Martha Lee Says

Ancient Institutions Survive Much Scorn

Nothing is safe from the scorn of those who would appear particularly worldly and ultra-modern—and who frequently seem only ridiculous. They laugh at even the most sacred institutions—marriage, the Bible. But the institutions survive.

The scorners are not sincere. They wish to be "smart." As they grow older, the majority of these scorners throw off their cloak of pretense and frequently become the most staid citizens.

When their children, reaching the age of "smartness," laugh at anything which hints of being "old-fashioned," they are just as much shocked as their parents before them.

Bible Called Old Fashioned

My Dear Martha Lee: I am almost 18 years old and am in love; there is no question about it. I have known this boy almost three years. He seems to like me more than other girls, but he has not taken me anywhere for a long time. He kisses me and I don't see why he shouldn't. We've known each other so long. Other boys ask to take me places, but I hate every boy except him, and I am getting disgusted with him. They have such silly viewpoints. Do you think it is fair for him to kiss me and then never to take me places? I'm not thinking of getting married for six or seven years. I think it foolish to marry so young, and so does my steady.

2. What would you think of a boy who said the Bible was old-fashioned, but I am old-fashioned (more than one has told me that) and that it is all right for girls to say "boys for dates"? Why do boys prefer girls much older than they?

Don't think I should ever said these things to me. He has more sense and that is why he is the only one who would love me.

1. Try saving your kisses, and not giving this one boy all of your time. You show him he is "the only one who counts," and you are too young for that. You will find there are other boys who are not "ridiculous." Of course, don't go with those you dislike but don't let one monopolize you.

2. The boy is "showing off." There may be a few boys who honestly like girls to make "dates," but boys are rather young to marry. I should went from the hall to the sitting room, to find that neither Mrs. Prescott nor Priscilla were there.

I have never encountered in my life. Mrs. Prescott's bedroom is directly off the living room and I went to the door which I noticed had been left ajar. I rapped with such violence that it opened fully and disclosed the two women standing in the middle of the room.

"Come and meet my childhood friend, Karl Whitney. Karl, I want you to know Mrs. Prescott."

"Are you sure, Mrs. Prescott, that you are able to meet visitors," spoke up Priscilla Bradford.

At that I saw red. "Please allow Mrs. Prescott to be her own judge. Miss Bradford, as to whether she will deliberately insult her son's wife or follow the nasty backbiting, suspicious program that you have laid out for her ever since my marriage."

"Leslie, Leslie, what do you mean?" said Mrs. Prescott, her eyes flashing. "I mean exactly what I say. This woman has always wanted to marry your son and she has spied upon me ever since I was married. She has turned my most innocent acts into something sinister in your mind."

"Did John show you my last letter?"

"No, he did not, but I know her well enough to know exactly what she was doing. Either she leaves this house tonight or I leave it."

"Karl, is your car at the door?"

Poor Karl! It took all my anger away to see his face. I knew that he was wishing with all his heart that he had never come to see me.
