the $12 a day paid to bricklayers—is expected to be over by Tuesday afternoon, when the largest number of immigrants that ever has sought admission at one time will have been passed.
